231. Platelayer on railway trolley—Pigs straying on railway—Duty of company to fence.]—Pltf., a platelayer in the employment of a railway co., was returning from his work along their line upon a trolley propelled by hand, when deft.'s pigs got through the fence of his field, which adjoined the railway, on to the line in front of the trolley; the trolley ran over the pigs & was upset, & pltf. was injured. Deft. was owner of the adjoining land; the fence erected by the co. under Railways Clauses (Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 68, was sufficient against horses, oxen, & sheep, but there was enough space between the lowest rail of the fence & the ground for pigs to crawl through, & deft.'s pigs had in fact (as the jury found) crawled under the fence. There was evidence to show that deft. had been warned on a former occasion of his pigs being on the line, but there was no evidence to show how the pigs got from deft.'s farmyard, where they were last seen, into the field adjoining the railway. In an action against deft. for the injury sustained by pltf.:—Held: (1) the word "cattle" in the above sect. included pigs, & the fence was insufficient; (2) assuming there was negligence in deft., pltf. could not recover, for he was identified with the co. whose line he was using for their purposes, & through whose neglect to erect & maintain a sufficient fence the accident was caused.—CHILD (CHILDS) v. HEARN (1874), L. R. 9 Ex. 176; 43 L. J. Ex. 100; 22 W. R. 864.

232. Spectator in sale yard—Horse exhibited for sale—Negligence of groom.]—Deft. was the proprietor of a yard & premises used for the sale of horses. Pltf. attended a sale & was walking up the yard behind a row of spectators who were watching a horse then on sale. In order to show the horse's pace, a servant of deft. led it with a halter down a lane formed by the spectators on one side & a blank wall on the other. There was no barrier between the horse & the spectators, & when the horse was about ten yards from pltf. another servant of deft. struck it with a whip in order to make it trot. On being struck the horse swerved into & through the crowd, & kicked & injured pltf. It was a usual thing for a man to be stationed with a whip at the particular point when horses were brought out for sale. There was no evidence as to the kind of blow that was given nor the character of the horse nor how it was being led, nor that it was customary to put a barrier for the protection of the public in yards where horses were being sold. Pltf. sued deft. to recover damages for injuries caused by the negligence of deft.'s servant:—Held: there was no evidence upon which the jury could reasonably find negligence on the part of deft.—ABBOTT v. FREEMAN (1876), 35 L. T. 783, C. A.

233. ——— Negligence of auctioneer.]—Deft. employed an auctioneer to hold a sale of horses in deft.'s yard, & pltf. attended the sale & was kicked by one of the horses. Pltf. alleged that this was due to the negligence of the auctioneer in running the horses up & down in too narrow a space. There was no evidence of such unsuitability of the premises as might have made deft. liable:—Held: deft. was not responsible for the negligence (if any) of the auctioneer, as he was not deft.'s servant.—WALKER v. CRABB (1916), 33 T. L. R. 119.

234. Guest in private yard—Runaway horse

entering premises.]—Deft.'s horse, by the negligence of deft.'s servant, ran away with a cart, & turned from a highway into the yard of deft.'s house, which opened on to the highway. Pltf.'s wife, who happened to be paying a visit at deft.'s house, ran out into the yard to see what was the matter when she was met & knocked down by the horse & cart, receiving serious injuries:—Held: in the circumstances there was no duty on the part of deft. to use ordinary care towards pltf.'s wife, & the action was not maintainable.—TOLHAUSEN v. DAVIES (1888), 58 L. J. Q. B. 98; 5 T. L. R. 18, C. A. Annotations:—*Mentd. Berg v. Rotterdamsche Lloyd (1918), 34 T. L. R. 272.

235. Customer in shop—Cat rearing kittens—Natural propensity.]—Pltf., accompanied by her husband & carrying a pet dog, entered a tea-shop by permission of defts., the proprietors thereof. On the premises was a cat which had kittens. The cat had been shut up in a store room, but had escaped. Pltf. put her dog on the floor. The cat sprung on the dog & bit it. Pltf. picked up the dog & handed it to her husband. The cat sprung on her & bit her arm. Evidence was given that cats rearing kittens are inclined to be savage & in a vicious state, even if gentle otherwise, & that if such a cat smelt the clothing of a person who had been carrying a dog, it might attack that person. In an action for injuries to pltf. & to her dog:—Held: (1) defts. were not liable, either (a) as keepers of an animal feræ naturæ, or of an animal mansuæ naturæ but known to be vicious towards mankind, or (b) as licensors; (2) defts. were not bound to contemplate the injuries as the consequence of keeping the cat.—CLINTON v. LYONS & CO., LTD., [1912] 3 K. B. 198; 81 L. J. K. B. 923; 106 L. T. 988; 28 T. L. R. 462.

236. Workman in employer's yard—Horse brought in by third party—Remoteness of damage—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), s. 6.]—A workman was killed by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment through the kick of a horse belonging, not to W., his employers, but to M. & Co., which had been brought into the employers' yard by M. & Co.'s servant for his employers' own purposes & left unattended. The workman in the course of his employment passed behind the horse & was kicked. The horse was not known to be vicious. The dependants of the workman applied for & were awarded compensation, & it was further held by the ct. judge that M. & Co. were liable to indemnify the employers under the above sect. on the ground that their servant had been guilty of trespass & negligence in bringing & leaving the horse upon the employers' premises:—Held: (1) it was not the natural consequence of bringing a horse, not known to be vicious, upon the employers' premises & leaving it unattended that it should kick a man; (2) the accident was not the natural consequence of the trespass & negligence, & there was no evidence to support the finding of the ct. judge.—BRADLEY v. feræ naturæ.]—Where of pheasants & rabbits bred & kept on lands is not abnormal or out of proportion to the extent of the demesne, & they are not kept in such a way as to deprive them of their character of feræ naturæ, the owner is not liable for damage done by beasts that are feræ naturæ, as lions & tigers, which a man must always keep up at his peril, & beasts that are mansuetæ naturæ, & break through the tameness of their nature, such as oxen & horses. In the latter case an action lies, if the owner has had notice of the quality of the beast: in the former case an action lies without such notice. As to the point of felony, if the owner have notice of the mischievous quality of the ox, etc., & he uses all proper diligence to keep it up, & it happens to break loose, & kills a man, it would be very hard to make the owner guilty of felony. But if through negligence the beast goes abroad, after warning or notice of its condition, it is the opinion of Hale that it is manslaughter in the owner. And if he did purposely let it loose, & wander abroad, with a design to do mischief, though only to fright people & make sport, & it kills a man, it is murder in the owner.—*R. v. He can excuse himself by showing that the escape was owing to pltf.'s default, or, perhaps, that the escape was the consequence of vis major or the act of God. Bull — Natural propensity — To attack other bulls.]—A bull, which was being herded with other cattle by an old man & a boy, broke away from the herd, & after running a distance of about a mile & crossing two streams in spite of efforts by the herd boys to prevent it, attacked another bull, overthrew it & dislocated its hip. On previous occasions deft.'s bull had attacked animals belonging to transport riders, but there was no evidence of knowledge on the part of the owner that the attacking bull was of a savage nature:—Held: (1) the natural propensity of a bull was to attack any strange bull coming into the neighbourhood of its own herd, & it was the duty of the owner of the bull to prevent it from indulging in that natural propensity at the expense of others; (2) the owner having failed in that duty was liable.—LUJOKO v. 243 i. Elephant—Liability of owner & person in possession.]—In India the elephant belongs to a dangerous class of animals, & a person who keeps an animal belonging to a class that is dangerous takes the risk of any damage it may do. The absolute liability of a person for any harm done by his animal independently of any intent or negligence on his part does not depend on the manner or extent to which such animals are employed, but upon the nature of the class to which such animal belongs or the particular kind of mischief committed. Liability for damage done by the bear caused injury to any one, defts. were liable; (2) if pltf. was guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were entitled to a verdict.—WYATT v. ROSHERVILLE GARDENS CO. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 282.

243. Elephant—Natural propensity—Ignorance of owner.]—In an action to recover damages for personal injuries sustained from an elephant exhibited by defts., the jury found that defts. did not know the elephant to be dangerous:—Held: defts. were liable, as the animal did not belong to a class which, according to the experience of mankind, is not dangerous to man, & the owner kept such an animal at his own risk, & his liability for damage done by it was not affected by his ignorance of its dangerous character.—FILBURN v. He stroked one of the zebras, when the animal kicked out, & pltf. fell into the next stall, where another zebra bit his hand:—Held: (1) deft. kept the zebras, which were dangerous animals, at his peril, subject to this, that the person who complained of injury must not have brought the injury on himself; (2) pltf. had done so by entering the stable & stroking the animal; (3) defts. were not liable.—MARLOR v. But if he has no means of knowing the danger, & is not otherwise in fault, he may recover, although the owner has attempted to give notice: therefore, it is no answer to such an action that a printed notice was put up, if it appears that pltf. could not read.—*SARCH v. 263. Ferocious dog—Risks of service.—Pltf. was employed by deft. as a dressmaker. It was no part of her duty to go down into the kitchen, but on one occasion she went down there at the request of deft. to fetch something up. As she was leaving the kitchen a savage dog, which was generally tied up, rushed from under the table & bit her leg. Pltf. was aware that a dog of this kind was kept on the premises. The ct. judge nonsuited pltf. on the ground that as pltf. was a servant, & knew the disposition of the dog, no action was maintainable:—Held: (1) this was a case of a savage dog known to be vicious, & which had before bitten persons, being suffered to be at large; (2) the nonsuit was wrong, as the risk was not incidental to the service, & there was evidence to go to the jury of the liability of deft. for the injury sustained by pltf. through the former's negligence.—*MANSFIELD v. It was pltf.'s duty to drive the carts & to load & unload the goods which were carried in them. Among the horses was one vicious & unfit to be driven even by a careful driver. Pltf. objected to drive it & told the stable foreman that it was unfit to be driven, to which he replied that pltf. must go on driving it, & if any accident happened, his employer would be responsible. Pltf. continued to drive the horse, & while sitting on his proper place in the cart was kicked by the animal, & his leg was broken:—Held: (1) the horse which injured pltf. was

The other workmen before leaving the bakery warned pltf. of the character of the dog, & that he had better not leave until he was chained up. Pltf. left the bakery & while traversing the yard was bitten by the dog:—Held: as pltf. was engaged in the business of his master & there was no provocation on his part of the dog, he was entitled to damages.—AUPRIX v. LAFLEUR (1880), 15 L. C. J. 251.—CAN.

265 i. What must be averred—Dog worrying sheep.]—A declaration in trespass alleged that deft. wrongfully & injuriously kept a dog, well knowing that the dog was accustomed to hunt, chase, bite, worry, & kill sheep & lambs, which dog did hunt, chase, bite, & worry divers of pltf.'s sheep & lambs, by means whereof divers of them died:—Held: the declaration was good, although it did not in direct terms aver that the dog was vicious.

A declaration averred that deft. was possessed of a dog which was very fierce, wild, & savage, & that he had the care, government, management, & direction of the dog, yet so badly, negligently, & carelessly managed & conducted himself in that behalf, & so badly, etc., managed the dog, & took so little care of it, that for want of due care & conduct, & through his mere default & negligence, & for no other cause whatsoever, the dog did hunt, bite, & worry divers sheep & lambs of pltf., by means whereof divers of them died:—Held: a dog not being an animal feræ naturæ, the declaration was bad for want of a scienter.—KELLY v. WADE (1848), 12 L. L. R. 424.—IR.

265 ii. —.]—Semble: in an action under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 100, s. 1, it is necessary for pursuer to aver fault on the part of the owner of the dog.—MURRAY v. BROWN & PORTEOUS (1881), 19 Sc. L. R. 253.—SCOT.

269 i. — Dog biting—Dog Act, 1884, s. 20.—In an action at common law in the Supreme Ct. to recover damages in respect of injuries inflicted by a dog, it is still necessary to allege scienter, the above sect. applying only to proceedings before justices for a penalty, or to recover compensation for the actual damage done.—LANE v. CASEY (1886), 12 V. L. R. 380.—AUS.

q. — Vicious dog—Disturbance of right of way.—In an action for disturbance of a right of way, the plaintiff stated that "deft. wrongfully & injuriously kept & continued to keep a certain vicious & dangerous dog upon his lands & close to the way, so that pltf. & his family, etc., could not safely or securely, or without dread or apprehension, pass or repass along such way, whereby pltf. was greatly disturbed in the use of same":—Held: bad, for not averring that deft. knew that the dog

& that they had frequently attacked men. Semble: an averment that the dogs were of a ferocious & mischievous disposition would be sufficient in an action brought for an injury to pltf.'s sheep, without alleging specifically that they were accustomed to bite & worry sheep.—HARTLEY v. HARRIMAN (1818), 1 B. & Ald. 620; 106 E. R. 228.

267. —.]—In case for injury done to pltf.'s sheep by a ferocious dog kept by deft., he knowing it to be of ferocious & mischievous disposition, "not guilty," puts in issue the ferocity of the dog & the scienter, those matters forming the substance of the charge. The allegation of duty in deft. to use due & reasonable care & precaution in keeping the animal is an immaterial allegation.—CARD v. CASE (1848), 5 C. B. 622; 17 L. J. C. P. 124; 10 L. T. O. S. 416; 12 Jur. 247; 136 E. R. 1022.

268. —.]—A foxhound belonging to F. went into O.'s field, & worried O.'s sheep. O. sued F. for the damage, but did not aver that the dog was of vicious propensities which were known to F. & that F. negligently allowed it to be at large:—Held: this allegation was essential to the right to recover.

Blame can only attach to the owner of a dog when, after having ascertained that the animal has propensities not generally belonging to his race, he omits to take proper precautions to protect the public against the ill consequences of those anomalous habits.—FLEEMING v. ORR (1855), 2 Macq. 14; 25 L. T. O. S. 73; 19 J. P. 277, H. L.

269. — Dog biting men—Meaning of "knowingly."—Declaration that deft. did knowingly retain & keep a bitch accustomed to bite men:—Held: "knowingly" ought to be referred to deft.'s knowledge of the dog's habit of biting, & not merely was of a vicious & mischievous nature, or that he kept it upon the way or in such circumstances as to cause reasonable danger or apprehension in the user of the way.—GRAINGER v. FINLAY (1858), 7 I. C. L. R. 417; 3 Ir. Jur. N. S. 175.—IR.

r. — Vicious horse.—A summons & plaint averred that deft. was possessed of a vicious horse knowing it to be vicious, & knowing that by reason of its viciousness it could not be ridden along a public highway without great danger, & that deft. negligently, by his servant, rode the horse, whereby the horse kicked:—Held: bad for duplicity, as there were therein contained two causes of action—namely, the riding of a vicious horse knowing it to be vicious, & negligence.—REDMOND v. CLARKE (1870), 4 C. L. 316; 4 I. L. T. Jo. 475.

s. — At large.—Declaration that deft. was possessed of a wild, vicious, & mischievous horse, & it was unsafe & improper to permit the horse to go or run at large on any public highway, yet deft. wrongfully & negligently permitted & suffered the horse, so being vicious, etc., to go at large on the public highway, where pltf. then lawfully was, whereby the horse ran at & jumped upon pltf., & broke his leg:—Held: bad, for knowledge of the animal's nature was not averred, & the allowing it to be at large on the highway was not a breach of any duty due from deft. to pltf.—CHASE v. McDONALD (1875), 25 O. P. 129.—CAN.

t. — Cow injuring horse.—In an action of trespass for an injury to pltf.'s horse by deft.'s cow:—Held: the declaration was bad for not alleging negligence or knowledge of vice.—

to the retaining & keeping it, otherwise the word would be surplusage.—CROPPER v. MATTHEWS (1659), 2 Sid. 127; 82 E. R. 1293.

270. — Horse biting mare.]—A declaration for keeping deft.'s horse so negligently that it broke pltf.'s close & bit his mares must allege a scienter.—SCETCHET v. ELTHAM (1681), 1 Freem. K. B. 534; 89 E. R. 400.

271. — Bull running at men.]—Pltf. declared that deft. kept a bull that used to run at men, but did not say sciens or scienter, etc.:—Held: ill after verdict, for the action would not lie unless the owner knew of this quality, & it could not be intended this was proved at the trial, for pltf. need not prove more than was in his declaration, & judgment for pltf. arrested.—BUXENTINE v. SHARP (1696), 3 Salk. 12; 91 E. R. 661; sub nom. BAYNTINE v. SHARP, 1 Lut. 90.

272. — Boar biting mare.]—If a man keeps an animal after it has within his knowledge done any mischief, if it afterwards does any other mischief though of a different kind, an action will lie against him. In such action pltf. ought to state the particular mischief the animal had done before. But if he merely states that deft. kept a boar (or other animal, not by nature used to bite any other animal) which he knew was accustomed to bite animals, no objection can be taken after verdict.—JENKINS v. TURNER (1696), 1 Ld. Raym. 109; 2 Salk. 662; 91 E. R. 969.

273. — Ram butting men.]—A declaration in case stated that deft. wrongfully & injuriously kept a ram, well knowing that it was prone & accustomed to attack, butt, & injure mankind, & that the ram, while deft. so kept same, attacked, butted, & threw down, & thereby hurt pltf. On motion in arrest of judgment:—Held: the declaration was sufficient, without averring that deft. negligently kept the ram.

w. What must be proved—Dog biting—Dog Act, 1884, No. 809, s. 20.]—In an action at common law in the Supreme Ct. to recover damages in respect of injuries inflicted by a dog, it is still necessary to prove scienter, the above sect. applying only to proceedings before justices for a penalty, or to recover compensation for the actual damage done.—LANE v. CASEY (1886), 12 V. L. R. 380.—AUS.

x. — Dog biting child.]—In an action for damages caused to an infant by the bite of a dog:—Held: it was not incumbent on pltf. to prove the dog was a vicious dog.—HADKS v. EDMUNDSON (1901), 21 C. L. T. 441.—CAN.

y. —.]—A dog tied up to a wall of an auction mart bit a child who was passing:—Held: to render the owner liable it was not necessary to prove that the dog ever bit any person before, but it was enough to show that the owner had some reason to believe the animal might do mischief in the circumstances in which it was placed.—RENWICK v. VON ROTBERG (1875), 2 R. 855.—SCOT.

z. —.]—Action to recover damages for the death of a child, bitten by a dog belonging to defender. Pursuer averred that the child died from shock in consequence of the injuries inflicted by the dog, & that the dog was known to defender to be vicious & to have bitten & attacked other persons on previous occasions, two instances being specified. The sheriff having allowed pursuer to amend his record by adding the averment that the child's death was caused by "shock or cerebral meningitis," & found that it was known to defender that the dog had bitten children on two previous occasions, & awarded damages:—Held: (1) the sheriff was right in allowing the amendment of the record; (2) it was not necessary for pursuer to prove that the dog was a vicious animal.—M'DONALD v. SMELLIE (1903), 11 S. L. T. 140; 2 F. 955; 40 Sc. L. R. 702.—SCOT.

a. — Dog worrying sheep.]—Semble: in an action under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 100, s. 1, it is necessary for pursuer to prove fault on the part of the owner of the dog.—MURRAY v. BROWN & PORTEOUS (1881), 19 Sc. L. R. 253.—SCOT.

b. — Dog injuring cyclist.]—A dog belonging to defender, or for which he was responsible, having come suddenly from behind defender's wagonette, which it was accompanying, passed in front of pursuer, who was cycling past the wagonette, causing her to fall, receiving injury. Pursuer failed to prove that the dog was vicious, but there was evidence that it was frolicsome, being about ten months old, though it had not thereby ever before caused any trouble:—Held: there being no scientia of evil propensity defender

There is no distinction between the case of an animal which breaks through the tameness of its nature & is fierce & known by the owner to be so, & one which is feræ naturæ (ALDERSON, B.).—JACKSON v. SMITHSON (1846), 15 M. & W. 563; 4 Dow. & L. 45; 15 L. J. Ex. 311; 7 L. T. O. S. 231; 153 E. R. 973.

274. What must be proved—Dog doing mischief.]—An action will not lie against a man for mischief done by his dog, unless he knew that it had done mischief before or was of a mischievous nature, though the dog was a mongrel mastiff & permitted to go at large without a muzzle.—MASON v. KEELING (1699), 1 Ld. Raym. 606; 12 Mod. Rep. 332; 91 E. R. 1305.

275. — Horse straying on road kicking child.]—A person lawfully upon the highway, being kicked by a horse which had strayed there, cannot maintain an action against the owner of the horse, there being no evidence of any negligence on his part. Semble: negligence must be affirmatively proved in such a case, the ordinary rule being that the owner of an animal mansuetæ naturæ is not liable for mischief done by it, unless it be shown that the animal had a vicious propensity to commit the mischief complained of & that the owner was aware of it.—COX v. BURBIDGE (1863), 13 C. B. N. S. 430; 1 New Rep. 238; 32 L. J. C. P. 89; 9 Jur. N. S. 970; 11 W. R. 435; 143 E. R. 171.

c. What defendant may prove—Dog biting—Dog Act, 1884, No. 809, s. 20.]—In proceedings before justices under the above sect., to recover compensation for actual damage sustained by being attacked by a dog, evidence tendered by deft. is inadmissible to show that the dog was of a quiet disposition, or that he was ignorant of the mischievous propensity of the animal. Proceedings under the above Act to recover a penalty must be taken by an information, proceedings to recover compensation for actual damage by complaint.—R. v. HARE, Ex p. SCHNEIDER (1888), 14 V. 276. Boar killing mare—Previous injury to a child.]—Deft. knowingly kept a boar accustomed to bite & gash animals, & it struck & killed pltf.'s mare. The evidence was that the boar had previously bitten a child of which deft. had notice. It was moved in arrest of judgment that the word "animals" was too general & that the usage to bite must be the usage to bite same species as that of pltf.'s animal:—Held: judgment must be for pltf.—JENKINS v. TURNER (1896), 1 Ld. Raym. 109; 2 Salk. 662; 91 E. R. 969.

277. Bull attacking man—Admission by owner that red annoyed bull.]—In an action against the owner of a bull for an injury inflicted upon pltf. by the animal whilst it was being driven along a public highway, it appeared that pltf., who was passing along the road, wore a red handkerchief which irritated the animal & caused the attack upon him, & that after the accident deft. had said that the red handkerchief caused the injury as he knew that a bull would run at anything red:—Held: this was evidence to go to the jury in support of the averment in the declaration that deft. had a knowledge of the mischievous propensities of the animal.—

PART III. SECT 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—B. (g).

i. Bull killing mare—Vicious disposition known to owner.]—In an action to recover damages for injuries inflicted upon a mare owned by pltf. by deft.'s bull, the evidence to connect the bull with the injuries inflicted upon the mare was that he was running at large in the neighbourhood, & was of a vicious disposition, & shortly after the mare was injured had blood on one of his horns. There was also evidence that deft. had prior knowledge of the character of the bull:—Held: pltf. entitled to judgment.—ARNOLD v. DIGNON (1887), 20 N. S. R. 303; 8 C. L. T. 448.—CAN.

277 i. Bull attacking man—Admissions & offer of compensation.]—Count in case, for injuries done by deft.'s bull, alleging deft.'s knowledge of the bull's vicious propensity:—Held: the fact that deft. had once admitted that his bull had done the injury, & offered pltf. $10, was properly submitted to the jury as evidence of such knowledge, with a caution as to its weight.—MASON v. MORGAN (1865), 24 U. C. R. 328.—CAN.

277 ii. — Statement by owner's agent as to bull's liveliness.]—Action to recover damages for bodily injuries caused by a bullock. It was proved that deft.'s agent said that "the bullock looked lively coming down, but he thought that he was safe when he was past Stitt's":—Held: this was sufficient evidence that deft. knew the mischievous propensities of the animal.—SUISTED v. CARAHAR, 4 J. R. N. S. 96.—N.Z.

g. Sow killing cow—Previous attacks no fowls.]—In an action for damages for the death of a cow, through its having been attacked & torn by deft.'s sow, evidence was given that the sow had some time previously attacked & killed certain cocks & hens to the knowledge of deft.:—Held: sufficient evidence of scienter.—QUIN v. QUIN (1905), 39 I. L. T. 163.—IR.

h. Dog attacking mare—Statement by owner & offer to settle.]—Trespass for injury done to pltf.'s mare by deft.'s dog. It was proved that the dog rushed into the street, & seized & lacerated the mare, that deft. afterwards said "he was sorry for what had happened, that the dog had slipped out of his yard," & that deft. went to pltf.'s residence to settle the matter, & before declaration filed, lodged £10 in ct., in discharge of the action:—Held: these observations, the conduct of deft., & the transaction itself, were evidence to go to the jury both of the ferocity of the dog & of deft.'s knowledge of it.—SAYERS v. (1848), 12 I. L. R. 434.—IR.

278 i. Dog biting man—Complaints made to person harbouring dog.]—In an action for injuries committed by a dog owned or harboured by V., the defence was that V. did not own the dog, & had no knowledge that he was vicious. The dog was formerly owned by a man in V.'s employ, who lived & kept the dog at V.'s house. When this man went away from the place he left the dog behind with V.'s son, to be kept until sent for, & afterwards the dog lived at the house, going every day to V.'s place of business with him, or his son, who assisted in the business. The savage disposition of the dog on two occasions was sworn to, V. being present at one & his son at the 278. Dog biting man—Previous biting on single occasion.]—To maintain an action for biting by deft.'s dog, it must be proved that he knew his dog to be used to bite, but one instance is sufficient.—ANON. (1701), 12 Mod. Rep. 555; 88 E. R. 1515.

279. — Common report of dog having been bitten by mad dog—Owner keeping dog tied up.]—In an action for keeping a mischievous dog, by which pltf.'s child was bitten, common report of the dog having been bitten before by a mad dog is evidence to go to the jury that deft. knew the dog was mischievous & ought to be confined, particularly if deft., by tying the dog up though insufficiently, showed some knowledge or suspicion of the fact (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—JONES v. PERRY (1796), 2 Esp. 482.

DYSON* (1815), 4 Camp. 198.

281. — Owner warning man to keep away from dog.]—In an action for negligently keeping a dog, proof that deft. had warned a person to beware of the dog lest he should be bitten is evidence to go to a jury of the allegation that the dog was accustomed to bite mankind.—*JUDGE v. 282. — Owner keeping dog tied up—No evidence that dog had previously bitten any one.]—In other. V. swore that he knew nothing about the dog being left by the owner with his son until he heard it at the trial:—Held: there was ample evidence for the jury that V. harboured the dog with knowledge of its vicious propensities.—VAUGHAN v. WOOD (1890), 18 S. C. R. 703.—CAN.

278 ii. — Knowledge of savage disposition.]—It is not necessary in order to sustain an action against a person for keeping a ferocious dog, to show that the animal has actually bitten another person before biting pltf. It is sufficient to show that the dog has, to the knowledge of the owner, evinced a savage disposition.—DORRINGTON v. BOWDEN (1914), 14 E. L. R. 154.—CAN.

278 iii. — Previous biting on single occasion.]—Deft.'s dog was left in a yard to watch the premises, & in charge of the family, during which time V. was bitten by the dog, in presence of deft.'s family. In an action for subsequent biting of pltf. by same dog, the biting of V. was proved, & also the fact that V. had told deft. of it. Deft. offered to prove the account his family had given him of the way in which the dog came to bite V., but the evidence was rejected:—Held: the evidence was properly rejected.—WILMOT v. VANWART (1877), 1 P. & B. 456.—CAN.

278 iv. — — —.]—A dog while in the custody of two persons, not the owners, bit a man on the public road. Both the owners & custodiers were aware that the dog had previously bitten another man, to whom the owner had given solatium:—Held: the custodiers were liable.—COWAN v. DALZIEL (1877), 5 R. 241; 15 Sc. L. R. 151.—SCOT.

an action for keeping a ferocious & mischievous dog, deft. knowing him to be so, it was proved that deft. had a dog usually kept chained up in his yard. Upon pltf. going there, the dog came out with a chain hanging from its neck & bit pltf. There was no evidence that the dog had bitten any one before :—Held : pltf. must be nonsuited, as deft. never knew the dog bite any one before.—HOGAN v. SHARPE (1837), 7 C. & P. 755.

283. — Biting on three previous occasions—Owner's knowledge of one occasion only.—A dog had, in the course of five years, bitten three people at different times, but the owner knew only of the last ; he still permitted the dog to be at large, & a child who went up to it & put its arm round the dog's neck was bitten by it :—Held : the owner was liable. To entail liability on the owner, it is not necessary that the dog should be generally prone to bite.—CHARLWOOD v. GREIG (1851), 3 Car. & Kir. 46 ; 18 L. T. O. S. 186.

284. — Habit of jumping on & seizing men without biting—Production of dog in court.—In an action for knowingly keeping a fierce & mischievous dog, which has bitten or wounded pltf., it is necessary to prove that he has injured pltf. & is used to injure people, & a mere habit of bounding upon & seizing persons, without injury to them, though causing annoyance & trivial damage to clothing, will not sustain the action. In such action the dog may be brought into ct. & shown to the jury to assist them in judging of his temper & disposition.—LINE v. TAYLOR (1862), 3 F. & F. 731.

285. — Savage disposition evinced by attempt to bite.—It is not necessary, in order to sustain an action against a person for negligently keeping a ferocious dog, to show that the animal had actually bitten another person before it bit pltf. ; it is enough to show that it has, to the knowledge of its owner, evinced a savage disposition by attempting to bite.—WORTH v. GILLING (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 1. Annotation :—Refd. Osborne v. Chocqueel, [1896] 2 Q. B. 109.

286. — Attempt to bite boy who fed dog.—A large dog belonging to deft. was kept chained up in a yard, & had flown at the boy who fed it & who afterwards was obliged to take precaution in approaching it. Ten weeks later the dog was one night locked up in the yard, & the next morning, on the gate of the yard being opened, it rushed out, having broken its chain, & escaped, & as he went along bit deceased, who died of hydrophobia. In an action by the widow to recover compensation for the loss of deceased :—Held : pltf. entitled to damages.—WYLDE v. GREGSON (1872), 36 J. P. Jo. 52.

287. — Same man bitten again within half an hour.—Pltf. was employed at a public-house. Deft. came to the house with a dog which flew at pltf. & bit him slightly. Deft. left the house with his dog ; pltf. followed him within half an hour, & the dog, which was then at large & unmuzzled, again flew at pltf. & bit him more severely. The ct. judge held that there was no evidence of scienter, as the bites were so close together as to be virtually on the same occasion, & he nonsuited pltf. :—Held : the judge was wrong, the action being for the second bite, & half an hour having elapsed between the two bites, it was the duty of deft. in the meantime to have properly secured the dog.—PARSONS v. KING (1891), 8 T. L. R. 114.

288. — Previous biting of goat.—In order to support an action for damages for the bite of a dog it is necessary to show that the dog had to deft.'s knowledge bitten or attempted to bite some person before it bit pltf. ; it is not sufficient to show that it had to deft.'s knowledge attacked & bitten a goat.—OSBORNE (OSBORN) v. CHOCQUEEL, [1896] 2 Q. B. 109 ; 65 L. J. Q. B. 534 ; 74 L. T. 786 ; 44 W. R. 575 ; 12 T. L. R. 437 ; 40 Sol. Jo. 532.

289. — Statement by owner that dog disliked strangers.—In an action for damages caused by the bite of deft.'s dog, the only evidence as to deft.'s knowledge that the dog was of a ferocious disposition was that, when pltf. had been to deft.'s house on a previous occasion, the dog had been taken from the room by a servant, & that upon deft. being asked for the reason of its removal he told pltf. that the dog did not like strangers. There was evidence on behalf of deft. that the dog was of a peaceable disposition & had never previously bitten any one :—Held : deft. entitled to judgment.—PULLIPS v. PATTERSON (1907), Times, Jan. 16.

290. — Intermittent ferocity against men.—In order to render the owner of a dog liable for a bite by the dog it is not necessary to show that the dog has to the knowledge of its owner actually bitten or attempted to bite anybody. It is sufficient to prove that the dog is to the knowledge of its master ferocious in regard to human beings. Such ferocity may be of an intermittent character, as, for instance, when a bitch has pups.—BARNES v. LUCILLE, LTD. (1907), 96 L. T. 680 ; 23 T. L. R. 393.

291. — Knowledge of owner's servant.—S., on going to a steamboat co.'s premises for his luggage, found the door locked & then went to a gate at the back near to some stables, when a dog sprang upon him & bit him. It was proved that some servants of the co. had previously heard of the dog attacking other persons twice, but it did not appear what the duties of those servants were nor whether they were there to manage the place or the dog on behalf of the co. :—Held : in the circumstances, pltf. was pro-

283 i. — Biting on three previous occasions.—In an affidavit sworn for the purpose of opposing a motion to remit an action for damages for injuries caused by a bite of a dog, pltf. deposed that he was informed, & believed, that at the trial he would be able to produce evidence to the effect that, on three occasions prior to the date of the occurrence complained of, deft.'s dog had, to the knowledge of deft., attacked other individuals, but that pltf. objected to stating the names of his witnesses lest deft. should tamper with them :—Held : pltf.'s affidavit was insufficient to satisfy the ct. that he had a cause of action, especially as the action had been remitted on the ground that pltf. had not alleged scienter, & that the affidavit had been sworn with the object of curing this defect.—DALY v. HAGARTY (1905), 40 I. L. T. 26.—IR.

1. — Previous attempt to bite & habit of jumping on men.—In an action to recover damages from the owner of a dog, which had bitten pltf., the jury found that the dog had attempted to bite B., & deft. had knowledge of this before pltf. was bitten, that the dog had never, before the injury to pltf., evinced a savage disposition, to the knowledge of deft., that the dog was in the habit of jumping upon or against people, & in such acts scratching them, & deft. knew this before pltf. was injured, & that the dog did not do it playfully :—Held : deft. had kept the dog after he had knowledge that he was apt to do injury to mankind, & the verdict for pltf. should stand.—PRICE v. WRIGHT (1899), 35 N. B. R. 26.—CAN.

m. — Biting on subsequent occasions.—In an action of damages for injury caused by the bites of a dog :—Held : pursuer entitled to lead evidence of attacks made by the dog on other persons subsequent to the raising of the action, in order to show that the dog

291 i. — Knowledge of owner's servant.—The scienter of a servant of the mischievous propensities of a dog must be that of a servant specially in charge of the dog.—KENIERY v. LYNCH (1897) 31 I. L. T. 404.—IR.

291 ii. ——Deft.'s dogs, which to the knowledge of his servant having the charge of such dogs were likely to bite people without provocation, were taken by such servant to a public recreation-ground. Pltf., a child of seven years of age, became frightened at the dogs & cried, whereupon the dogs attacked & bit him severely :—Held : deft. liable.—PRAKASH KUMAR MUKERJI v. HARVEY (1909), I. L. Pltf. having been bitten by the dog, & having brought an action for the injuries:—Held: there was evidence of the scienter, since the knowledge of such servant was enough to make deft. liable.—BALDWIN v. 293. ———.]—In an action for damages for the bite of a dog, the jury found (1) that the dog was dangerous to mankind, (2) that deft., a publican, did not know of it, (3) that R., deft.'s brother-in-law employed as his potman, did know it. The answer of the jury to (2) was directed by the judge:—Held: (1) the judge misdirected the jury in directing them as to how they should answer; (2) the real question for decision was whether R. had charge of the dog in such a way as to make his knowledge notice to deft.—CLEVERTON v. UFFERNEL (1887), 3 T. L. R. 509.

294. ——— Complaint to owner's servant—Servant managing business.]—In an action against a publican for knowingly keeping a ferocious dog, a witness deposed that, having been attacked by the dog at a previous time, he complained to the barmen, who were serving deft.'s customers. Another witness also proved that, having been attacked on a different occasion by the dog, he likewise complained to the barmen. At the trial pltf. was nonsuited, on the ground that the foregoing circumstances did not amount to knowledge in deft. of the dog's ferocity:—Held: as complaints had been made to persons who, in deft.'s absence, were managing his business, there was prima facie evidence of knowledge in deft. of the dog's ferocity, & the nonsuit must be set aside.—APPLEBEE v. PERCY (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 647; 43 L. J. C. P. 365; 30 L. T. 785; 38 J. P. 567; 22 W. R. 704.

295. ——— Domestic servant.]—In an action for damages for the bite of a dog, it was proved that previous complaints of the dog's ferocity had been made to a domestic servant of deft., but there was no evidence that these complaints had been communicated to deft. or his wife, who only admitted that they had heard of the dog fighting with other dogs. In an action in the ct. ct. the judge found as a fact that the servant had not communicated the complaints to deft., but that the knowledge of the servant was that of the master, & he gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: (1) there was no evidence of scienter in deft.; (2) the judgment must be set aside.—COLGET v. NORRIS (1886), 2 T. L. R. 471, C. A.

296. ——— Servant not controlling dog nor communicating complaint.]—Evidence of attempts by a dog to bite men, where it is not shown that the servants who saw the occurrences & to whom complaints were made had control over the dog, or that they told their master, would be insufficient. But where complaint has been made to the owner, the case should be left to the jury (COLLINS, J.).—DUNCAN v. CARLETON (1895), 11 T. L. R. 524.

297. ——— Complaint to owner's wife.]—In an action for an injury inflicted by the bite of a dog, in order to establish the scienter it was proved that the wife of deft. occasionally attended to his business, which was carried on upon the premises where he kept the dog, & that a person had gone there, & made a formal complaint to the wife, for the purpose of its being communicated to her husband, of the dog having bitten such person's nephew:—Held: there was evidence of the husband's knowledge of the dog's propensity to bite.—GLADMAN v. JOHNSON (1867), 36 L. J. C. P. 153; 15 L. T. 476; 15 W. R. 313.

kind." The drovers stated that the cattle "would rush any one if they had a chance." One of the drovers, whilst driving them on the road, told a policeman to warn the passers-by, as they had a wild bullock in their charge, & that "it & the others would rush people if they came too close":—Held: this constituted knowledge on the part of deft. of the mischievous propensities of the cattle, & she was liable.—SCOTT v. 304. Horse running away—Horse not reasonably fit to be driven.]—Deft. owned a cabhorse, which he had had for some years, & there was no evidence that it was otherwise than quiet. The horse suddenly ran away & knocked down & injured pltf., who was walking in the street. The jury found that the accident was not caused by the driver's negligence, but that the horse was not reasonably fit to be driven in the public streets. The ct. judge gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: (1) there was no evidence that deft. knew that the horse was dangerous or unfit to be driven, or that there was any negligence on his part in not knowing; (2) the judgment must be set aside.—*VILLIERS v. Interrogatories to ascertain persons bitten.]—In an action brought by pltf. to recover damages in respect of personal injuries occasioned to him through being bitten by a dog belonging to deft., which was alleged by pltf. to have been, to the knowledge of deft., accustomed to bite mankind, an order was made that, if pltf. intended to give evidence of any specific occasion or occasions on which the dog had bitten persons, he should give particulars thereof, & pltf. accordingly gave particulars stating that a person was bitten by deft.'s dog in a certain street in or about June or July, 1908, & another person was bitten by the dog in another street in or about July or Aug., 1908. Deft. thereupon applied for leave to administer interrogatories asking the names of the persons alleged in pltf.'s particulars to have been so bitten:—Held: the interrogatories were inadmissible, on the ground that they were put merely with the object of ascertaining the names of witnesses by whom pltf. proposed to establish his case.—*KNAPP v. #### SUB-SECT. 3.—POSITION OF DOG OWNERS UNDER DOGS ACTS & ORDERS.

307. Dogs Act, 1865 (c. 60), s. 1—"Cattle" included horses.]—The word "cattle" as used in the above sect. included horses.—WRIGHT v. PEARSON (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 582; 10 B. & S. 723; 38 L. J. Q. B. 312; 20 L. T. 849; 33 J. P. 534; 17 W. R. 1099.

308. — Knowledge of owner's infant son.]—Pltf.'s coachman was driving a horse when deft.'s dog without provocation frightened it. The horse ran away & was injured. Deft.'s son, a boy aged eleven, was with the dog at the time & knew it was mischievous, but deft. had not that knowledge:—Held: deft. was liable for the injury to the horse.—ELLIOTT v. LONGDEN (1901), 17 T. L. R. 648.

309. Dogs Act, 1865, s. 2—Innkeeper as "owner."]—An innkeeper is, by virtue of the above sect., deemed to be the owner of a dog living in his hotel & is liable for injuries to cattle caused by it, notwithstanding the dog was at the time of the injuries complained of under the control of a person staying at the hotel, to whose care it had been committed by the real owner.—GARDNER v. HART (1896), 44 W. R. 527; 12 T. L. R. 347; 40 Sol. Jo. 460, D. C.

310. Dogs Act, 1871 (c. 56), s. 2—Powers of justices—To order destruction without giving owner option of keeping dog under proper control.]—Under the above sect. justices may order a dangerous dog to be destroyed without giving the owner the option of keeping it under proper control.—PICKERING v. MARSH (1874), 43 L. J. M. C. 143; 38 J. P. 678; 22 W. R. 798.

311. —.]—Appets. obtained rules nisi for a certiorari to quash two orders that had been made by justices under the above sect., the first order being for the destruction of two dogs & the second imposing a fine for disobedience of the first order. The grounds of the application for certiorari were (1) justices could, under the sect., only make an alternative order either to destroy, or to keep under proper control, the dogs in question; (2) the first order was bad in form, since there was no adjudication that the dogs were not under proper control; (3) the second order was bad, as it wrongly recited the first order:—Held: (1) an order for the destruction of a dangerous dog need not contain an adjudication by justices that the dog was not under proper control, it being sufficient to follow the words of the sect.; (2) by the sect. justices need not give the owner of the dog the option of keeping the animal under proper control before ordering its destruction.—R. v. DYMCK, R. v. MOGER (1901), 49 W. R. 618; 17 T. L. R. 593; 45 Sol. Jo. 597.

312. — — — Scilenter unnecessary.]—Resp. was summoned for not keeping a dangerous dog under control. The complaint was dismissed by justices on the ground that there was no evidence that resp. knew that the dog was dangerous:—Held: they were wrong, as knowledge that the dog was dangerous was not required by the Act.—PARKER v. WALSH (1885), 1 T. L. R. 583.

313. — — — Res judicata.]—Applt. was charged with non-compliance on Aug. 21, 1889, & ten days thereafter, with an order made by justices under the above sect. requiring him to keep a dangerous dog under proper control. No evidence was given to support the charge except as to Aug. 21, & the charge was dismissed on the ground that the offence had not been made out. Subsequently applt. was charged with not keeping the dog under proper control on Aug. 21 simply; this charge was proved & applt. convicted:—Held: as applt. was put in peril & might have been convicted on the first hearing, the matter was res judicata on the second hearing, & the maxim "Nemo bis vexari debet" applied.—RYLEY v. BROWN (1890), 54 J. P. 486; 62 L. T. 458; 17 Cox, C. C. 79.

p. — — — To order dog to be kept under control subject to penalty.]—A person was charged with "an offence" under the above Act, as being the owner of a dog which was dangerous & not kept under proper control, & an order was craved directing him to keep it under proper control. The magistrate convicted the owner of the offence charged, & pronounced the order craved, "under a penalty not exceeding 20s. for every day during which he fails to comply with this order":—Held:

"dangerous" under the above sect. it is not necessary to prove that it is dangerous to man. Evidence that the dog has attacked & worried sheep is admissible to show that it is "dangerous" within the sect.—WILLIAMS v. RICHARDS, [1907] 2 K. B. 88; 76 L. J. K. B. 589; 96 L. T. 644; 71 J. P. 222; 23 T. L. R. 423.

315. ——— To specify manner of control—Refusal of justices to state case—Mandamus or certiorari.]—Justices made an order under the above sect. that a certain dog, being dangerous, "should be kept under proper control & led by a leash by day & chained up by night." On motion to make absolute a rule for a mandamus to the justices to state a case as to whether they had power to specify the manner of control, the ct., considering that the point could have been more conveniently raised by certiorari, discharged the rule.—R. v. OWEN, Ex p. SCOVELL (1907), 72 J. P. 60; 52 Sol. Jo. 132.

316. ——— To order destruction of dog removed from jurisdiction.]—Justices have jurisdiction under the above sect. to make an order that a dog is to be destroyed, where such dog has been moved from within their jurisdiction before the date of the information or complaint, & where there has been no bonâ fide disposal of the dog by its owner.

Applt. was summoned under the above sect. for not keeping a dangerous dog under proper control on Mar. 20. On that day the dog bit a child, & it had previously bitten other persons within the jurisdiction of the ct. After Mar. 20, but before the date of the information, the dog was removed to a place outside the jurisdiction of the justices, but they found as a fact that applt. was the owner of the dog at the date of the offence, & that there had been no bonâ fide disposal of the dog. They convicted applt.:—Held: the conviction was right. Qu.: whether the justices had power to make an order, if the dog were bonâ fide got rid of.

The words "any cts." in the sect. mean any ct. within a reasonable distance (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).

Evidence that a dog is dangerous is not confined to evidence as to its behaviour within the jurisdiction. If the owner of the dog being within the jurisdiction of the justices fails to keep it under proper control, they may make an order even though the dog is out of their jurisdiction (WALTON, J.).—

317. Dogs Act, 1871 (c. 56), s. 8—Control—Evidence.]—Justices made an order that all dogs should be kept under the control of some person or persons. The chief constable gave notice of this order, & that all dogs should be kept under the control of some person, & not allowed to be at large. A dog was found following W.'s children, & it had been seen about W.'s premises a fortnight before, though W. proved he had ordered it to be sent away some months previously. The justices held that W. unlawfully suffered the dog to be at large:—Held: there being some evidence to justify the conviction, the ct. could not interfere.—WREN v. POCOCK (1876), 34 L. T. 697; 40 J. P. 646.

318. ———.]—Whether a dog is under the control of any person, so as to be exempt from a muzzling order under the above Act, is a question of fact, not one of law.—R. v. HUNTINGDON JJ. (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 522; 43 J. P. 767.

319. ———.]—Appct. was summoned for allowing a dog to be in a thoroughfare & not under control in contravention of an order made under the above sect. The dog was at the time neither muzzled nor led, but applt. contended that it was nevertheless under his control. The magistrate having convicted:—Held: in the absence of positive evidence to the contrary, the fact that a dog had neither been muzzled nor led was sufficient to prove that it had not been under proper control; (2) the conviction was right.—Re APPLICATION FOR MANDAMUS, Ex p. HAY (1886), 3 T. L. R. 24.

320. ——— Interest of justices—Notice of order.]—Three justices, who were members of a town council of a borough, & as such had taken an active part in the making of an order under the above Act, sat to hear a complaint of non-observance of the order:—Held: (1) they had no such interest in the subject-matter as to oust their jurisdiction; (2) in the absence of any special provision for the mode of publication of the order, it was enough to show that it had been posted up in five or six places within the borough.—R. v. 321. Muzzling order—Insufficient muzzle—Discretion of justices.]—By a muzzling order of a local the conviction must be quashed, as the procedure for obtaining an order was civil & not criminal, & no offence could be committed until the order had been disobeyed.—WHITE v. MAIN (1897), 24 R. 90; 35 Sc. L. R. 10; 5 S. L. T. 121.—SCOT.

q. Dogs Act, 1906 (c. 32), s. 1—“Injury.”]—Pltf. was driving home two foals along the public road past deft.'s farm, when a young dog belonging to deft. rushed out of deft.'s house & barked at the foals, which broke away from pltf.'s brother, & were not recovered till the next day. Both foals died from injuries received that night:—Held: this was not an "injury" within the above sect. Semble: the above Act does not exclude the defence of contributory negligence.—CAMPBELL v. WILKINSON (1909), 43 I. L. T. 237.—IR.

321 i. Muzzling order—Unmuzzled dog on public road.]—On the hearing of a summons brought against F. under Summary Jurisdiction (Ireland) Act, 1851 (c. 92), s. 10 (7), it appeared that F. had allowed a dog, not a dangerous dog, to be at large on the public road, unmuzzled & without a log of wood fastened to the dog's neck. The magistrate dismissed the summons:—Held: the magistrate was right in his decision, on the grounds (1) the above sub-sect. did not apply to the case of a dog on the public road (CHERRY (C.J. & MOLONY, J.); (2) it applied to dangerous dogs only (MADDEN, J.).—DEVANEY v. FIELD, [1915] 2 I. R. 180.—IR.

s. Dog Act (39 Vict. No. 6), s. 9—Liability of persons other than owner.]—In an action under the above sect. it was proved that two dogs, which had entered pltf.'s land & killed his sheep, had been seen tied up on deft.'s land & that they followed deft. & his wife. Deft. proved that the dogs had been lent by E. to B. for hunting near deft.'s land; that, after the break-up of the hunting party, the dogs were left with B. who remained to fulfil a contract with deft. to scrub his land:—Held: the keeper of a dog was liable to be sued in damages for injuries caused by it, whether kept for his own use or for that of another.—STRACHAN v. MCLEOD (1884) 5 N. S. W. L. R. 191.—AUS.

t. Dog Act, 1890 (No. 1084), s. 20—Authority to lay information.]—In a proceeding under the above sect. to recover a penalty, it was shown that the informant, the person attacked by the dog, had no interest in the penalty, & was not an officer authorised to prosecute by the municipality in which the alleged offence occurred:—Held: the information should have been struck out as being without jurisdiction.—LOFT v. WADE (No. 2) (1898), 24 V. L. R. 216.—AUS.

authority, no dog was allowed to be in any public place unless muzzled with a strong wire muzzle of a kind specified in the order. Two dogs belonging to R. were in a street & were at the time wearing such muzzles, but they nevertheless bit three persons. Upon the hearing of a summons for infringing the order, the facts having been stated to the magistrate, he dismissed the information on the ground that the dogs had been so muzzled as to comply with the order, & in the exercise of his discretion he declined to hear the evidence of complainant. On an application for a rule to the magistrate to show cause why he should not hear & determine the information, the ct. granted a rule upon the ground that, although the magistrate had a discretion, there was evidence that he had exercised it improperly.—*Ex p. 322. Order for control—Stray foxhound puppy.]—The proviso to the Dogs Ord., 1906, art. 1, which allows local authorities to make regulations as to the wearing of collars by dogs, that "this regulation shall not apply to any pack of hounds," applies to a foxhound puppy registered, but not entered as a member of a pack of hounds, & branded in the ear with the letter of the hunt & the number of the litter. Such puppy therefore need not wear a collar on a highway.—BURTON v. ATKINSON (1908), 98 L. T. 748; 72 J. P. 198; 24 T. L. R. 498; 21 Cox, C. C. 575, D. C.

323. ———.]—A regulation made by a local authority in exercise of the powers vested in them under Diseases of Animals Acts, 1894 to 1903 & Dogs Act, 1906 (c. 32), provided that "Every dog shall at the times between one hour after sunset & one hour before sunrise be kept by the owner thereof under control by being (1) confined in a kennel or other inclosure from which it cannot escape, or (2) secured to some premises by a collar & chain. Provided that the foregoing regulation shall not apply to any pack of hounds or any dog under the control of the owner or some other person." A foxhound was found at 12.45 a.m. straying without being under the control of the owner or some other person. Applt. was the person for the time being in charge police authorities, shot several dogs in the streets of a town, including two dogs belonging to applt., one of which had, & the other had not, been duly registered. The only evidence which could have suggested to the constable that the dogs were the property of aboriginals was that he had gone to certain premises in a street in the town, & found two aboriginal women camped there, who, when he asked them as to the ownership of seven dogs there, instead of replying commenced to hunt the dogs away from the camp. Applt. having proceeded against the constable by complaint upon a charge framed under Criminal Code, 1902, s. 438, of having wilfully & unlawfully killed the two dogs:—Held: the shooting of the dogs was unlawful, & the constable ought to have been convicted.—*PERCY v. z. Police Offences Act, 1915 (No. 2708), s. 17 (9)—"Permitting" dog to worry.]—Evidence that deft. had a dog, which he knew was in the habit of worrying poultry, that he let the dog loose, & that it did, without his knowledge, worry a turkey, is not proof of his "permitting" the dog to worry the turkey within the above sub-sect. A turkey is an "animal" within the sub-sect.—TENNANT v. HARRIS (1916), V. L. R. 557.—AUS.

a. Sheep Protection Acts—Recovery of damages under—Procedure.]—The right of action given by R. S. O., 1887 (c. 214), s. 15, to the owner of sheep killed by dogs, is to be prosecuted with the usual procedure of the appropriate forum. If an action be properly brought in the ct. ct., it may be tried before a jury, & where it is so tried, they, & not the judge, should apportion the damages if an apportionment be required.—FOX v. WILLIAMSON (1893), 20 A. R. 610.—CAN.

b. ——— Scienter.]—The owner of sheep killed or injured by a dog can, under R. S. O., 1887 (c. 214), s. 15, recover the damage occasioned thereby without proving that the dog had a propensity to kill or injure sheep; & the Act applies to a case where the dog has been set upon the sheep.—R. v. PERRIN (1888), 16 O. R. 446.—CAN.

d. ——— Jurisdiction of justices.]—Under Sheep Protection Act, R. S. O., 1897 (c. 271), a justice of the peace for A. county ordered deft.'s two dogs, which had injured two sheep, to be destroyed:—Held: the offence under s. 11 was the having in possession a dog which, wherever the act was done, had worried, injured, or destroyed sheep, & the offence was committed at B. town, where deft. lived, & the magistrate had no jurisdiction, there being a police magistrate for the town, & it not appearing that the convicting magistrate was acting for or at the request of such police magistrate.

Upon the same information the same magistrate made an order, under s. 15 of the above Act, for payment by deft. to the owner of the sheep of the value of the sheep & costs:—Held: the magistrate had no power to award damages for the injury to the sheep, without a separate complaint.—R. v. DUERING (1901), 21 C. L. T. 588; 2 O. L. R. 593.—CAN.

f. ——— Wanton act.]—Deft. shot pltf.'s dog while at large. He saw the owner of the dog within call, & the dog was doing no injury, & deft. did not apprehend that he would:—Held: R. S. N. S., 1900 (c. 61), s. 2, as amended by 1908 (c. 63), exonerated deft., but as his act was one of wanton cruelty, costs were refused deft.—FRASER v. SINCLAIR (1900), 8 E. L. R. 3.—CAN.

g. ——— is "at large."]—Action to recover damages against deft. for shooting pltf.'s dog. The defence was that the dog was at large without its owner or other person in charge, & was not licensed or collared as the law directed. n. ———.]—Pltf.'s dog was killed on deft.'s premises, unaccompanied by its owner, but the evidence conflicted as to whether it was killed before or after sundown, or whether it was "found" a half-mile from the premises of its owner. Defts. relied on R. S. O., 1897 (c. 271), s. 9 (c), permitting the killing of any dog found "straying between sunrise & sundown on any farm whereon any sheep & lambs are kept," & on a bye-law of the township permitting the killing of any dog found running at large at a greater distance than one-half mile from the premises of its owner unaccompanied by such owner or a resident ratepayer, as defences to the action:—Held: deft. liable.—MCKNAIR v. COLLINS (1912), 22 O. W. R. 891; 3 O. W. N. 1639; 27 O. L. R. 44; 6 D. L. R. 510.—CAN.

o. Injuries by Dogs Act, 1865, s. 5—Destroying dog worrying sheep.]—Held: the above sect. (see, since, Dog Registration Act, 1880, ss. 14–19), did not extend to the case of a dog captured chasing sheep, locked up for four hours & then shot.—WEBBER v. FINNIMORE, O. B. & F. 150.—N.Z.

p. Dog Registration Act, 1880, s. 13—Destroying dog worrying sheep.]—Under s. 17 of the above Act the right to destroy a dog which has been worrying sheep ceases when the dog desists from such worrying.

of such foxhound, which was registered as one of a pack of hounds of a hunt. He had "walked" it, & it was wearing a collar with the name of the hunt thereon, & in the right ear the letter of the hunt & the number of the litter was marked:—Held: applt. was rightly convicted for a breach of the regulation, as the proviso did not apply to the foxhound in question.—RASDALL v. COLEMAN (1909), 100 L. T. 934; 73 J. P. 377; 25 T. L. R. 638.

Remoteness of damage.]—In an action to recover damages for injuries caused by deft.'s dog, which had bitten pltf.'s mare, causing the mare to kick & injure pltf.'s carriage & harness, the mare also being thrown down & injured, & pltf. also being injured & losing employment:—Held: notwithstanding there was no evidence that deft. knew the dog was savage, pltf. was entitled to recover damages, but only in respect of items of injury to the mare.—COWELL v. MUMFORD (1886), 3 T. L. R. 1.

SUB-SECT. 4.—LIABILITY FOR NUISANCE.

325. Conies—Damage to adjoining crops.]—An action for a nuisance will not lie against a man who has an adjoining warren, for damage done by conies.

Pltf. was seized of certain lands in fee & deft. was seised of other lands adjoining. Deft. made two coney burrows in his lands adjoining & put conies in them, which increased to a great number & went into pltf.'s land & destroyed his corn:—Held: (1) conies were feræ naturæ; (2) the action for nuisance would not lie.—BOWLSTON (BOULSTON) v. HARDY (1597), Moore, K. B. 453; Cro. Eliz. 547; 78 E. R. 794; sub nom. BOULSTON'S CASE, 5 Co. Rep. 104b.

328. Swine—Keeping—Alternative penalties by statute & common law.]—Deft. was indicted for keeping hogs in a back street in a town contra formam statuti. It was moved to quash the indictment on the ground there was a particular statutory penalty for this offence, viz., forfeiture of the swine to the use of the poor of the parish where they were kept:—Held: (1) where a new penalty was appointed by Act of Parliament for a matter that was an offence at common law, there one might either take that remedy which was given by the Act of Parliament, or proceed by way of indictment as before, & the keeping of swine in the city was a nuisance at common law; (2) where the stat. made the offence, there one must pursue that.—*R. v. 329. ——— Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63).]—Deft.'s pigs were kept in a manner which constituted a nuisance & was injurious to the health of the occupiers of the houses in the vicinity of deft.'s premises; the pigs could have been kept without being a nuisance. The justices convicted deft. in the penalty of 40s. & 5s. for every day during which the offence was continued, the grounds of their determination being that keeping swine & pigstyes in the manner set forth in the evidence constituted a nuisance within s. 59 of the above Act, & rendered deft. liable to the penalties therein mentioned:—Held: the conviction was good.—DIGBY v. WEST HAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1858), 22 J. P. 304; 6 W. R. 468.

330. ——— Bye-laws—Validity.]—A bye-law was made by a town council, pursuant to 5 & 6 Will 4, c. 76, s. 90, by which bye-law a fine was imposed on every person who should keep or cause to be kept any swine within the borough. Applt., a butcher, kept swine within the borough in breach of the bye-law & a penalty of 5s. & costs was imposed on him:—Held: the bye-law ought to have been restricted to the keeping of swine so as to be a nuisance, & it was bad.—EVERETT v. GRAPES (1861), 3 L. T. 669; 25 J. P. 644.

331. ——— Whether unreasonable.]—By a bye-law of a local board, duly confirmed by the Secretary of State, the keeping of pigs was forbidden within 100 yards of a dwelling-house; another bye-law ordered certain drainage to be provided wherever pigs were kept. An information was laid against resp. for breach of each of such bye-laws, but the justices refused to convict on the ground that no nuisance was proved & that the bye-laws

w. Horse killed on highway—Failure to remove carcase or notify danger.]—Appls.' mare was killed on a public road at night, & the carcase was removed to the side of the road. The darkness made it impracticable to take the carcase away that night, but applts. arranged that O., who resided within half a mile of the place, should do so next morning. While he was on his way thither about four hours after daylight on the following day the horses in resp.'s coach, which was being driven along the road at the usual hour, shied at the sight of the dead mare & bolted. In an action for negligence:—Held: applts. had knowledge that their dead animal was causing a nuisance on the public road, & they had ample time to remove it, & not having done so were liable. Semble: Police Offences Act, 1908, s. 3 (d), imposed a statutory duty on applts. to remove the body, & the neglect of a duty in respect of a highway gave cause of action to any member of the public who suffered damage thereby.—PERCY BROTHERS v. FLY & YOUNG (1917), N. Z. L. R. 451.—N.Z.

Swine were kept by applt. within the distance of 50 feet from his dwelling-house. Justices imposed a penalty of 10s. & costs:—Held: the bye-law was unreasonable & bad, & the conviction must be quashed.—HEAP v. BURNLEY UNION SANITARY AUTHORITY (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 617; 53 L. M., in course of business, used to sell swine elsewhere in the morning, & bring them within 50 yards, etc., & keep them until the evening, when they were sent off by railway. The justices held that, because the pigs were not fed & kept all night, this could not be a keeping within the bye-law:—Held: they were wrong, & keeping them all night was not necessary to the offence.—STEERS v. Residents within 200 yards of the farmstead having complained of noxious smells alleged to arise from the pigs & their food, an action to restrain a public nuisance was brought, on the relation of the local authority. Witnesses for the defence, some of whom lived on the premises, attributed the smells wholly to defects in the sewer in the street, & experts testified to the careful manner in which, since action brought, the pigs had been kept:—Held: (1) a public nuisance had been created by defts., but had been abated; (2) no injunction, nor leave to apply for one in case of recurrence, should be granted.—A.-G. v. Horses—Glanders—Pleading—Defect cured by verdict.—To bring a horse infected with the glanders into a public place to the danger of infecting the Crown's subjects is a misdemeanour at common law, & an indictment which stated that deft. knew that a mare which he brought into a fair was glandered:—Held: good after verdict, without an averment that deft. knew that the glanders was a disease communicable to man by infection.—R. v. In 1871 a new occupier altered the stable so that the noise of the horses was an annoyance to the next door neighbour, & prevented him from letting his house as lodgings:—Held: the fact of horses having been previously kept in the stable, but so as not to be an annoyance, did not deprive the neighbour of his right to have the nuisance restrained.—BALL v. 339. ————Unreasonable obstruction—Private nuisance.—Pltf. kept a coffee-house in a narrow street near Covent Garden. Defts. carried on an extensive business as auctioneers in same neighbourhood, having an outlet at the rear of their premises next adjoining to pltf.'s house, where they were constantly loading & unloading goods into & from vans. The vans intercepted the light from pltf.'s coffee-shop to such an extent that he was obliged to burn gas nearly all day, & access to the shop was obstructed by the horses standing in front of the door, & the stench arising from their frequent staling there rendered pltf.'s dwelling incommo-dious & uncomfortable:—Held: the evidence disclosed such a direct & substantial private & particular damage to pltf. beyond that suffered by the rest of the public, as to entitle him to maintain an action.—BENJAMIN v. STORR (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 400; 43 L. J. C. P. 162; 30 L. T. 362; 22 W. R. 631.

340. ————Smell from stables—Statutory powers of company.—Defts. were a tramway co., who were empowered by their Act to lay down & construct two lines of tramway according to deposited plans, together with the works & conveniences connected therewith. The Act gave no compulsory powers for taking lands, & made no special mention of building stables. Defts. constructed the lines, & built some large blocks of stables near pltf.'s house for the horses employed in drawing the cars. Pltf. complained of the smell caused by the stables, & brought an action for an injunction to restrain defts. from using the stables so as to cause a nuisance:—Held: although horses were necessary for the working of the tramways, the co. were not justi-

Part IV.—Agistment.

342. Contract of agistment—Not an interest in land—Statute of Frauds.—A verbal contract was made between pltf. & deft., by which it was agreed "that deft. should give £45 for some crops of wheat, barley, & potatoes, growing on pltf.'s land, & the profit of the stubble afterwards, & whatever lay grass was in the field; deft. to harvest the corn & dig the potatoes; pltf. to have liberty for his cattle to run with deft.'s & to pay the tithes:—Held: this was not a contract for the sale of an interest in land, within Stat. Frauds, because, as to the growing crops, these were chattels, & with regard to the grass, the more reasonable view of the intention of the parties appeared to be that it was a contract for the agistment of deft.'s cattle by pltf.—JONES v. 343. No common law duty on agister to make redelivery.—In a declaration on the case, one count stated that pltf., at the request of deft., had caused to be delivered to him certain boars, pigs, etc., to be taken care of by deft. for pltf. for reward to him, deft., & in consideration thereof deft. undertook & then & there agreed with pltf. to take care of the boars, etc., & to redeliver same on request:—Held: the count in alleging that deft. agreed not only to take care of the pigs, but also to redeliver them to pltf., required something to be done beyond the common law duty.—CORBETT (CORBET) v. PACKINGTON (1827), 6 B. & C. 268; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 258; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 142; 108 E. R. 451.

PART IV.

342 i. Contract of agistment—Not an interest in land.—Pltf., an annual lessee of Crown lands, sued to recover money advanced to deft., who had applied for a settlement lease. The money was advanced upon an agreement that if deft. obtained the land as a settlement lease, he would allow pltf. to agist his stock upon it, & that if he was unsuccessful in obtaining the land, he would refund the money advanced by pltf.:—Held: as a right of agistment would give pltf. no interest in the land, appct. if successful would have held the land for his own exclusive benefit, as required by Crown Lands Act, 1893 (No. 18), s. 42.—JEFFREY v. HOLLEY (1906), 6 S. R. N. S. W. 375.—AUS.

342 ii. —.—Deft., by parol agreement with pltf., took a portion of his land for grazing, pltf. undertaking to take charge of deft.'s cattle, & reserving to himself the grazing of a horse:—Held: this was a mere contract for agistment, & the possession of the land did not thereby pass to deft.—MULLIGAN v. ADAMS (1845), 8 I. L. R. 132.—IR.

a. —.—Circumstances creating.—Pltf. sold two horses to deft., who sent them back as not agreeing with an alleged warranty. Pltf. gave him repeated notice to take them again, or that she should charge him for their keep. Pltf. having sued upon common counts for agistment & pasturage, the jury found that the horses belonged to deft.:—Held: pltf. could not recover, for the evidence as to deft.'s conduct, etc., tended to negative any implied request or promise to pay.—HALLIDAY

b. —.—Mortgagor & mortgagee.—Sheep of resps. were mtgd. to appts. Resps. made default, & gave the mtgees. notice to take possession of the sheep, & afterwards gave them notice that they would charge for agistment. The mtgees. gave no answer to those notices, but at a later period they sold the sheep. In an action for the agistment of the sheep after the default & notice to the mtgees. up to the sale:—Held: there was no contract to be implied from the circumstances for the mtgees. to pay the mtgors. for depasturing the sheep after the fault of the latter. Seemle: there might be circumstances in which a wilful or malicious delay by mtgees. in realising their security would give the mtgors. a right of action against them.—WARR v. BUCHANAN (1871), 1 N. Z. L. R. 437.—N.Z.

c. —.—Liability of agister for escaping cattle.—A. let grazing land for the season to B., who put on it a number of cattle, one of which escaped & was lost. A. undertook no express liability for the loss of any of the animals:—Held: in the absence of agreement, there was no law or usage by which A. could be rendered liable for the loss.—THOMPSON v. COOK (1880), 6 Nfld. L. R. 203.—NFLD.

344 i. Agister liable to owner for negligence.—Pltf.'s mare, while in charge of deft. under a contract of agistment, was killed through falling through the plank covering of a well in deft.'s yard, the existence of which was known to deft. but not to pltf., & to which yard the mare, with other horses of deft., had access from a field in which they were at pasture:—Held: pltf. had given sufficient prima facie evidence of negligence to cast the onus on deft., & non-suit set aside.—PEARCE v. SHEPPARD (1893), 24 O. R. 167.—CAN.

344 iii. —.—A horse was drowned in a pond or quagmire existing, to pltf.'s knowledge, on the pasture ground, & the sole imprudence charged against deft. was not having fenced around it, it appearing that such places were not usually fenced:—Held: as an agister engages, by his contract to pasture cattle, to exercise ordinary care & prudence in the keeping of them, he was not liable for the loss.—McKEAGE v. POPE (1896), O. R. 10 S. C. 459.—CAN.

344 iv. —.—Although one who takes animals to pasture them should give them the care of a "bon père de famille," the extent of this obligation is, nevertheless, dependent on the price paid for such pasturage, & the custom of the locality. It is unreasonable to expect that for a moderate price a man should watch the animals constantly; & if one of them disappears, it is the owner who should bear the loss—at least, unless he

345. — Doctrine of scienter not applied.]—Deft., an agister of cattle, placed pltf.'s horse in a field with a number of heifers, knowing that a bull, kept on adjoining land, had several times been found in the field, & that there was no sufficient fence to keep it out. He did not, however, know that the bull was of a mischievous disposition. The horse was gored by the bull & killed, & in an action against deft. for breach of contract to take reasonable care, the jury found for pltf.:—Held: the fact that deft. had no knowledge of the mischievous disposition of the particular bull was no ground for disturbing the verdict, as such knowledge was not essential to his liability under his contract as an agister to take reasonable care of pltf.'s horse.—SMITH v. COOK (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 79; 45 L. J. Q. B. 122; 33 L. T. 722; 40 J. P. 247; 24 W. R. 206.

346. — Damage caused by act of third party—Remoteness of damage.]—Deft. owned a field in which he took horses in for agistment. This field was separated from another, let to a cricket club, by a wire fence, & there was a gate between the two fields. Pltf. delivered a mare to deft. for agistment. Deft.'s servant negligently, as it was alleged, left the gate open, & the mare strayed into the cricket field. The cricketers tried to drive her back through the gate, using proper care & precaution, but she ran against the wire fence & sustained injuries:—Held: upon a question as to remoteness of damage, deft. was liable, as the natural consequence of the gate being left open was injury to the mare.—HALESTRAP v. GREGORY, [1895] 1 Q. B. 561; 64 L. J. Q. B. 415; 72 L. T. 292; 43 W. R. 507; 15 R. 306.

347. — Owner's remedy in tort.]—Pltf. delivered a horse to defts. to be agisted in consideration of a daily payment, & defts negligently turned the horse into a field in which there was a barbed wire fence covered with long grass, whereby the horse was injured. In an action to recover damages the jury found a verdict for pltf. for £30:—Held: as the negligence relied upon was a breach of the common law duty arising out of the bailment, the action was founded on tort within Cty. Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116, & pltf. was entitled to costs upon the

344 vii. — Failure to discover subsidence.]—A farmer took in a horse to graze for hire in one of his fields, which was over old mineral workings, & failed, through not having examined the field, to discover that there was in it a subsidence of the ground, through the existence of which an accident happened to the horse & caused its death:—Held: liable.—M'LEAN v. WARNOCK (1883), 10 R. 4052; 20 Sc. L. R. 712.—SCOT.

344 viii. — Effect of exception as to death from disease.]—Deft. agreed to "feed & winter" forty-seven young cattle for pltf. & to be responsible for the loss of any of the cattle through getting lost or killed or any other way, except dying from ordinary disease. While in deft.'s charge twenty-nine of the cattle died. He housed them in a building so low & small that there was not sufficient ventilation, & they were so crowded at night that they became overheated, & were chilled when turned out & contracted colds, which caused their deaths. Deft. was warned by a veterinary surgeon that the building was not large enough:—Held: the above exception from liability could not apply to disease resulting directly from deft.'s own mismanagement.—MCLENAGHAN v. HOOD (1905), 25 C. L. T. Occ. N. 19; 1 W. L. R. 422.—CAN.

344 ix. — Exposure to cold.]—Pltf. delivered to deft., for agistment, a healthy colt, ten months old. The colt died on the night of the same day or early the next morning. Pltf. alleged that it was improper to leave the colt in a shed for the night. There were 5 degrees of frost that night:—Held: accepting expert evidence that 5 degrees of frost would not affect a ten months old colt, there was no negligence on deft.'s part.—*O'CONNOR v. 348. Owner may sue agister in trover—Where agister converts animal to his own use.]—In an action of trover for a horse, evidence was given that pltf. agisted a horse to deft. to grass:—Held: (1) if a man puts his horse to grass, & the other guarantees that he will be answerable if the horse is taken, an action lies, but not otherwise; (2) although he may not have so guaranteed, yet if the bailee has converted the horse to his own use, he is chargeable in an action.—ANON. (1573), Ben. & D. 102 (38); 123 E. During the continuance of the agreement W. became bkpt., & the trustee claimed the stock as being within the reputed ownership of bkpt.:—Held: the custom of agistment was notorious & that being the case, no reputation of ownership could arise in the case of stock upon the lands of a farmer.—Re WOODWARD, Ex p. HUGGINS (1886), 54 L. 367. ——— Bill of sale.]—Bkpt., a farmer, on Nov. 19, 1906, gave appts. a bill of sale for £200 on (inter alia) his cattle, sheep & pigs, but he remained in possession as before. On Dec. 8, 1906, a bkpcy. petition was filed against him, & in Jan. 1907 the goods & stock comprised in the bill of sale were sold. Appls. claimed the proceeds upon the ground that bkpt. was agisting the livestock on their behalf, & that there was a well-known custom apart from agreement for a purchaser at a sale of stock & crops to leave them on the farm in the care of the tenant. The trustee claimed the money as the proceeds of stock of which bkpt. was reputed owner:—Held: appls. were entitled to the proceeds, as the transaction was within the custom of agistment, & it was wholly irrelevant that there was in fact no agistment, & when cattle were found in a place where they might or might not be agisted the presumption of reputed ownership was defeated.—Re JAMES, Ex p. SWANSEA MERCANTILE BANK, LTD. DARLING* (1850), 12 D. 1279; 22 J. 593.—SCOT.

369 i. ——— Negligence.]—A horse, hired by deft. to drive along a road known to pltf. to be in a bad condition, was returned to pltf. with a deep-seated fracture on the hip & had to be destroyed. In an action for damages pltf. called no positive evidence of negligence. Deft. & a witness who had been with him gave evidence to show that while driving without negligence, they came to a bad portion of road, with deep wheel ruts, & while going at about four miles an hour & sometimes at a walk, the horse suddenly went lame as they thought from slipping in a rut, & had to be left some few miles further on. Pltf., in rebuttal, called a veterinary surgeon, who said that the injury to the horse could not have been sustained by a slip such as that described:—Held: the injury was the result of an accident, & judgment entered for deft.—WATTS v. CAMERON (1850), 6 U. C. R. 340.—CAN.

369 iii. ———.]—Deft. hired two horses & a buggy from pltf. Deft. drove the horses down a grade on the trot, & the knobs attaching the braces to the top of the buggy caught in the wheel. On trying to unfasten the top, the top came off with a snap, & the horses bolted & were killed:—Held: the defect in the buggy did not constitute contributory negligence, & the locking being due to trotting the horses down the grade, deft. was liable.—KLASSEN v. WRIGHT (1905), 1 W. L. R. 158.—CAN.

369 iv. ———.]—Defts. hired a team of horses & drove them for about seventy-one miles. When pltfs. got back the horses they were not in as good condition as when deft. received them, being very thin & weak, with bad sores on their shoulders, necks, & backs. Deft. had used the horses occasionally for road work, knees were broken, pltf. must give some positive evidence of negligence; & it is not enough to prove that the animal was returned by deft. with its knees broken, although it had often been let out to hire before without having fallen down.—COOPER v. BARTON (1810), 3 Camp. 5, n.

In such case the party hiring is not liable to the owner for the price agreed on for the journey, nor can he, after such notice, be required to make any compensation for the loss of the animal's services, the owner having neglected to send for the horse for several months.

This is not a case of a bailee, but of a contract in which pltf. impliedly warrants that his horse is fit to do a certain journey. 377. —.—.—.]—Pltf., a cabdriver, obtained from deft., a cab proprietor, a horse & cab upon the terms that the driver on bringing them back at the end of the day should hand over to the proprietor 18s., retaining for himself all the day's earnings over that sum, the day's food for the horse being supplied by the owner, & the latter having no control over the driver after leaving the yard. The horse with which pltf. was furnished, which was fresh from the country & had never before been harnessed to a cab, overturned the cab & injured the driver. 378. —.—.—.]—Injury to bailee's wife.—Male pltf. hired from deft., a livery stable keeper, a landau with a horse & driver for the purpose of taking a drive. His wife accompanied him in the carriage. The horse showed considerable signs of restiveness when meeting motor cars, & when passing a traction engine shied & became unmanageable, & the carriage was upset, & both the husband & wife were injured. In an action by the husband & wife to recover damages for the injuries the jury found that deft. ought to have known, if he had used proper care, that the horse was unsafe to be sent out with the carriage, but that the driver was not negligent. Deft. upon these findings, while admitting liability to the husband, contended that he was not liable to the wife:—Held: (1) as deft. ought to have known of the vicious propensity of the horse, he was in the same position as if he had known, & it was his duty to the wife, whom he must have contemplated would use the carriage, to warn her of the dangerous character of the horse; (2) his duty arose independently of contract, & deft. was liable to the wife; (3) deft. was liable to the wife upon the ground that, as he kept control of the carriage & accepted her as a passenger therein, he was under a duty to use reasonable care to carry her safely & for that purpose to provide a proper horse.—WHITE v. STEADMAN, [1913] 3 K. B. 340; 82 L. J. K. B. 846; 109 L. T. 249; 29 T. L. R. 563.

Annotation:—Expld. Bates v. Batey, [1913] 3 K. B. 351. I do not think that Lush, J. in White v. Steadman can have intended to decide that where a thing not dangerous in itself becomes dangerous through a defect occasioned by breach of contract in its manufacture or delivery, the person handing it over must be held liable to a third party because, although he did not know, he might by the exercise of reasonable care have known its condition; in any case the decision was not a decision with regard to a defect arising from breach of contract, but had reference to a vicious horse (HORRIDGE, J.).

Liability for accident to third party—Whether driver servant of bailor or bailee.—See BAILMENT; MASTER & SERVANT.

379. Contract—Milking of cows.—The declaration stated that pltf. agreed to let, & A. agreed to take, the milking of thirty cows, for the sum of £7 10s. per annum per cow, from Feb. 14, the rent to be paid quarterly in advance, on Feb. 14, May 14, Aug. 14, Nov. 14, & deft. agreed to pay the rent at the times therein mentioned. Pltf. then averred performance of the agreement by him, & that A. took the milking of the thirty cows, & alleged as a breach of the agreement non-payment by deft. of the rent, which became due on Nov. 14. It appeared in evidence that in May it was agreed between pltf. & A., the latter having then thirty-two cows, that pltf., instead of taking away two at that time, should be at liberty to take four at the fall of the year, & it appeared that between Oct. 4 & Oct. 20 pltf. did take away four cows, leaving A. after that period less than thirty. It was proved that this alteration in the mode of using the cows made no substantial difference as to profit or loss:—Held: (1) this was an entire contract for the letting of thirty cows, neither more nor less; (2) pltf. in an action against a surety was bound to prove a literal performance of that contract, & he had not done so, inasmuch as he had shown that during part of the year he had allowed A. to have the milking of twenty-eight cows only.—WHITCHER v. HALL (1826), 5 B. & C. 269; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 22; 4 L. J. O. S. K. B. 167; 108 E. R. 101.

380. Covering mare—Lien.—S. sent a mare to M., a farmer, to be covered by a stallion belonging to him. The mare was taken to M.'s stables, & covered accordingly, upon a Sunday. The charge for covering not being paid, M. detained the mare. A demand of her was afterwards made, but M. refused to deliver her, claiming a lien not only for the charge on that occasion, but for a general balance due to him on another account:—Held: (1) M. was entitled to a specific lien on the mare for the charge for covering her; (2) the claim made by M. to retain the mare for the general balance was not a waiver of his lien for the charge on the particular occasion, & did not dispense with the necessity of a tender of that sum; (3) such contract was not void within Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), s. 1, on the ground of its having been made & executed on a Sunday, it not being made by M. in the exercise of his ordinary calling, but even if it were, the contract having been executed, the lien attached.—SCARFE v. MORGAN (1838), 4 M. & W. 270; 1 Horn & H. 292; 7 L. J. Ex. 324; 2 Jur. 569; 150 E. R. 1430.

Annotations:—Consd. Jackson v. Cummins (1839), 5 M. & W. 342. The general rule as laid down by this ct. in Scarfe v. Morgan is that by the general law, in the absence of any special agreement, whenever a party has expended labour & skill in the improvement of a chattel bailed to him he has a lien upon it; now the case of agistment does not fall within that principle, inasmuch as the agister simply takes in the animal to feed it (PARKE, B.). Distd. *Dirks v. ## Part VI.—Sale and Exchange of Animals.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Sale of horses & other animals in markets & fairs & in market overt: see AUCTION & AUCTIONEERS; MARKETS & FAIRS; SALE OF GOODS.

381. Condition for return—Continuing contract—Pleading.]—In an action for money had & received by deft. to pltf.'s use, it was proved deft. had sold to pltf. for 70 guineas a pair of horses, which he undertook to take back if pltf. disapproved of them & returned them within a month. Pltf. returned them within that time & took another pair from deft. without making any fresh agreement. These he also returned within a month, & received a third pair on Dec. 23 without any fresh bargain. Pltf. disapproved of the third pair because they were restive & would not draw, & offered to return them on Jan. 5, but deft. refused to take them back:—Held: (1) the action would not lie as pltf. should have declared on the special contract which continued between the parties through all their subsequent dealings; (2) pltf. was properly nonsuited.

If pltf. had demanded the 70 guineas & brought his action on the return of the first pair of horses & no second pair had been sent, the action would have lain, but here the contract was continued (ASH-HURST, J.).—WESTON v. DOWNES (1778), 1 Doug. K. B. 23; 99 E. R. 19.

382. — Effect of.]—Pltf. bought a horse by public auction at a repository warranted to be a good worker, subject to the condition that "horses warranted good workers, whether sold by private treaty or public auction, not answering such warranty must be returned before 5 o'clock of the day after the sale; shall then be tried by a person to be appointed by the auctioneer, & the decision of such person shall be final." The horse was not returned within the stipulated time. In an action on the warranty:—Held: pltf.'s only remedy was under the condition, & he could not maintain the action.—HINCHCLIFFE v. BARWICK (1880), 5 Ex. D. 177; 49 L. J. Q. B. 495; 42 L. T. 492; 44 J. P. 615; 28 W. R. 940, C. A.

383. — —.]—On July 22, pltf. bought a horse at deft.'s horse repository, it being a condition of sale that, if any horse did not comply with the warranty, it might be returned up to 5 p.m. on the second day after the sale, & that, if not returned by that time, the purchaser should have no claim for any defect. On July 24 the horse was found to be suffering from influenza, & pltf. sent it on that day to the repository, but it did not arrive until 5.2 p.m., when the gates were closed, & the horse was refused admittance. It was alleged that the horse was so unwell that it was impossible to send it back sooner:—Held: the failure of pltf. to comply with the condition as to the time for returning the horse was an answer to an action on the warranty.—BUSH v. FREEMAN (1887), 3 T. L. R. 449.

— Limiting duration of warranty.]—See Nos. 456—458, post.

384. — Death of animal before return—Action by vendor for price.]—A horse was sold by pltf. to deft., upon condition that it should be taken away by deft. & tried by him for eight days & returned at the end of eight days, if deft. did not think it suitable for his purposes. The horse died on the third day after it was placed in deft.'s stable, without fault of either party:—Held: pltf. could not maintain an action for the price as for goods sold & delivered.—ELPHICK v. BARNES (1880), 5 C. P. D. 321; 49 L. J. Q. B. 698; 44 J. P. 651; 29 W. R. 139.

387. — Refusal to pay money on alleged breach of warranty—Recovery of money.]—A. agreed to give a horse, warranted sound, in exchange for a horse of B. & a sum of money. The horses were exchanged, but B. refused to pay the money, pretending that A.'s horse was unsound:—Held: it might be recovered on an indebitatus count for horses sold & delivered.—SHELDON v. COX (1824), 3 B. & C. 420; 5 Dowl. & Ry. K. B. 277; 107 E. R. 789.

388. Contract—Made on Sunday.]—A horse-dealer cannot maintain an action upon a contract for the sale & warranty of a horse made by him upon a Sunday. Such contract is void under Sunday Observance Act, 1667 (c. 7), & it is of no consequence whether the act be done openly or concealedly or whether it be an act of work & labour or not.—FENNELL v.

PART VI. SECT. 1.

382 i. Condition for return—Refusal of seller to take animal back—Liability of buyer.]—A. sold a mare to B. with the right to return her if not satisfied by a certain date, but refused to accept her when tendered within the time allowed. B. put the mare in a livery stable, telling A. that she was at his charge, & subsequently removed the mare to his own farm, where she was kept for some time & afterwards sold at a reduced price:—Held: B. entitled to return the mare without incurring liability for deterioration unless imputable to his own act or gross negligence.—GRAHAM v. WILSON (1839), 1 D. 407.—SCOT.

h. Sale on trial—Death during time limited for.]—A horse died in the hands of an intending purchaser on trial. It had been overwrought a day or two previously, but the overworking, although proved to have a tendency to produce the disease of which it died, was not proved to be the cause of that disease:—Held: the onus lay upon the intending purchaser of proving that the horse had perished from a cause unconnected with the misuse, & as he had failed to discharge this onus, he must bear the loss.—PULLARS v. WALKER (1858), 20 D. 1238.—SCOT.

1. — — —.]—Pltf. & deft. each left a horse with the other for three days' trial with the view of exchanging horses. There was no definite agreement as to the terms of the proposed exchange. On the last day deft.'s horse was injured in pltf.'s stable & died the next day. After the horse was injured pltf. offered the horse to deft. & asked for his own in return. Deft. refused:—Held: pltf. entitled to judgment in an action for replevin.—CAPELLINI v. BELLANGER (1911), 18 O. W. R. 93.—CAN.]

m. — Expiry of time limited for.]—CHARLEBOIS v. CLARKE (1914), 21 R. de J. 14.—CAN.

n. Contract—Failure to deliver full number of sheep sold—Clean sheep.]—Under a contract for sale of sixteen thousand sheep at 5s. per head, only eight hundred & thirty were delivered, some of them being legally scabby:—Held: (1) pltf. could only recover on a quantum valebant; (2) the measure of value was the price agreed on in the contract, taking that price to be for clean sheep, & a reduction being made, to be ascertained by a jury, on account of the flock being unclean, & the cost of dipping the sheep twice. Qu.: whether a contract for the sale of sheep means a sale of clean sheep, & whether, if the sixteen thousand sheep had been delivered & delivery accepted, deft. could have insisted on any reduction.—SMITH v. JOHNSTON (1881), 3 N. Z. L. R. 270.—N.Z.

RIDLER (1826), 5 B. & C. 406; 8 Dow. & Ry. 204; 4 L. J. O. S. K. B. 207; 108 E. R. 151.

389. — Completion—Authority of agent.]—In assumpsit for a mare sold & delivered, to which deft. pleaded non assumpsit, it appeared that deft., having seen & ridden the mare, wrote to pltf.: "I will take the mare at 20 guineas, of course warranted; & as she lays out, turn her out my mare." Pltf. agreed to sell her for the 20 guineas. Deft. subsequently wrote again to him: "My son will be at the World's End [a public-house] on Monday, when he will take the mare & pay you; send anybody with a receipt, & the money shall be paid; only say in the receipt, sound, & quiet in harness." Pltf. wrote in reply: "She is warranted sound, & quiet in double harness; I never put her in single harness." The mare was brought to the World's End on the Monday, & deft.'s son took her away without paying the price, & without any receipt or warranty. Deft. kept her two days, & then returned her as being unsound. The trial judge stated to the jury that the question was whether deft. had accepted the mare, & directed them to find for deft., if they thought he had returned her within a reasonable time, & desired them also to say whether the son had authority to take her without the warranty. The jury found that deft. did not accept the mare, & that the son had not authority to take her away:—Held: (1) there was

390 i. — Repudiation—Mutual mistake as to title.]—Defts. bought cattle from pltf., gave her promissory notes for the price, & took & kept the cattle, all parties believing that pltf. had an absolute title to them. It was subsequently ascertained that pltf. had only a life interest in the cattle. After learning this fact, defts. paid a year's interest on the notes, & neither returned nor offered to return the cattle:—Held: there was no fraud & no total failure of consideration, & defts. were bound to repudiate the transaction at once on learning of the defect in pltf.'s title, if they wished to object, & must by their conduct be held to have elected, with knowledge of the facts, to affirm their purchases.—PRIMEAU v. MOUCHELIN, PRIMEAU v. PANTEL (1905), 15 Man. L. R. 360; 1 W. L. R. 434.—CAN.

o. — Refusal to take delivery of sheep sold—Tender of sufficient number.]—Pltfs. agreed to sell to deft. "22,000 about more or less full-mouthed breeding ewes," deft. to have the right to reject one thousand sheep from the number mustered. When the time for delivery arrived pltf., if deft. had exercised his right to reject one thousand sheep, would only have been able to deliver eighteen thousand. Deft. refused to accept delivery of these. In an action for non-acceptance of the sheep:—Held: it was for the jury to say whether the tender was a compliance with the contract.—MAACK v. McPHILLAMY (1889), 10 N. S. W. L. R. 187.—AUS.

p. — Failure to perform material part—Splint.]—A splint in a horse, not causing lameness, does not constitute "a failure to perform a material part of a contract of sale," within Sale of Goods Act, 1894, s. 11, such as would entitle purchaser to repudiate the bargain.—FEWSON v. GEMMELL (1904), 11 S. L. T. 153, 697.—SCOT.

q. — Refusal to deliver sheep sold.]—By a contract for sale of a specific flock of sheep, of a specified number at a certain price per head of those delivered & accepted, it was provided that the sheep should be delivered at a place between two hundred & three hundred miles from where the sheep then were, & to which the sheep would have to travel on foot, & that the purchaser should no complete contract in writing between the parties, & the direction of the judge was right; (2) deft. was not bound by the act of the son in bringing home the mare, inasmuch as he had thereby exceeded his authority as agent, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—JORDAN v. NORTON (1838), 4 M. & W. 155; 1 Horn & H. 234; 7 L. J. Ex. 281; 150 E. R. 1382.

390. — Repudiation—Entire contract.]—Deft. bought of pltf. two dogs at a price of £19, of which £10 was stated to be the value of the one & £9 that of the other dog. The evidence of delivery & acceptance was a letter from deft. to pltf., beginning "I did not receive the dogs till last night." Deft. kept one dog, & wrote to pltf. stating he should return the other as not agreeing with the warranty. It did not appear that the dog had been returned. Deft. paid into ct. £10, the value of the dog approved of, & disputed his liability for the remainder:—Held: the contract being entire, & no evidence having been given of a return, deft. was liable for the full amount.—CLARKE v. HUNT (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 131.

391. — Conditional on certificate of soundness—Corrupt certificate.]—Deft. agreed to purchase a pair of horses from pltf., provided they were passed as sound by a veterinary surgeon employed by deft. to examine them. The horses were certified as sound by the veterinary surgeon, & deft. sent a cheque for the price. The horses were delivered & found to be unsound, & thereupon they were have the option of rejecting all sheep unfit to travel. The destination of the sheep was unknown to the vendor, but it was within the contemplation of the parties that they would have to travel a considerable distance. The purchaser paid a deposit of £250. The vendor refused to deliver any of the sheep unless the purchaser would agree to accept & pay for sheep which were in fact unfit to travel more than one day's stage:—Held: (1) this amounted to a breach of contract by the vendor entitling the purchaser to a return of the deposit; (2) a refusal by the purchaser to accept some of the sheep which he should have accepted, which refusal the purchaser was willing to reconsider, did not entitle the vendor to refuse to deliver the sheep which the purchaser was willing to accept; (3) even had the refusal been absolute & unjustifiable provided that it was not of such a number as to go to the foundation of the contract, the vendor would not have been entitled to refuse to deliver those sheep which the purchaser was willing to accept, his remedy being under Sale of Goods Act, 1896 (Q.), s. 339.—FRANCIS v. LYON (1907), 4 C. L. R. 1023.—AUS.

r. — Failure to take delivery of cattle sold—Time of essence.]—Pltfs. bought cattle from deft. to be delivered on a future day. Pltfs. not taking delivery at the agreed date, deft. served notice that unless pltfs. took delivery by a specified date, they would forfeit the deposit paid on account. Pltfs. had not taken delivery at the date specified, but subsequently demanded delivery, which was refused:—Held: deft.'s notice made time of the essence, & deft. entitled to rescind the contract.—RATNER BROTHERS v. PORTER (1911), 1 W. W. R. 236.—CAN.

s. — Death of horse after—Passing of property.]—Pltf. sold deft. two horses for $375, agreeing to ship them three days later. The night of the sale one horse threw itself & was found dead next morning. Deft. refused to pay the $375, but paid pltf. $210 & took the one horse away. Pltf. sued for the balance:—Held: the title, & with it the risk of loss, was in the purchaser from the time of the sale, & deft. liable.—MAY v. CONN (1911), 18 O. W. R. 141; 31 C. L. T. 66; 2 O. W. N. 604; 23 O. L. R. 102.—CAN.

t. — Delivery of wrong animal—User after knowledge—Action by purchaser for rescission.]—The horse delivered to pltf. upon a sale was not the horse he bought, but pltf., on discovering this, did not at once return it or notify deft. that he rejected it, but used the horse:—Held: pltf. not entitled to rescission of the contract & return of the money paid, or to damages.—MOACHON v. BLAIR (1913), 23 W. L. R. 59; 3 W. W. R. 831; 9 D. L. R. 396.—CAN.

w. — Sale en bloc.]—A man, who buys en bloc a fixed number of animals, cannot be compelled to accept the same sale for a number smaller than that which was the immediate object of the sale.—WARK v. CLANCEY (1904), Q. R. 25 S. C. 199.—CAN.

x. — Evidence.]—A. being in possession of a horse, the property of another, said he would buy him, & promised to pass his note for the money. He did not pass his note, but there was a subsequent admission by him that he had bought the horse:—Held: this was sufficient to complete the contract.—EVANSON v. PARKER (1794), Ridg. L. & S. 283.—IR.

y. — —.]—A. & B. bought cattle from deft. & placed them in a field rented from P. A. & B. sold pltf. the cattle & delivered them by going to the field where they were & saying, "Now the cattle belong to you & you have got to look after them." On the same day A. & B. assigned the lease of the field to K., & pltf. obtained K.'s permission to leave the cattle in the field, & thereafter pltf. & K. looked after the cattle. Deft., who had not been paid in full for the cattle by A. & B., afterwards went to the field & took the cattle away:—Held: pltf. entitled to bring trespass against deft.—McNICHOL v. BRUCKS (1905), 1 W. L. R. 478; 6 Terr. L. R. 184.—CAN.

z. — —.]—Pltf. was employed to look after A.'s horses. A. agreed to buy a horse from deft., & the horse was handed over to pltf. to look after. Subsequently A. rejected the horse:—Held: there was no ground of action quasi e contractu against deft. for keep of the horse, as pltf. must show that deft. was still owner of the horse.—RICHARD v. STEVENSON (1905), Q. R. 28 S. C. 188.—CAN.

returned & the cheque stopped. In the course of the trial of an action on the cheque it was elicited that the veterinary surgeon had accepted a bribe from pltf. :—Held: the offer & acceptance of the bribe invalidated the certificate, & pltf. could not recover under the contract, which depended on the validity of the certificate.—SHIPWAY v. BROADWOOD, [1899] 1 Q. B. 369; 68 L. J. Q. B. 360; 80 L. T. 11; 15 T. L. R. 145, C. A.

SECT. 2.—WARRANTY.

Authority of agent to warrant. See AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 381, 832.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHAT AMOUNTS TO A WARRANTY.

See, generally, CONTRACT; GUARANTEE; SALE OF GOODS.

392. Representation—Distinguished from warranty.—If a horse is sold with a warranty, any fraud at the time of the sale will avoid the sale, though it is not on any point included in the warranty.

Deft. warranted in writing a horse sound & free from vice, which it was. He also verbally represented that the horse was five years old, which pltf. alleged was untrue :—Held: this was admissible as general evidence of fraud.—STEWART v. COESVELT (1823), 1 C. & P. 23.

393. — — —.]—There is a difference between a warranty & a representation, because the latter must be known to be wrong. No particular words are necessary to constitute a warranty. If a man says this horse is sound, that is a warranty. If this occurred at the time of the sale & without any qualification, it is a warranty; if before, & if it was qualified, it must be taken to be a representation & not a warranty (BEST, C.J.).—SALMON v. WARD (1825), 2 C. & P. 211.

PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

a. General rule.—Whatever the vendor represents at the time of the sale of a horse is a warranty, but often there must be discrimination between language merely of expectation, estimate or praise, & that which constitutes a representation or warranty.—IRVINE v. PARKER (1904), 40 N. S. R. 392.—CAN.

b. —.]—To make a seller liable in express warranty, it is not necessary that he shall use the words "I warrant"; it is sufficient if he make representations which the purchaser has given him to understand are essential to his buying. The fact that a purchaser tried a horse the day he bought him does not relieve the seller from responsibility for representation he may make after such a trial.—SCOTT v. STEEL (1857), 20 D. 253.—SCOT.

392 i. Representation — Distinguished from warranty.—The purchaser of horses alleged that they were sold under an oral warranty in addition to a written one :—Held: the alleged oral warranty was nothing more than a representation of belief not intended as a warranty.—CAMPBELL v. HENDERSON (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 712.—SCOT.

396 i. — Held to be warranty.—Pltf. told deft., at the time of sale of a horse, that the horse was a good one to pull & that its age was eleven years :

396 iv. — — —.]—On the negotiation for the purchase of a horse the purchaser asked the vendor whether the horse was a qualified hunter. The vendor replied "Yes," & that he had ridden it at certain races. The term "qualified hunter" meant, amongst horse-dealers, a horse qualified to run in a Hunter's Race according to the rules of the New Zealand Hunt Clubs Association. The horse had, in fact, been qualified at the date of the races mentioned by

394. —.]—A receipt on the sale of a colt contained the following words after the date, name, & sum, "for a grey four years old colt, warranted sound in every respect" :—Held: such part as related to the age was a representation only, & not a warranty.—BUDD v. FAIRMANER (1831), 8 Bing. 48; 5 C. & P. 78; 1 Moo. & S. 74; 1 L. J. C. P. 16; 131 E. R. 318.

On the day prior to the intended sale, meeting B. at the stable, & seeing him in the act of examining the horse's legs, A. said: "You have nothing to look for; I assure you he is perfectly sound in every respect," whereupon B. replied, "If you say so I am perfectly satisfied," & upon the faith of the representation so made to him by A.—which was admitted to have been made in perfect good faith—became the purchaser :—Held: there was no evidence of warranty to go to a jury—the representation made by A. on the day preceding the auction forming no part of the contract of sale. Qu. (MAULE, J.): as to the legality of such a secret bargain for a warranty, where third persons attending the sale are bidding upon the supposition that the sale is without warranty.—*HOPKINS v. the vendor, but was not qualified at the date of the negotiation & sale :—Held: there was a warranty & a breach of warranty.

After an agreement had been concluded between the vendor & purchaser, but before payment of the price, the purchaser informed the vendor that he wanted to race the horse at a certain meeting, & that it would not be worth £5 to him if it was not a qualified hunter. The vendor replied, "You may rely on his being a 'qualified hunter'; I will get a certificate for you." The parties then agreed upon an alteration of the price (in favour of the purchaser) as regards a payment to be made out of the first winnings of the horse, & the purchase-money was paid over & delivery of the horse taken :—Held: the mere change of one of the terms of the sale would not reopen the whole bargain, & it was doubtful whether the statement when made would be a warranty.—LOUGHNAN v. McDONNELL (1903), 23 N. Z. L. R. 14.—N.Z.

396 v. — — —.]—Representations as to the steadiness of a horse before & with a view to a sale :—Held: binding as a warranty, & purchaser entitled to recur, on the animal turning out after sale not to be steady, notwithstanding the purchaser had had the animal on trial previous to completing the bargain.—*STEEL v. horse. It belonged to R., who sold it because he could not match it." Pltf. went again to the stable, &, after having had the horse put into a break, agreed to purchase it for £65. There was no suggestion that deft. had intentionally misrepresented the horse, but it turned out to be a kicker. The jury found that the representation made at Tattersall's was part of the contract, & amounted to a warranty that the horse was quiet in harness; the ct. refused to disturb the verdict.—PERCIVAL v. OLDACRE (1865), 18 C. B. N. S. 398; 144 E. R. 499.

398. ———.]—To the name of a mare in a printed catalogue of horses to be sold by auction were appended the words, "In foal to Warlock." Other mares in the same catalogue were described as having been "served by" or "stinted to" certain horses:—Held: looking to the expressions used with respect to the other mares, & to the nature of the fact represented, the words in question must be taken as intended by the parties to amount to a warranty.—GEE v. LUCAS (1867), 16 L. T. 357.

399. ———.]—Applt. was proceeding to examine a stallion with a view to purchasing it (which he in fact did) for stud purposes, when the seller told him he need not look for anything, the horse was perfectly sound &, if it was not, he, the seller, would have told him, whereupon applt. ceased his examination. The horse was in fact unsound. The jury at the trial of an action for damages for breach of warranty found that the representation had been made by the seller. The C. A. refusing to draw the inference from the facts that such representation was made as a warranty, directed a new trial:—Held: the finding was a finding of warranty.—SCHAWEL v. READE (1912), 46 I. L. T. 281, H. L.

400. ——— Offering for sale in public market.]—Where the owner of an animal takes it to a public market for sale, this furnishes evidence of a representation on his part that the animal is not, so far as he knows, suffering from any infectious disease (BLACKBURN, J.).—*BODGER v. 401. ———.]—Deft. sent pigs to market, & sold them to pltf., the pigs being then affected with typhoid fever, an infectious disease. The sale was "with all faults" & without warranty, & there was no verbal representation as to the health of the pigs. Some of them died & they infected other pigs belonging to pltf., which also died. Pltf. sued to recover the value of the pigs which he had lost:—Held: although deft. might have been guilty of an offence against Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), s. 57, he was not liable to pltf., for the exposing of the pigs in the market did not amount to a representation by him that they were free from infectious disease, when he had expressly stated that the purchaser was to take them with all their faults.

Although a man states upon a sale that he gives no warranty & that the animals must be taken with all their faults, but says also (untruly to his knowledge) that so far as he knows or believes the animals are free from disease, an action for deceit lies against him for the false representation. Qu.: whether in the absence of any statement or negation by the seller, the sending of diseased animals for sale at a public market is such a representation by conduct that they are free from disease as to make the seller liable (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—*WARD v. 404. ——— Warranty as part of contract.]—In an action for breach of warranty of a horse as sound wind & limb, whereas it had but one eye, there having been a verdict for pltf. it was objected in arrest of judgment that the want of an eye was a visible thing whereas the warranty only extended to secret infirmities:—Held: this might be so & must be intended to be so since the jury had found that deft. warranted.

It was also objected in arrest of judgment that as the warranty was set forth it might be after the sale, whereas it ought to be part of the contract:—Held: the payment was afterwards & it was that which completed the bargain which was imperfect without it.—BUTTERFIELD v. BURROUGHS (1706), 1 Salk. 211; 91 E. R. 189.

Deft. was a butcher, & bought the cattle for the purpose of selling the carcasses in the market for human consumption:—Held: the facts did not justify the inference of an implied warranty under Sale of Goods Act, 1896 (No. 1422), s. 19.—*POWERS, RUTHERFORD & CO. v. 402 i. Patent defects—Four-year-old horse—No examination by buyer.]—Appls. placed a horse in the hands of an auctioneer for sale, believing it to be & stating that it was four years old, though in reality it was five years old. The horse was put up at auction as a "four-year-old gelding," & was sold to resp. Before purchasing it he saw the horse & had an opportunity of inspecting it, & had he done so he could have discovered it was more than four years old. He did not inspect the horse, but paid for it, accepted delivery of it, & took it away. Afterwards he discovered that it was more than four years old, & at once repudiated the contract:—Held: the condition as to the horse's age had sunk to the level of a warranty, & resp. could not repudiate the contract.—*CUFFS BROTHERS v. d. Heifer in calf—Custom.]—On a sale of cattle in county Tipperary pltf. bought from deft. some yearling heifers, believing them not to be in calf. No express warranty was asked for or given at the time of sale, & shortly after the sale one of the heifers proved to be in calf, & its value was thereby greatly deteriorated:—Held: in the absence of express warranty or warranty implied by local custom or common understanding, a purchaser could not make the seller liable, & pltf. could not recover.—*KENNEDY v. 408. ——— Horse for riding—Injured shoulder.—In an action for breach of warranty of the soundness of a horse sold by deft. to pltf., it appeared the horse had "shoulder-pight" (a diseased or injured shoulder). Judgment having been given for pltf., it was moved in arrest of judgment that the action did not lie as the "shoulder-pight" was a visible infirmity:—Held: (1) fraud was apparent, for pltf. wished to ride the horse & deft. said he would warrant that the horse was well; (2) the motion must be refused.—*DORRINGTON v. 409. ——— Seller's knowledge of buyer's requirements.—If a man sells a horse generally where the buyer puts no question, he warrants no more than that it is a horse. But if the buyer asks for a carriage horse, or a horse to carry a female or a timid & infirm rider, he who knows the quality of the animal & sells undertakes that it is fit for the purpose indicated. 407 i. Fitness for intended use—Dairy cows.—A farmer bought from a cattle-dealer a number of milch cows for dairy purposes. 412 ii. ——— Sale by poundkeeper.—E. purchased a horse at a poundkeeper's sale, & C., also a bidder, purchased it from him immediately after the horse had been knocked down to E. The horse was subsequently repossessed by M., the owner:—Held: there was no warranty of title from E. to C.—CLARK v. ENGLAND & MORTON (1916), 34

413. Stolen horse — Evidence.]—In an action to recover the price of a mare sold or exchanged by deft. to or with pltf., which mare pltf. had been obliged to deliver up to the rightful owner, from whom she had been stolen, it appeared that deft. had been asked at the time of sale whose horse it was, & he once or twice repeated it was his own, & that he had bought it in Bristol at L.'s Repository. The jury having given a verdict for pltf. :—Held: there was evidence of warranty of title to go to the jury.—MACKAY v. MOORE (1857), 28 L. T. O. S. 258.

414. — — —.]—On Aug. 26 a horse was stolen, on Aug. 29 it was sold at a horse repository to deft., who almost immediately afterwards resold it to pltf. for £15. Pltf., having been obliged to return the horse to the person from whom it had been stolen, brought an action to recover the £15 from deft. :—Held: although there was no express warranty of the title to the horse, there was an implied warranty by deft. that he had a right to sell it.—EDWARDS v. PEARSON (1890), 6 T. L. R. 220.

415. As to whom property of animal in.]—G. purchased a horse from P., who represented that it had been sent to him for sale by a gentleman in England, whereas in fact he had purchased it in Scotland from A. :—Held: the misrepresentation as to the place from which the horse came did not invalidate the sale, the horse having been held to answer the warranty, but it was a material consideration with respect to costs which deft. could not recover.—GEDDES v. PENNINGTON (1817), 5 Dow. 159; 3 E. R. 1287.

416. — — —.]—At a sale by auction a horse was described in the catalogue as the property of J. D., Esq., & one of the conditions of sale was as follows: "Should any horse not answer to the description given it must be returned before 2 on Thursday the 14th with a notice in writing," etc. On the morning of the sale the horse was privately sold to P. about an hour before the auction. The horse was, however, not struck out of the catalogue, as P. thought he might make a profit if the sale by auction went through, & the horse was put up as the property of J. D. with his consent. Pltf. then bought it, seeing, as he said, that the horse was the property of a gentleman :—Held: pltf. entitled to damages against J. D. for breach of warranty, because the statement in the catalogue that the horse was the property of a particular person was a material representation, since it was to a certain extent a guarantee as to the character of the sale upon the faith of which pltf. had acted, & J. D. was estopped from denying that the representation

417. By servant.—As to age of horse.]—In an action for a breach of warranty on the sale of a horse, the purchaser produced the following receipt signed by the seller: "Received £10 for a grey four year old colt, warranted sound" :—Held: the warranty was confined to soundness, the age being mere matter of representation or description which was no ground of action, without proof that it was false within deft.'s knowledge.—BUDD v. FAIRMANER (1831), 8 Bing. 48; 5 C. & P. 78; 1 Moo. & S. 74; 1 L. J. C. P. 16; 131 E. R. 318.

SUB-SECT. 2.—EVIDENCE OF WARRANTY.

418. Sound price given.]—A warranty extends to all faults known & unknown to the seller. Selling for a sound price without warranty may be a ground for an assumpsit, but in such a case it ought to be laid that deft. knew of the unsoundness (LORD MANSFIELD, C.J.).—STUART v. WILKINS (1778), 1 Doug. K. B. 18; 99 E. R. 15.

419. — — —.]—A sound price given for a horse is not tantamount to a warranty of soundness; there must either be an express warranty of soundness or fraud in the seller in order to maintain the action. In sales of horses without a warranty of soundness by the seller, or fraud on his part, the buyer must stand to all losses arising from latent defects (LE BLANC, J.).—*PARKINSON v. #### PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

a. Burden of proof — Evidence evenly balanced.]—In an action for breach of warranty the only evidence was that of pltf. & deft., & was conflicting, & the trial judge asked the jury if deft. warranted the horse, after telling them that if they could not believe one of the parties more than the other, they must find for deft., the onus of proof being on pltf. The jury replied, "Evidence is evenly balanced." :—Held: deft. not liable.—MCDONALD v. BARTER (1911), 9 E. L. R. 316.—CAN.

420 i. Verbal representation.]—In an action on the warranty of horses, a conversation just before delivery between the parties, when pltf. said, "You say these horses are sound," etc., & deft. replied, "Yes, they are," coupled with a subsequent refusal of deft. to take back the horses "because they were as he warranted them," is sufficient evidence from which the jury may infer that a warranty was given at the time of the sale, no witness appearing to & deft., in which pltf. writes, "you will remember that you represented the horse to me as a five-year-old," etc., to which deft. answers, "The horse is as I represented it," are sufficient evidence from which the jury may infer that a warranty was given at the time of the sale; & it is not necessary to give other proof of what actually passed when the contract was made.—SALMON v. WARD (1825), 2 C. & P. 211.

421. Receipt by illiterate seller.]—Pltf.'s witnesses alleged that pltf. bargained to give his colt for deft.'s mare & £10, & that pltf.'s colt was not warranted. Deft.'s servant produced a receipt as follows, which he had drawn up when he paid the £10, some time after the bargain: "Received £10 for a colt warranted sound." This receipt was signed by pltf., an illiterate man:—Held: (1) the receipt was not conclusive; (2) it was properly left to the jury to find whether the warranty of the colt formed any part of the bargain, or was inserted in the receipt without authority, by an after-thought of deft.'s servant.—FAIRMANER v. BUDD (1831), 7 Bing. 574; 5 Moo. & P. 534; 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 180; 131 E. R. 222.

422. Parol evidence—Where written memorandum.]—In an action for breach of warranty of a horse sold by deft. to pltf., it appeared that deft. gave a verbal warranty of the horse, which pltf. thereupon bought & paid for, & deft. then gave him the following memorandum: "Bought of [deft.] a horse for the sum of £7 2s. 6d." :—Held: parol evidence might, notwithstanding, be given of the warranty.—ALLEN v. PINK (1838), 4 M. & W. 140; 1 Horn & H. 207; 7 L. J. Ex. 206; 150 E. R. 1376.

422 i. Parol evidence—Where written memorandum.]—Deft. sold to pltf. two horses & orally warranted them to be staunch & sound. They were subsequently delivered to pltf. together with a sale note, which contained no warranty:—Held: the sale note was in the nature of a mere invoice, & pltf. entitled to recover on the oral contract.—FARAM v. KERR (1877), 3 V. L. R. 146.—AUS.

422 ii. ———. ]—Applt. sold to resp. a horse, warranting him sound. After the completion of the bargain the following document was given by applt. to resp.: "Sold to K. one bay horse, branded . . . for the sum of £30 for which I have received payment":—Held: this became the contract, to the exclusion of the verbal agreement, & there was consequently no warranty.—McDEVITT v. KATTENGALL (1879), 5 V. L. R. 89.—AUS.

422 iii. ———. ]—Pltf., during negotiations for the sale of a horse, having asked for, & deft. having promised to give him, a warranty as to soundness, etc., deft., after the sale & delivery of the horse was complete, sent to pltf. a written warranty signed by himself. Deft. contended that evidence could not be received of any warranty or misrepresentation outside of the written warranty delivered:—Held: all the circumstances connected with the sale could be inquired into, & pltf. entitled to have his contract rescinded.—HUPP v. McLAUGHLIN (1894), 10 Man. L. R. 75.—CAN.

b. Warranty on unstamped paper.]—On the sale of a horse a receipt for the price was given on unstamped paper, containing a warranty of soundness. Some time afterwards a receipt was given on a stamp, but without the warranty:—Held: the former receipt might be given in evidence.—HAMBLIN v. HARGRAVE, 2 Leg. Rep. 195.—IR.

c. Advertisement—Verbal repudiation at sale.]—A statement in an advertisement of an auction sale stated that a pair of horses were "warranted sound." The conditions of sale announced by the auctioneer expressly stated that "no warranty would be given":—Held: no warranty.—ALLAN v. BURLAND (1885), 2 M. L. R. 1; 9 L. N. 25.—CAN.

d. Catalogue—Verbal repudiation at sale.]—A sale catalogue stated a bull was "a sure stock-getter," but at the commencement of the sale the auctioneer publicly announced that the seller warranted nothing:—Held: the purchaser must show the warranty, if any, contained in the catalogue was imported into the sale.—CRAIG v. MILLER (1872), 22 C. P. 348.—CAN.

PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

423. ———. ]—In an action to recover the balance of a sum due by deft. to pltf. for the purchase of five cows, it appeared that deft. had given pltf. the following memorandum: "I have bought of [pltf.] five cows for £42." Evidence was offered on the part of deft. of the cows having been purchased under a warranty, which had been broken, but this evidence was rejected by the trial judge:—Held: (1) the instrument was really meant to be the memorandum containing the terms of the bargain between the parties & the memorandum of the contract itself; (2) the evidence of warranty was rightly rejected.—DUTTON v. COLE (1844), 2 L. T. O. S. 332.

424. ———. ]—In an action upon a breach of warranty on the sale of a pony by deft. to pltf., the warranty as laid in the declaration was proved by verbal evidence, & pltf. afterwards put in evidence a document in the following form: "I have purchased of you a grey pony for £19 for which I have paid £1 deposit, & will pay the remainder on Friday next, the 15th instant":—Held: the document was only declaratory of a contract already completed, & the contract itself was verbal, & the warranty part of it, & the parol evidence of the warranty was properly received.—DENDY v. DURLING (1850), 16 L. T. O. S. 126.

SUB-SECT. 3.—CONSTRUCTION OF TERMS OF WARRANTY.*A. In General.

425. Distinction between verbal & written warranty.]—If the warranty is by parol, it may be construed with reference to all the surrounding circumstances. The chronic disease, from a variety of causes, became excited into acute inflammation, of which the animal died:—Held: under the implied warranty arising from a fair price, the cow was not sound.—BROWN v. BORELAND (1818), 10 D. 1460; 20 J. 537.—SCOT.

428 vii. ———. Cold—Subsequent strangles. ]—A horse was sold under a warranty of soundness:—Held: not unsound, though proved to have been at the time of the sale labouring under a cold, which afterwards became strangles, & of which the horse died twenty-two days subsequent to the day of sale.—DYKES v. HILL (1860), 22 D. 1523; 32 J. 682.—SCOT.

428 viii. ———. bronchitis. ]—A horse was sold with a warranty of soundness:—Held: a severe cold at the time of the sale, which developed in a few days into pleurisy, congestion of the lungs, & bronchitis, amounted to unsoundness, though the horse was ultimately cured after a good deal of expense & trouble.—GARDINER v. McLEAVY (1880), 7 R. 612; 17 Sc. L. R. 440.—SCOT.

p. "Sound & without vice, fault or tricks."—Subsequent development of vice.]—A horse was guaranteed by deft. sound & without vice, fault, or tricks. For a period of eight years before the sale the horse was without faults or tricks, but immediately afterwards, in the hands of pltf., it hauled & kicked when in harness, & was useless for the purpose for which it was purchased:—Held: deft. not liable.—McGILL v. HARRIS (1903), 36 N. S. R. 414.—CAN.

q. "Free from vice & every blemish" & "thorough broke horse for either gig or saddle." ]—A horse, warranted "free from vice & every blemish," & a "thorough broke horse for either gig or saddle," when on a journey in harness, plunged, ran off, & broke the gig:—Held: the warranty was not broken, stances; if written, it must be construed by the terms of the instrument (ERLE, J.).—WESTON v. POTTER (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 137.

426. "Sound"—Ignorance of seller immaterial.]—If a seller warrants a horse sound, he does it at his peril if the horse was not sound at the time of sale, whether he knew it or not.—ANON. (1773), Loft, 146; 98 E. R. 579.

427. ——— Unsoundness a question for jury.]—The soundness or unsoundness of a horse is a question peculiarly fit for the consideration of a jury, & the ct. will not set aside a verdict for a preponderance of contrary evidence.—LEWIS v. PEAKE (PEAT) (1816), 7 Taunt. 153; 2 Marsh. 431; 129 E. R. 61.

428. ——— Meaning of term.]—The term "sound" in a warranty of a horse, or other animal, implies the absence of any disease or seeds of disease in the animal at the time, which actually diminishes or in its progress will diminish its natural usefulness in the work to which it would properly & ordinarily be applied.—KIDDELL v. BURNARD (1842), 9 M. & W. 668; Car. & M. 291; 11 L. J. Ex. 268; 6 Jur. 327; 152 E. R. 282.

429. ——— Temporary injury.]—A warranty that a horse is sound is not false, because the horse labours under a temporary injury from an accident.—GARMENT v. BARRS (1798), 2 Esp. 673.

*Annotation:—*N.F. Jones v. Cowley (1825), 4 B. & C. 445.

430. ——— ———.]—A temporary lameness, rendering a horse less fit for present service, is a breach of a warranty of soundness.—ELTON v. BROGDEN (1815), 4 Camp. 281.

431. ——— "Roaring."]—Roaring is not unsoundness in a horse, unless it is shown to proceed from some disease or organic defects.—BASSETT v. COLLINS (1810), 2 Camp. 523.

432. ——— ———.]—Roaring constitutes unsoundness in a horse. If a horse be affected by any malady which renders it less serviceable for a permanency it is an unsoundness; I do not go by the noise, but by the disorder (LORD ELLENBOROUGH C.J.).—ONSLOW v. FAMES (1817), 2 Stark. 81.

433. ——— "Coughing."]—A horse had a cough when it was sold, & pltf. was told of this. It was alleged that the horse had been hunted the day after the warranty. In an action for breach of warranty the jury found a verdict for deft.:—Held: there must be a new trial. Semble: if deft. alleged that the defect was only temporary, the onus was upon him to prove it.

as the accident was due to bad driving by pltf.—GEDDES v. PENNINGTON (1817), 6 Pat. 312.—SCOT.

r. "Free of fault"—Crib-biting.]—A horse being sold under a warrantee that he was free of fault, & being returned, on the same day, on account of crib-biting & wind-sucking:—Held: the seller must make repetition of the price.—DEUCHARS v. SHAW (1833), 11 S. 612.—SCOT.

s. "Good working" horse.]—MERCIER v. MORIN (1914), 20 R. de J. 549.—CAN.

t. "Quiet in all harness & saddle & sound to best of my knowledge."]—Horses were bought with a written warranty that they were "quiet in all harness & saddle, & sound to the best of my knowledge":—Held: the words "to the best of my knowledge" qualified the whole of the written warranty, & not only the warranty of soundness.—CAMPBELL v. HENDERSON (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 712.—SCOT.

u. "Undisturbed possession."]—A guarantee by the vendor of a horse, that the vendee shall have undisturbed possession of the thing bought, is a warranty of title, not of quality, & the maxim caveat emptor does not apply.—FITZGERALD v. LUCK (1839), 1 Legge, 118.—AUS.

w. "Due to calve."]—Held: the above words did not in themselves import a warranty that the cow was with calf.—WILSON v. SHAVER (1912), 27 O. L. R. 218; 4 O. W. N. 71; 8 D. L. R. 627.—CAN.

x. Undertaking to exchange should buyer "fail to get good black male" from foxes sold.]—Pltf. wrote to deft. agreeing to purchase a pair of black foxes "on the understanding agreed upon, i.e., should we fail to get a good black male from either pair mated . . . then you agree to exchange the male you are sending for a good silver black male next year." Mating was successfully accomplished so far as one pair was concerned, but the litter was destroyed by the mother. The other pair was not successfully mated, the female dying. Deft. contended that all he was undertaking by the contract was to guarantee

If the cough was of a permanent nature it was a breach of warranty. The knowledge of pltf. that it had a cough makes no difference, as he relied upon the warranty only & did not trust to his own knowledge. As to the hunting there was no evidence of mismanagement, & there is no proof that the cold was temporary (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—SHILLITOE v. CLARIDGE (1816), 2 Chit. 425.

434. ——— ———.]—A horse was warranted sound, but a few hours after the sale pltf. found it had a cough. He kept it a few days in a stable, but the horse became worse, & for some days it was very ill & unfit for work, suffering from what was called influenza or distemper, from which he ultimately recovered. Deft's. evidence was to the effect that the horse at the time of the sale suffered at most from a slight & common cold:—Held: (1) the question for the jury was whether the horse at the time of sale had upon it any disease calculated permanently to diminish its usefulness, or whether the disorder which it then had was a mere cold, which with ordinary care would soon have been cured so as to leave the horse no tendency to any subsequent incurrence of the disorder; (2) a slight disorder (e.g., a mere cold) on a horse at the time of a sale, not calculated permanently to diminish its usefulness, & from which it ultimately recovers, is not an unsoundness constituting a breach of the warranty.—BOLDEN v. BROGDEN (1838), 2 Mood. & R. 113.

435. ——— ———.]—A cough at the time of the sale of a horse warranted sound is an unsoundness & breach of the warranty, though it be afterwards cured without any permanent injury to the horse.—COATES v. STEPHENS (1838), 2 Mood. & R. 157.

*Annotation:—*Folld. Kiddell v. Burnard (1842), 9 M. & W. 668.

436. ——— Crib-biting.]—Crib-biting is no such unsoundness in a horse to entitle a purchaser, who has bought under a general warranty, to maintain an action for the breach of it, upon this fault only.—BROENNENBURGH v. HAYCOCK (1817), Holt, N. P. 630.

437. ——— ———.]—Crib-biting, which has not yet produced disease, or alteration of structure, is not an unsoundness, but a vice, under a warranty that a horse is sound & free from vice.—SCHOLEFIELD v. ROBB (1839), 2 Mood. & R. 210.

438. ——— Seeds of disease at date of sale.]—Certain sheep, apparently healthy & sound in every respect, were sold, warranted sound. Two months the quality of the foxes to be such that as the result of breeding in the manner indicated one good black male would be found amongst the progeny:—Held: the contract could not be construed as an undertaking on deft. part to insure the lives of the foxes.—BAIRD v. CLARK (1914), 7 O. W. N. 535; 19 D. L. R. 762.—CAN.

y. Sale of foxes to be of certain parentage.]—G. agreed to sell two black foxes "to be the offspring of certain foxes purchased by the vendor from Charles Dalton & W. R. Oulton in 1911":—Held: the two foxes to be sold must have both Dalton & Oulton parentage, & G. could not be compelled to deliver a pair bred from the Dalton strain only.—COFFIN v. GILLIES (1915), 7 O. W. N. 354; 51 S. C. R. 539; 24 D. L. R. 317.—CAN.

z. Warranty "against all defects."]—In an exchange of horses, warranty against all defects means warranty against all defects apparent or unapparent sickness of any kind, & everything which renders the animal useless.—FORTIER v. TANQUAY (1913), Q. R. 44 S. C. 440.—CAN.

afterwards a great number of them died. There was nothing to connect the disease of which they died with their previous condition, but it was, in the opinion of farmers & breeders, an hereditary disease called the goggles, & incapable of discovery until its fatal appearance:—Held: this disease was an unsoundness existing at the time of the sale, the jury being of opinion that it existed in the constitution of the sheep at that time.—JOLIFF v. BENDELL (1824), Ry. & M. 136.

439. ——— “Nerved” horse.]—A horse sold with a warranty of soundness had been “nerved,” i.e., a nerve leading from the foot up the leg had been severed. There was evidence by farriers that, although horses which had been so treated often went free from lameness & continued so for years, such a horse was, in their opinion, unsound & could not be trusted for very severe work, & that it was an organic defect:—Held: this was a breach of the warranty.

A horse in which there is an organic defect cannot be considered sound. Sound means perfect, & a horse deprived of a useful nerve is imperfect & has not that capacity of service which is stipulated for in a warranty (BEST, C.J.).—BEST v. OSBORN (1825), 2 C. & P. 74; Ry. & M. 290, N. P.

440. ——— Splint—Subsequent lameness.]—Deft. warranted sound wind & limb at the time of the bargain, & sold for £90, a racehorse which had broken down in training, & was affected with a splint. These circumstances, but for which the horse would have been worth £500, were disclosed to pltf.:—Held: (1) this warranty did not import that the horse was fit for the purposes of an ordinary horse; (2) defects apparent at the time of the warranty were not included in it. Seem: the warranty being restricted to the time of the bargain, pltf. could not sue in respect of the horse breaking down afterwards.—MARGETSON v. WRIGHT (1831), 7 Bing. 603; 5 Moo. & P. 606; 131 E. R. 233.

441. ——— ———.]—Deft. warranted a horse sound wind & limb at the time of the contract. The horse had at that time a splint on the off-foreleg which did not then inconvenience it, but, by reason of its subsequent growth & consequent pressure upon a sinew, it caused lameness in a few months. In an action for breach of the warranty the jury were directed to say whether or not the horse was unsound at the time of the contract, or, if unsound, whether that unsoundness arose from the splint in question. The jury said “that, although the horse exhibited no symptoms of lameness at the time when the contract was made, it had then upon it the seeds of unsoundness, arising from the splint”:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a verdict upon this finding.—MARGETSON v. WRIGHT (1832), 8 Bing. 454; 1 Moo. & S. 622; 1 L. J. C. P. 128; 131 E. R. 469.

442. ——— ———.]—Deft. sold to pltf. a horse, but before so doing pointed out to pltf. a splint it then had. Deft. afterwards gave a written warranty to pltf. that the horse was sound. It soon afterwards became lame from that splint:—Held: deft. was liable on the warranty.—SMITH v. O'BRYAN (BRYANT) (1864), 11 L. T. 346; 10 Jur. N. S. 1107; 13 W. R. 79.

A horse, warranted sound, was so ill-formed from one of its forelegs being turned out, as to be incapable of work to any extent without cutting so as to produce lameness:—Held: the horse could not be considered unsound so long as it was uninjured, but when injury was produced by the badness of its action, that injury constituted unsoundness.—DICKINSON v. FOLLET (1833), 1 Mood. & R. 299.

Annotation:—Folld. Brown v. Elkington (1841), 8 M. & W. 132.

444. ——— Curby hocks.]—Defective formation, or badness of shape, which has not produced lameness at the time of the sale of a horse, although it may render it more liable to become lame at some future time, e.g., “curby hocks,” is not a breach of a general warranty of unsoundness.—BROWN v. ELKINGTON (1841), 8 M. & W. 132; 10 L. J. Ex. 336; 151 E. R. 979.

Annotation:—Folld. Bailey v. Forrest (1845), 2 Car. & Kir. 131.

445. ——— Thin soles.]—A horse was sold with a warranty of soundness, but had at the time “thin soled” feet. Some time after the sale the horse fell lame:—Held: the mere fact that the horse was “thin soled” at the time of sale did not constitute unsoundness, & mere defective formation not producing lameness at that time was not a breach of the warranty.—BAILEY v. FORREST (1845), 2 Car. & Kir. 131.

446. ——— Congenital defect of eye.]—A warranty of soundness, on the sale of a horse, is broken by a malformation, existing from the birth of the horse, which, at the time of the sale, renders the horse less fit for reasonable use, e.g., an extraordinary convexity of the cornea of the eye, producing shortsightedness, in consequence of which the horse is liable to shy. Such defect in the eye is not so patent a defect that a purchaser with express warranty is bound to notice it.—HOLLIDAY (HALLIDAY) v. MORGAN (1858), 1 E. & E. 1; 28 L. J. Q. B. 9; 32 L. T. O. S. 73; 5 Jur. N. S. 69; 7 W. R. 7; 120 E. R. 808.

447. ——— Spavin.]—Bone spavin in the hock is unsoundness in a horse, & is a breach of a warranty of soundness, whether it produces lameness apparent at the time of the warranty or not, & though it may not produce lameness for years after.—WATSON v. DENTON (1835), 7 C. & P. 85.

448. “Good drawer & would pull quietly in harness” —No evidence of pulling quietly.]—Proof that a horse is a good drawer only will not satisfy a warranty that it is a good drawer & would pull quietly in harness.—COLTHERD (COULTHERD) v. PUNCHEON (1822), 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 10; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 2.

449. “Quiet in harness.”]—Although a person may disclaim against making a warranty of a horse, yet, if he give it a character for a particular quality, as by saying that it is quiet in harness, & do it in such manner as reasonably to make an impression in the mind of a buyer that it is generally quiet in harness, he will be bound by that representation, & if it is not true, an action will lie to recover back the price of the horse.—HORT v. NEWRY (LORD) (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 237.

B. Limitations of Warranty.

450. Horse warranted sound—No warranty of age.]—If a horse sold at a public auction be warranted sound & six years old, & it be one of the conditions of sale that it shall be deemed sound unless returned in two days, this condition applies only to the warranty of soundness.

Where a horse sold with such a warranty was discovered to be twelve years old ten days after the sale & was then offered to the seller, who refused to take it:—Held: an action might be maintained by the buyer against the seller, & his right to recover was not affected by his having sold the horse after offering it to deft.—BUCHANAN v. PARNSHAW (1788), 2 Term Rep. 745; 100 E. R. 401.

Annotations:—Distd. Best v. Osborn (1825), 2 C. & P. 74. Reid. Chapman v. Gwyther (1866), 7 B. & S. 417.

451. Horse sold by pedigree—No warranty of age.]—If a man, not knowing the age of a horse, but having a written pedigree which he received with it, sell it as a horse of the age stated on the pedigree, at the same time stating he knows nothing of it but what he has learnt from the pedigree, he is not liable to an action, when it appears that the pedigree is false.—DUNLOP v. WAUGH (1792), Peake, 167.

452. "Constantly driven in plough warranted"—Warranty of soundness only.]—Pltf. brought an action to recover the price of a horse sold under the following warranty, viz., "a black gelding about five years old, has been constantly driven in the plough—warranted." It was proved the horse was sound, but there was no evidence that it had been constantly driven in the plough:—Held: the terms of the warranty applied only to the soundness of the horse, & not to the nature of its employment.—RICHARDSON v. BROWN (1823), 1 Bing. 344; 8 Moore, C. P. 338; 2 L. J. O. S. C. P. 7, 130 E. R. 138.

Annotation:—Appld. Budd v. Fairmaner (1831), 8 Bing. 48.

453. "Quiet to ride & drive & warranted sound"—Warranty of soundness only.]—A memorandum acknowledging the receipt of money "for a black horse, rising five years, quiet to ride & drive, & warranted sound up to this date, or subject to the examination of a veterinary surgeon":—Held: not a warranty that the horse was quiet to ride & drive.—ANTHONY v. HALSTEAD (1877), 37 L. T. 433.

454. "Quiet in harness"—No warranty as to health.]—Pltf. bought a horse at a horse repository, the horse being warranted in the sale catalogue as quiet in harness. Two days after the sale the horse was found to be suffering from influenza:—Held: there was no breach of warranty, as the warranty referred to the behaviour of the horse & not to its state of health.—BUSH v. FREEMAN (1887), 3 T. L. R. 449.

455. "Clever hack & hunter"—No warranty of soundness.]—A description, in auction sale particulars, of a horse as "a clever hack & hunter" does not amount to a warranty of soundness.—CLEOBURY v. TATTERSALL (undated), Dixon's Law of the Farm (6th ed.), 352.

456. Time limited for duration—Condition limiting time for notice of unsoundness.]—Pltf. bought a horse, warranted sound, by private contract, at a repository. At the time of sale there was a board fixed to the wall of the repository, having certain rules painted upon it, one of which was that a warranty of soundness, there given, should remain in force till noon on the day after the sale, when the sale should become complete, & the seller's responsibility terminate, unless a notice, & surgeon's certificate, of unsoundness, were given in the meantime. The rules were not particularly referred to at the time of the sale & warranty in question. The horse proved unsound, but no complaint was made till after noon on the following day. The unsoundness was of a nature likely not to be immediately discovered; some evidence was given to show that deft. knew of it, & the horse was shown at the sale in circumstances favourable for concealing it:—Held: (1) there was sufficient proof of pltf. having had notice of the rules at the time of the sale, to render them binding on him; (2) the rule in question was such as a seller might reasonably impose; (3) the facts did not show such fraud or artifice in him as would render the condition inoperative, & pltf.'s action failed.—BYWATER v. RICHARDSON (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 508; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 748; 3 L. J. K. B. 164; 110 E. R. 1301.

457. ———.]—The declaration stated that, in consideration that pltf. would buy of deft. a mare at a certain price, deft. promised that she was sound, & averred as a breach that she was not sound. Deft. pleaded that the mare was sent to a repository for the sale of horses, to be sold according to certain rules, which were that "a warranty of soundness should remain in force until noon of the day after the sale, when it would be complete, & the responsibility of the seller terminate, unless in the meantime a notice & certificate of unsoundness were given"; that the sale took place subject to the rules, & that same were agreed to by the parties, & that such notice & certificate were not given within the time limited:—Held: the plea was good, & did not amount to the general issue.—SMART v. HYDE (1841), 8 M. & W. 723; 1 Dowl. N. S. 60; 10 L. J. Ex. 479; 151 E. R. 1231.

458. ——— "Warranted sound for one month"—Date of sale or delivery.]—Action for damages for breach of warranty of soundness. Deft., when selling two horses to pltf. on June 5, signed the following document: "Bought of [deft.] a brown horse, six years old, warranted sound, for £180; also a bay horse five years old, for £90, warranted sound for one month." The horses were delivered on June 12, & pltf. sent deft. a cheque payable to order, with the following memorandum written on the back, intending it to be signed by deft.: "This cheque is received by me for a brown gelding, price £180, also a bay gelding, price £90, both of which animals I warrant sound & right for one month from the date of delivery." Deft. indorsed the cheque, but did not sign the memorandum. On July 8 pltf. found that the bay horse was unsound, & on July 9 he wrote to deft. informing him of this:—Held: (1) the words "warranted sound for one month" meant that complaint must be made of any unsoundness within one month from the date of sale, & as the complaint was not made in time, pltf. could not recover; (2) the memorandum on the cheque was no part of the contract.—CHAPMAN v. GWYTHYR (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 463; 7 B. & S. 417; 35 L. J. Q. B. 142; 14 L. T. 477; 30 J. P. 582; 12 Jur. N. S. 522; 14 W. R. 671.

459. Warranty relating to future—No action for deceit.]—If I sell a horse to one & warrant it will carry him thirty leagues in a day, if the horse does not do it, I am not liable to an action of deceit, for one ought to warrant such a thing as exists at the time of the warranty, for one cannot warrant a thing which is to come (CHOKE, J.).—ANON. (1471), Y. B., 11 Edw. 4, fo. 6, pl. 10.

460. Sheep warranted sound for year.]—In an action upon a warranty by a vendor that certain sheep were sound, & that they should be sound for the space of a year, it was moved that the action did not lie because the warranty was impossible to be performed by the party, as it was only the act of God to make them sound for a year:—Held: it was not impossible, any more than a warranty of a safe return of a ship, which was the usual course between merchants.—KING v. BRAINE (1596), Owen, 60; 74 E. R. 899.

462. Exchange of animals for money consideration—Form of action.]—If money & a horse are given in exchange for another horse warranted sound, which was unsound at the time, an action for money had & received is not a proper action to try the warranty. Nor will trover lie for the horse given in exchange, because the property is altered.—POWER v. WELLS (1778), 2 Cowp. 818; 98 E. R. 1379.

463. ———.]—A purchaser with a warranty, on a breach thereof, has no right, without the assent of the vendor, to return the article purchased, & to bring an action for the price; but his remedy is by an action for damages upon the warranty.

Pltf. gave deft. a horse, worth £60, & £30 in money, for a horse of deft.'s, worth £90, warranted sound, & on deft.'s horse turning out to be unsound, sent it back to deft., demanding the return of his own horse & the £30, & on refusal arrested & held deft. to bail for the £90:—Held: deft. entitled to his costs for an arrest without reasonable or probable cause, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46.—*GOMPERTZ v. 464. ## PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—A.

466 i. Alternative remedies.]—Horses were returned as unsound by pltf., pursuant to an alleged agreement, in the event of their turning out unsound, & were accepted & retained by deft.:—Held: pltf. entitled to succeed in an action for a return of the price paid for the horses, & need not sue for breach of the warranty.—HOLT v. BROOKS (1913), 24 W. L. R. 944; 11 D. L. R. 838.—CAN.

467 i. ——— Rescission or damages.]—Deft. bought a mare which turned out to be unsound:—Held: (1) the buyer having acted promptly upon discovering the defect could reject the mare; (2) the seller not having received the mare back when she was offered to him, the buyer entitled to resell the mare, recovering as damages the difference between the price the mare was sold for by the seller & her real value, a reasonable sum for her keep, the buyer not having kept the animal longer than was necessary to effect a sale to the best advantage, & expenses.—HOGG v. PARK (1893), 3 Terr. L. R. 171.—CAN.

a. Delay—Effect of.]—A. & B. exchanged horses, & B. gave A. a note for difference in the exchange. After two years, during which nothing appeared to be done by either party, B. was sued upon the note by A.:—Held: B. could not set up as a defence that the horse he received was unsound, although A. had declared him free from fault &

466. Alternative remedies.]—If a person buys a horse which is warranted & it turns out to be unsound at the time, he may keep the horse & bring an action on the warranty, or he may return the horse & bring an action for the full money paid, but in the latter case the seller has a right to expect that the horse will be returned in the same state as when sold.—*CURTIS v. 467. Rescission or damages.]—In an action for breach of warranty on the sale of a pair of horses, which deft. had warranted were five years old, when in fact they were only four years old, & which were not returned by pltf. within a specified time:—Held: (1) if pltf. would rescind the contract entirely he must do it within a reasonable time; (2) as he had not done so, he could only recover damages; (3) the question was what was the difference of the value of horses of four or five years old.

The difference in cases of this kind is this, where the pltf. is entitled to recover his whole money he must show that the contract is at an end, but if it continue open he can only recover damages, & then he must state the special contract & the breach of it (BULLER, J.).—ANON. (undated), cited in TOWERS v. BARRETT (1786), 1 Term Rep. 136; 99 E. R. 136.

468. ——— Contract or tort.]—Upon the treaty for the sale of a mare, deft., being asked whether the mare was sound, replied that she was to the best of his knowledge. Upon being asked whether he would warrant her, deft. said "I never warrant; I would not even warrant myself." There was evidence that the mare was unsound & that deft. knew it. In an action of assumpsit upon breach of warranty the jury found a verdict for pltf. Deft. having moved for a new trial on the ground that the action should have been in tort, & not upon contract:—Held: although the action might have been in tort for the deceit, yet an action lay on the contract as deft. gave a qualified warranty that to the best of his knowledge the mare was sound.—WOOD v. SMITH (1829), 4 C. & P. 45; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 124; Mood. & M. 539; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 50.

b. ———.]—On June 15 a mare was sold to a horse-dealer with a warrant of soundness. On June 18 & July 4 the purchaser intimated to the seller by letter that the mare was unsound, & called upon him to take her back, which he refused to do, denying the unsoundness. She was kept in the purchaser's stable for fifty-seven days, when there was intimated to the seller a petition to the sheriff for warrant of sale, under which she was sold:—Held: the purchaser's claim for repetition of the price was barred by his failure to place the animal in neutral custody, & his delay in having recourse to judicial proceedings.—*M'Bey v. B. Defences available where Seller brings Action for Price.

471. Recovery of true value only.]—Pltf. had sold to deft. a horse, warranted sound, for 12 guineas, of which deft. had paid three. In fact, the horse was not sound, & deft. refusing to pay any more, an action was brought for the value of the horse sold to recover the difference. It was proved that the horse, at the time of the sale to deft., was not worth more than £1 11s. 6d. & deft. afterwards sold it for £1 10s.:—Held: pltf. could only recover the value, & more having been paid to him by deft., pltf. was nonsuited.—KING v. BOSTON (1794), 7 East, 481, n.; 103 E. R. 186.

472. Effect of purchaser keeping animal & diminishing its value.]—To an action for the recovery of the price of a horse, it is no defence that the warranty was untrue, if deft. was, after the sale, apprised of the fault of the horse, & did not return him, but afterwards, by the application of medicines, or otherwise, lessened the value of the horse, from what it was at the time of the sale.—CURTIS v. 473. Animals unsound on delivery—Defects apparent at time of sale.]—Pltf., after telling deft. that one of two horses he was about to sell had a cold, agreed to deliver both at the end of a fortnight, sound & free from blemish. The horses were delivered, one with a cough & the other with a swelled leg, a fault that was also apparent at the time of the sale. In an action for the price, a verdict having been found for deft.:—Held: a new trial must be refused.—LIDDARD v. KAIN (CAIN) (1824), 2 Bing. 183; 9 Moore, C. P. 356; 3 L. J. O. S. C. P. 246; 130 E. R. 276.

474. Reduction of damages.]—A person who has purchased a horse warranted sound, sold it again & then repurchased it, cannot, by reason of the unsoundness of the animal, resist an action by the first vendor for the price, but he may give the breach of warranty in evidence in reduction of damages.—STREET v. c. Bill of exchange given for price—Breach of warranty no defence.]—In an action to recover the amount of a bill of exchange, drawn by deft. in favour of pltf., for the price of a horse, the warranty & unsoundness are no defence to the action.—CRIPPS v. d. Promissory note given for price—Compensation paid under Animals Contagious Diseases Act, 1903.]—Action on a promissory note given for the price of horses, which were unsound & had to be killed under the above Act after four months' user by deft., who received $146 compensation under the above Act:—Held: deft.'s user of the horses must be set off against his expenses of

e. — Counterclaim for damages for breach of warranty.]—Action on promissory note given for the price of a mare. C. Return of Animal by Purchaser.

475. Not permissible—Unless express stipulation—Or fraud.]—A person who has purchased a horse warranted sound, sold it again & then repurchased it, cannot, on discovery that the horse was unsound when first sold, require the original vendor to take it back again, nor can he by reason of the unsoundness resist an action by such vendor for the price, but he may give the breach of warranty in evidence in reduction of damages. Seemle: the purchaser of a specific chattel under warranty, having once accepted it, can in no instance return the chattel or resist an action for the price on the ground of breach of warranty, unless in case of fraud or express agreement authorising the return, or unless the vendor has taken back the chattel. But where the contract is executory only when the chattel is received, the vendor may rescind the contract if the goods do not answer the warranty, provided he has not kept them longer than was necessary for the purpose of trial or exercised the dominion of ownership over them.—STREET v. BLAY (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 456; 109 E. R. 1212.

Pltf. did not then know of the horse's defects & refused, saying he knew nothing of T., & had bought the horse of deft.:—Held: this was no rescission of the contract or waiver of the warranty.—BEST v. OSBORN (1825), 2 C. & P. 74, N. P.

481. Condition for return within limited period—Whether sufficient notice of, to buyer.]—Deft. sold a horse by auction at his repository, & it was warranted sound. One of the conditions of sale posted up in the sale room was that in case any unsoundness were discovered, the horse must be returned before the evening of the second day after the sale. At the time of sale deft. announced that the conditions of sale were as usual. The sale took place on Wednesday & pltf., who alleged that the horse was unsound, did not return it until Saturday. In an action on the warranty:—Held: (1) sufficient notice of the condition had been given; (2) as pltf. had not returned the horse within the two days, he must be nonsuited.—MESNARD v. ALDRIDGE (1801), 3 Esp. 271.

482. ———.]—The terms of a warranty were proved by witnesses, who also saw a notice board on deft.'s premises stating that horses warranted sound would not be taken in if not returned within six days:—Held: (1) the jury should consider whether this notice formed any part of the original contract; (2) if it did not, it would not avail deft.—BEST v. 483. ——— Effect of accidental injury before return.]—Pltf. on Monday, Mar. 13, 1871, bought a horse of deft. warranted to have been hunted with the Bicester hounds. By a condition of the contract he was to be at liberty to return the horse if it did not answer its description up to the Wednesday evening following the sale. Previous to removing it from deft.'s premises he was told by the groom, who had charge of it, but who was not in deft.'s employment, that it had not, nor had it in fact, been hunted with the Bicester hounds. ROBERTSON (1838), 6 S. 1014.—SCOT.

477 iii. ———.]—A horse was alleged to have been sold with a warranty that it was quiet to ride & drive:—Held: assuming such a warranty to have been given, the buyer was not entitled to reject the horse as disconform to warranty, in respect that upon its first trial by the buyer, on a strange road & with a strange vehicle & driver, it had shown fright by rearing & stopping at the smoke & noise of a rail-

477 iv. ———.]—A contractor purchased a horse, warranted "correct in wind & work." On being tried it was very unruly & plunged violently, & ran into a mill dam, where it was drowned:—Held: as the purchaser would have been entitled to reject the horse as disconform to warranty, & his inability to do so was due to the seller's breach of warranty, he was not liable for the price.—KINNEAR v. BRODIE (1901), 3 F. 540; 38 Sc. L. R. 336; 8 S. L. T. 475.—SCOT.

477 v. ———.]—A horse was sold under a warranty that it was a good worker & sound in wind. It was stipulated that its buyers should have a week's trial of the horse. They returned it within the week on the ground that it was unsound in limb:—Held: there was a completed contract of sale between the parties, & the buyers entitled to return the horse within the week if disconform to warranty, but not otherwise.—*CRANSTON v. theless took the horse away. Whilst it was in his possession, though not through any neglect or default on his part, it met with an accident which depreciated its value. He returned it before the Wednesday evening & brought an action to recover the price he had paid for it:—Held: (1) pltf.'s conduct in removing the horse, after the information given him by the groom, did not deprive him of his right under the contract to return the horse; (2) his right to return it was unaffected by an accident having happened to it whilst it was in his possession, without neglect or default on his part.—*HEAD v. 484. —Pltf. bought a horse of deft., warranted quiet to ride. One of the conditions of the contract was to the effect that, if the buyer contended that the horse did not correspond with the warranty, it must be returned on the second day after the sale, & that the non-return within the time limited should be a bar to any claim on account of any breach of warranty. The horse was removed by pltf., & while being ridden, fell, & was so injured that it could not safely be returned on the second day after the sale, but pltf. gave notice to deft. on the day that the animal was not according to warranty, & was unfit to travel:—Held: in these circumstances the non-return of the horse within the period stipulated by the condition was no bar to an action for breach of the warranty.—CHAPMAN v. WITHERS (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 824; 57 L. J. Q. B. 457; 37 W. R. 29; 4 T. L. R. 465.

485. Horse returned to seller—Subsequent rescission of contract by seller.—In an action for breach of a warranty of a horse, pltf. failed to prove a warranty at the time of sale, but it appeared that he had returned the horse to deft., who stated that he would keep it without prejudice, but he afterwards used it & offered to sell it to a third person:—Held: by so doing he rescinded the original contract of sale, & the jury rightly found a verdict for pltf. for the sum paid for the horse.—LONG v. PRESTON (1828), 2 Moo. & P. 262; 7 L. J. O. S. C. P. 14.

484 i. Condition for return within limited period—Death of horse before return.—Deft. sold to pltf. a horse & warranted it sound. On the same occasion it was agreed between the parties that, if pltf. did not like the horse, he might return it at any time before the Tuesday following. The horse was unsound, & died in pltf.'s possession three weeks afterwards:—Held: the warranty & the agreement respecting the return of the horse were distinct contracts, & pltf. might recover on the warranty, although he had not returned the horse within the time limited by the agreement.—*MAGROVE v. 486 i. Damages recoverable.—A horse was sold for breeding purposes & warranted to be an imported Clydesdale:—Held: on breach of warranty, the measure of damages was the difference in value between an imported horse & a Canadian-bred one.—TAYLOR v. GARDINER (1892), 8 Man. L. R. 310.—CAN.

486 ii. —A mare was warranted to be standard-bred, & the seller agreed to furnish her pedigree to the purchaser. In an action for breach of the warranty & breach of contract in not supplying the pedigree, the trial judge assessed at $200 pltf.'s damages for breach of deft.'s promise to furnish a pedigree, whereby pltf. was unable to register the mare's colts in the registry for standard horses, & so lost profits:—Held: these damages were too remote, & pltf. entitled as damages only to the diminution in value of the mare herself by the failure to furnish the pedigree. Semble: if pltf. had, before buying, informed deft. he was buying the mare for the purpose of breeding registerable stock, the case might have been different.—*STEINACKER v. 486 iii. —]—Deft. sold to pltf. diseased bees, which had been warranted "clean & all right":—Held: the damages should not be limited to a return of the purchase money, the natural result of deft.'s act being to spread the disease among other colonies of bees.—MCKAY v. DAVEY (1913), 28 O. L. R. 322; 4 O. W. N. 903; 12 D. L. R. 458.—CAN.

486 iv. —]—In an agreement for the sale of a warranted horse:—Held: the purchaser entitled to damages equal to the amount paid where the horse had to be returned not being as warranted.—

D. Action for Damages.

486. Damages recoverable.—Upon breach of warranty of a horse, if the horse is returned, the measure of damages is the price paid for him. If the horse is not returned, the measure of damages is the difference between his real value & the price given.—CASWELL v. COARE (1809), 1 Taunt. 566; 127 E. R. 954.

487. Costs & damages paid by buyer on resale.—Pltf. bought a horse with warranty from deft. & resold it with warranty. On being sued thereon by his vendee he offered the defence of the action to deft., his vendor, who gave no directions as to the action, which pltf. lost:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover the damages & costs which he had to pay in that action as part of the damage occasioned by deft.'s breach of warranty.—*LEWIS v. 488. Liability improperly incurred.—Pltf. purchased a horse of deft., with a warranty of soundness, & sold it with a like warranty to J. S., who some months afterwards returned the horse, finding it to have been unsound at the time of the sale. Pltf. declining to take it back, J. S. brought an action on the warranty. Pltf. gave deft. notice that the horse was returned to him as unsound & of action brought. Deft. disregarding this notice, pltf. defended the action brought against him by J. S., & failed. In an action against deft. on his warranty, the jury finding that pltf. might, by a reasonable examination of the horse, have discovered that it was unsound at the time he sold it to J. S.:—Held: pltf. not entitled to recover as special damage the costs incurred by him in the defence of the former action, such defence being in the circumstances rash & improvident.—*WRIGHTUP v. 490. — Until resale.]—In assumpsit for breach of warranty of soundness of a horse, deft. having refused to take back the horse, pltf. is entitled to recover for the keep, for such time only as would be required to resell the horse to the best advantage.—M'KENZIE v. HANCOCK (1826), Ry. & M. 436.

491. — —.]—If the purchaser of a horse on warranty discovers it to be unsound, he should immediately tender it back to the seller, & if the seller refuse to take it, should sell it as soon as possible for the best price that can be procured. The seller is liable for its keep in the meanwhile for a reasonable length of time. What length of time is reasonable in any particular case is a question for a jury. In an action upon such warranty, if deft. wishes to reduce pltf.'s claim for keep on the ground that the time was unreasonable, he must make that point at the trial. If he then defends solely on the ground that there was no breach of warranty, & the jury give damages in respect both of the price & keep, he cannot move to reduce them because the judge did not leave it to the jury whether or not the horse was kept an unreasonable time.—CHESTERMAN v. CHINNOCK (1835), 7 C. & P. 169.

493. Loss of profits on resale.]—In an action for breach of warranty of a horse sold as sound, the special damage alleged in the declaration was pltf.'s expense incurred by reason of the warranty, & his loss of gains & profits in reselling the horse. The only plea was a denial of the unsoundness. Pltf. had bought the horse of deft. for £100, & had been offered £140 for it ; but, the horse proving unsound, pltf. had been obliged to give up the bargain, & to sell it for £49 7s.—Held : pltf. entitled to recover the difference between the price at which he had sold & the actual value of the horse, if it had been sound at the time of such sale, & the price offered for the horse while in pltf.'s hands was a matter to be left to the jury as a measure of the value.—*COX v. 496 i. Diseased cow—Infection of other cows.]—A. sued B. by civil bill process, for having sold to pltf. a cow, warranted sound, but which was then unsound, by reason of an infectious disease. The civil bill then assigned as special damage that four other cows of pltf. became thereby infected by it, & died. B., having been decreed in this suit, appealed, & upon the hearing of the appeal, relied upon a decree made against himself at a former sessions at the suit of A., immediately after the death of the particular cow, which was warranted sound, for the breach of the above warranty. By that decree, deft. had been ordered to pay £6, being the value of the deceased cow.—Held : inasmuch as both actions were framed in contract, & were for substantially the same cause of action, although the special damage complained of was not identical, pltf. was not entitled to recover in the present action. Semble : the result would have been the same had the second action been framed expressly in tort for the consequential damage.—GARDINER v. MATHEWSON (1853), 6 Ir. Jur. 147.—IR.

m. Diseased sheep—Infection of plaintiff's land.]—Ten ewes, apparently healthy & sound in every respect, were sold warranted sound. A few days after, the disease of scab developed.

494. —.]—The declaration on breach of warranty of a horse alleged by way of special damage that pltf. had resold the horse at an advanced price ; that the horse had been returned to him, & that he had lost all the profit which he would have derived from the resale.—Held : on this declaration pltf. could not recover the difference between the two prices, it not being averred that the increased value of the horse was owing to any outlay by him since it had been in his possession. Qu. : if it had been so averred & proved.—CLARE v. MAYNARD (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 519 ; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 701 ; Will. Woll. & Dav. 274 ; 6 L. J. K. B. 138 ; 112 E. R. 198.

495. Set off by seller for keep.]—In an action of assumpsit for money had & received on the warranty of a horse, deft. pleaded (inter alia), as to part, a set-off for the keep. At the trial it appeared that the horse remained in deft.'s possession from Aug. in one year to Feb. in the next, pltf. refusing to take it, & deft. sought to deduct the value of its keep during that period from the amount claimed, but the trial judge told the jury that he had no right to keep the horse without the authority of pltf., & that he ought to have sold it, at all events, within a reasonable time, c.g., ten days or a fortnight. A verdict having been given for pltf. for the full amount, the ct. declined to grant a rule for a new trial.—HETHERINGTON v. WOODIN (1845), 6 L. T. O. S. 119.

496. Diseased cow—Infection of other cows.]—Deft., a cattle dealer, sold a cow to pltf., warranting it to be free from infectious disease, whereas in fact at the time of the sale the cow had the foot & mouth disease. Pltf. placed it with other cows who caught the disease & died. In an action on the warranty containing a count for false representation, the jury found that deft. knew that pltf. was a farmer, & that in the ordinary course of his business he would put the cow with other cows ; but the count for false representation was abandoned.—Held : on the warranty pltf. was entitled to recover as damages the value of the cows infected as well as that of the cow which deft. had warranted.—SMITH v. GREEN (1875), 1 C. P. D. 92 ; 45 L. J. Q. B. 28 ; 33 L. T. 572 ; 40 J. P. 103 ; 24 W. R. 142.

One of the sheep died, & pltf.'s lands were proclaimed from Feb. until June. Besides the loss of the sheep pltf. claimed damages by reason of his being unable to let his land owing to its being proclaimed by the local authority.—Held : damages should be awarded him on that head.—*STONEV v. PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—E. n. "Gray Percheron stallion" — Sale void on failure to provide pedigree papers.]—K. sold a stallion to G., & 3 lien notes were given, each of which stated that it was "given for a gray Percheron stallion." One of the notes also contained a clause providing that it should be void, if K. failed to provide G. "with the necessary papers (pedigree) to get a pure-bred certificate" before the end of 1907.—Held : there was no evidence to justify a finding that there was a breach of warranty ranted "a thorough broke horse for a gig," P. representing at the time that the horse had been sent to him to be sold by a gentleman from England. For about two months from the time of the purchase G. himself had no opportunity to drive the horse in a gig, but during that interval the horse was often driven in a gig by others, & performed well. Then G. himself on two occasions drove the horse in a gig, on both of which occasions the horse performed ill, kicking out behind & running forcibly to the side of the road, & overturning the gig in a ditch. P. refusing to take back the horse, G. brought an action for the price & damages. It appeared in evidence that P. had got the horse from A., who parted with it on account of its having on one occasion when driven in a gig without any apparent cause kicked out violently behind & broken the gig. It was proved, however, that the horse, while in the possession of A., of P., & of G. himself had been very often driven in a gig, & on those occasions found steady & safe. It was in evidence likewise that G. had lashed the horse & checked it at the same time, on the occasion when his gig was overturned. No other evidence was given as to G.'s experience or skill in driving:—Held: (1) the horse answered the warranty at the time when it was sold, & its bad demeanour in the hands of G. was owing to want of skill in G., & judgment should be given for P.; (2) if the horse answered the warranty at the time it was sold, the misrepresentation as to the place from which it came would not invalidate the sale, but it was a material circumstance with respect to the question of costs.—GEDDES v. PENNINGTON (1817), 5 Dow, 159; 3 E. R. 1287.

499. Acts of vice subsequent to sale.]—Pltf. bought a mare warranted quiet to ride & quiet in single & double harness & free from vice. In an action on the warranty pltf. produced evidence of acts of vice by kicking, which took place one month, six weeks, & five months respectively after the time of sale:—Held: (1) this was evidence on which the jury might not unreasonably find for pltf.; (2) delay in making a complaint might be some evidence of the unreasonableness of the complaint, but should not prevail against positive evidence that the horse did not answer the warranty.—GILL v. LOMER & Co. (1888), 5 T. L. R. 76, C. A.

500. Restiveness due to defective harness.]—In an action for breach of warranty that a horse was quiet, it appeared that the horse was tried in a cart at the time of sale & was then quiet, but that when it was tried by pltf. on the day after the sale it was very restive. Pltf. offered to send the horse back, but deft. refused to receive it. There was evidence for deft. that the horse had always been quiet, & he contended that if it was restive after the sale it was from bad usage. When pltf. tried the horse the collar was too small & a new one was obtained; & when the horse was ultimately resold there was an old wound on its neck such as would be made by a collar:—Held: pltf. had not proved that the horse was not quiet.—LONDON & PROVINCIAL LAUNDRY Co., LTD. v. BALLARD (1888), 4 T. L. R. 233.

501. Surprise—New trial.]—In an action on a warranty of a horse, it is no ground for a new trial that deft. was taken by surprise by the proof of a particular kind of unsoundness, of which he had no previous notice.—ATTERBURY v. FAIRMANNER (1823), 8 Moore, C. P. 32; 1 L. J. O. S. C. P. 63.

502. Variance of pleading & proof.]—In an action of assumpsit upon the warranty of a horse, the consideration alleged was an agreement to buy the horse for £12, whereas the proof was of an agreement to buy two horses at a fixed price for both. There were two separate contracts for the particular horses; one was unsound, & was sold without a warranty, & the other separately, with a warranty. The ct. refused to grant a new trial.—KITE v. LOWE (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 177.

SHEWARD* (1806), 8 East, 7; 103 E. R. 246.

was that pltf. would purchase the horse for £63, but the consideration, as proved, was that pltf. would pay that sum, & if the horse was lucky, would give deft. £5 more, or the buying of another horse:—Held: no variance, the conditional promise omitted in the declaration being too vague to be legally enforced, & not amounting, in point of law, to a promise.—*GUTHING (GETHING) v. At the trial, it was proved that pltf., a tailor, agreed to give deft. for the horse £55, & a new pair of breeches, value £1 16s. It was contended that the consideration for the warranty was not correctly stated:—Held: although it might have been more proper to have described the contract for so much money & a pair of breeches, yet there was no variance.—*SAXTY v. a. What must be pleaded.]—On motion to set aside paragraphs of a summons & plaint averring that deft. knowing that a horse was unsound, by then fraudulently "concealing from pltf. that the horse was unsound," & representing to him that it was sound, induced pltf., who was ignorant of such unsoundness, to buy the horse:—Held: the words "concealing from pltf. that the horse was unsound" should be struck out.—TIMPSON v. DALTON (1874), 3 I. L. T. 184.—IR.

d. What must be proved.]—Where pltf. alleges that deft., knowing the horse to be unsound, falsely & fraudulently represented the animal to be sound, & pltf. purchased the horse from deft. on the faith of the truth of such representations, it must be established beyond doubt that these facts were true to allow pltf. to recover.—TEASEL v. PRYOR (1868), 12 L. C. J. 108.—CAN.

His son bid against deft. until $60 was reached. When deft. offered the mare to pltf. for the price he bid, pltf. said he did not want her. z. ——— Measure of damages.]—A race-horse was sold, with its engagements, with a representation that it was "untried." The purchaser, on discovering the representation to be false, did not disaffirm the contract, but, after some considerable time, sold the horse:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover the difference between the price & the value, & also the amount which he had to pay as forfeits, but not the cost of

a. Waiver—Giving note after delivery.]—After the delivery of horses by pltf. to deft., the latter gave pltf. a note for the price. Deft. afterwards alleged that one of the horses, instead of being quiet & gentle, was vicious:—Held: if there had been any misrepresentation, deft. had waived it by signing the note.—MCPHERSON v. FARIS (1912), 21 W. L. R. 654; 2 W. W. R. 643; 5 D. L. R. 385.—CAN.

b. Tampering to enhance value.]—Pltf. bought a dog as having won prizes at dog shows. Pltf. alleged that the dog being naturally a prick-eared dog, & to that extent deficient in one of the main points of a prize collie, defenders varnished him up by fixing lozenges to the tips of his ears in order to give him the proper ear carriage & thereby enabled him to take the prizes which he did:—Held: pltf. had failed to establish not merely that there was a fraud, but that without fraud the hall mark would not have been obtained, & defenders not liable.—GORDON v. WATSON & MONTGOMERY (1899), 6 Sc. L. T. 274.—SCOT.

515. Concealment of latent defects.]—I may be possessed of a horse I know to have many faults, & I wish to get rid of it for whatever sum it will fetch. I desire my servant to dispose of it, & instead of giving a warranty of soundness, to sell it "with all faults." Having thus freed myself from responsibility, am I to be liable if it be afterwards discovered that the horse was unsound. In a contract such as this there is no fraud, unless the seller by positive means renders it impossible for the purchaser to detect latent faults (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—*BAGLEHOLE v. At the time of delivery the greyhound had on a leather collar with a strap attached to it. In the course of the journey, it being necessary to remove the greyhound from one train to another which had not then come up, it was fastened by means of the strap & collar to an iron spout on the open platform on one of the co.'s stations, & while so fastened, it slipped its head from the collar & ran upon the line & was killed:—Held: (1) as defts. were not common carriers of dogs they stood in the position of ordinary bailees & were only liable in respect of some negligence established by evidence against them; (2) the fastening the greyhound by the means furnished by the owner himself, which at the time appeared to be sufficient, was no evidence of negligence on the part of the co.—RICHARDSON v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 75; 20 W. R. 461; sub nom. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. v. RICHARDSON & SISSON, 41 L. J. C. P. 60; 26 L. T. 131.

d. — Extent of duty to carry.]—Common carriers of cattle by rail are bound to carry only when they can reasonably be expected to have waggons at the station from which the cattle are to be carried, & they are only bound to forward them with reasonable diligence (FITZGERALD, J.).—M'NAMARA v. e. — — —.]—Held: an undertaker to have a car in readiness for the

521. — Mere accident—Not being risk of travel.]—Railway cos. are responsible for the safe treatment of animals intrusted to them for carriage from the moment they receive the animals into their charge until the carriages that have conveyed those animals are unloaded.

Pltf. sent a mare to the railway station at H. to be conveyed to A. At the railway station the animal was put into a horse box & tied up. Some time afterwards a porter on looking in found that the animal had got her foot into the manger & slipped, causing strangling by the rope. No negligence on the part of the railway co. was proved other than might be due to the length of the halter used:—Held: (1) the co. were not responsible for accidents of a nature beyond the range of ordinary risks, but they were for anything resulting from the negligence of their servants; (2) pltf. was entitled to a verdict.—MOFFAT v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1867), 15 L. T. 630.

522. — Inherent vice of animal—No negligence by carrier.]—Pltf. delivered a bullock to defts. at D., to be carried to N. In the course of the journey the animal escaped from the truck in which it was placed & was killed. The escape of the bullock was wholly attributable to the efforts & exertions of the animal itself, & not to any negligence on the part of the co., & the truck was in every respect proper & reasonably sufficient for the conveyance of the cattle:—Held: upon these facts, the trial judge ought to have directed a verdict for defts., the co. (assuming them to be common carriers of cattle) not being responsible for the consequences of an inherent vice in the animal to be carried, which resulted in its destruction without any negligence on their part.—BLOWER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 655; 41 L. J. C. P. 268; 26 L. T. 883; 36 J. P. 792; sub nom. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. v. BLOWER.

523. — Vice inferred.]—Pltf. delivered to defts. a horse to be carried by their railway. At the end of the journey the horse was found to be injured. No accident had happened to the train, &

521 i. — Mere accident—Not being risk of travel.]—A horse fastened in the usual way in a railway horse-box struggled through the feeding window (about 25 inches square) into the adjoining compartment & was thereby injured:—Held: the accident was not of a kind that the railway co. were bound to have foreseen & to have provided against, & they were not liable.—RALESTON v. CALLEDONIAN RY. Co. (1878), 5 R. 671; 15 Sc. L. R. 372.—SCOT.

h. Failure to carry—Measure of damages.]—Pltf. proposing to sell certain horses by auction at Dublin, on Apr. 26, agreed with defts., a railway co., that the horses should be carried by rail to Dublin on Apr. 24. Defts. failed to provide the necessary means of carriage for the horses on the 24th, whereupon pltf. took them by road to Dublin, having no other alternative if he wished to sell them at the auction as contemplated. In consequence of the journey some of the horses were deteriorated in appearance, one of them was lamed, & those which were sold fetched lower prices than would otherwise have been realised. For some time previous the horses had been fed on soft food, & had they been in hard hunting condition they would not have been the worse for the journey:—Held: the injury to the horses was attributable to the default of defts., & damages awarded in consequence of the deterioration in the selling value of the horses were not too remote.—WALLER v. MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1878), 12 L. L. T. Jo. 145.—IR.

1. Delay in carrying—Want of trucks.]—In an action for damages for delay in carrying cattle from Dublin to Sheffield, it was proved that the cattle defts. were guilty of no negligence. The cause of the injuries was unknown, except that from their nature they appeared to be caused by the horse getting down upon the floor of the horse-box. The horse was quiet, & accustomed to travel by rail. In an action to recover damages for these injuries:—Held: defts. were not liable, since it was to be inferred that the injuries resulted from the proper vice of the horse.—KENDALL v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 373; 41 L. J. Ex. 184; 26 L. T. 735; 20 W. R. 886.

524. — Coupled with act of God.]—A carrier does not insure against the irresistible act of nature, nor against defects in the thing carried itself; & if he can show that either the act of nature or the defect of the thing itself, or both taken together, formed the sole direct & irresistible cause of the loss, he is discharged. In order to show that the cause of the loss was irresistible, it is not necessary to prove that it was absolutely impossible for the carrier to prevent it, but it is sufficient to prove that by no reasonable precaution in the circumstances could it have been prevented.

Def., a common carrier by sea from L. to A., received from pltf. a mare to be carried to A. for hire. In the course of the voyage the ship encountered rough weather, & the mare received such injuries that she died. The jury found that the injuries were caused partly by more than usually bad weather, & partly by the conduct of the mare herself by reason of fright & consequent struggling, without any negligence of deft.'s servants:—Held: deft. was not liable for the death of the mare.—NUGENT v. SMITH (1876), 1 C. P. D. 423; 45 L. J. Q. B. 697; 34 L. T. 827; 41 J. P. 4; 25 W. R. 117; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 198, C. A.

525. — Defective truck—Evidence of negligence.]—Pltf. sent off some horses from W., a station on a co.'s line, in horse-boxes belonging to that co., in charge of a groom, who was to take them to F., a station on defts.' line. At G. was the junction with defts.' railway, where it was necessary to book again, & whence there were two routes to F., & the groom, on going to take tickets, was told that the train direct to F. did not go for some hours, but that by paying a little higher fare he could go on a train which was about to start immediately, & went round a longer way. He said he would go on at once, & he & the horses proceeded in the same trucks in which they had come from W. At F.

arrived before the steamer started, but as she was full they had to be kept till the next steamer, & they were further detained at Holyhead for want of trucks to send them on in:—Held: the jury were warranted in finding for pltf., as the delay was caused by the want of trucks, & not by any unavoidable impediment.—DONOHUE v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. Co. (1867), 1 L. L. T. Jo. 350.—IR.

m. — Measure of damages—Loss of market.]—Owing to an accident to a train, the cause of which could not be ascertained, a number of pigs arrived about five hours too late for a market to which they had been forwarded:—Held: the railway co. were not liable for damage incurred by loss of market.—ANDERSON v. NORTH BRITISH RY. Co. (1875), 2 R. 443; 12 Sc. L. R. 312.—SCOT.

two porters came to unload the trucks, & the groom told them of a danger of an accident, arising from a wide space between the flap & the body of the horse-box, & how at W. it had been stopped up for horses to be put in. They accordingly tried to stop it up with straw, while the groom kept the horses quiet inside. When done they said "all right," & he then led out a mare, her foal following. The latter put its foot through the opening & broke its leg:—Held: (1) the co. were bound to provide a truck reasonably fit for the conveyance of pltf.'s horses, & there was evidence that this was unfit; (2) defts. had adopted the truck from the other co. at G., & by sending it on to F. became liable for an accident caused by its defects; (3) defts. were bound to deliver safely at F., & the facts proved were evidence for the jury of negligence in defts.' servants in delivering, & not necessarily of any contributory negligence in pltf., arising from the groom's advice how to remedy the defect.—COMBE v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1874), 31 L. T. 613.

526. — Failure by carrier to comply with statutory requirements—Act passed for different purpose.]—Deft., a shipowner, undertook to carry pltf.'s sheep from a foreign port to England. On the voyage some of the sheep were washed overboard, by reason of deft.'s neglect to take a precaution enjoined by an Ord. in Council made under the authority of Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), s. 75:—Held: the object of the above Act & the Ord. being to prevent the spread of contagious disease among animals, & not to protect them against perils of the sea, pltf.s. could not recover.—GORRIS v. SCOTT (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 125; 43 L. J. Ex. 92; 30 L. T. 431; 22 W. R. 575; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 282.

527. — Horse-box in mineral train—Shunting of uncoupled trucks.]—A horse had been put into a box next to mineral trucks not coupled, & the trucks were moved backwards & forwards, with the result that the horse was knocked about on the head. The owner of the cows having brought an action for negligence against the railway co., & having proved the injuries & given his opinion that they were caused by undue shunting & jerking of the train:—Held: the onus of proof being on pltf. & no affirmative evidence having been given by him of negligence on the part of the railway co., defts. were entitled to judgment.—SMITH v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1887), 57 L. T. 813; 52 J. P. 262; 4 T. L. R. 68.

529. Injury after transit but before delivery.]—Pltf. delivered to defts. as common carriers some cattle to be carried by them to their London station. The cattle arrived on a Sunday morning between 11 & 12 o'clock, but owing to certain police regulations pltf. was unable to take them away before 12 o'clock at night. Meanwhile they were placed by defts.' servants, with the sanction & assistance of a man employed by pltf. to receive them, in pens at the station. Early on the Monday morning when pltf.'s servant went to take them away he found that two steers had been killed. He wished to take away the remaining cattle, but was refused permission unless he signed a receipt ticket for the whole number, which he declined to do. Later in the day pltf. came & removed them, but before he could reach the market for which they were intended, it was over, & he could not sell them until the Thursday following. In an action for the value of the two steers which were killed, & for the damage done to the remaining beasts by delay:—Held (MARTIN, B., dis.): defts.' liability as carriers had ceased when the alleged loss & damage occurred.—SHEPHERD v. BRISTOL & EXETER RY. CO. (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 189; 37 L. J. Ex. 113; 18 L. T. 528; 16 W. R. 982.

530. Expenses reasonably—Incurred in disinfecting & cleaning trucks.]—An Ord. in Council directed that every carriage, truck, etc., should be cleansed & disinfected by the owners in manner therein pointed out once in every twenty-four hours during the time when it was used for any animal. Defts. were authorised by their special Act to charge certain rates for the carriage of goods on their line, & also to "charge a reasonable sum for loading, covering & unloading of goods . . . & for delivery & collection & any other services incidental to the business or duty of a carrier . . . & for any other extraordinary services performed" by them. Pltf. sent cattle by defts.' line:—Held: defts. could not require pltf. to pay the cost properly incurred by them under the Ord. in cleansing the truck in which the cattle were sent, as the cleansing was not a service done for pltf. individually as distinguished from the rest of the public.—COX v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 181; 38 L. J. C. P. 151.

531. — Through failure to take delivery promptly.]—Deft. sent a horse by pltf.'s railway directed to himself at S. station. On the arrival of the horse at S. station at night there was no one to meet it, & pltf.s. having no accommodation at the station, sent the horse to a livery stable. Deft.'s servant soon after arrived & demanded the horse, & he was referred to the livery stable-keeper, who refused to deliver the horse except on payment of charges which were admitted to be reasonable. On the next day deft. came & demanded the horse, & the station-master offered to pay the charges & let deft. take away the horse, but deft. declined & went away without the horse, which remained at the livery stable. Pltf.s. afterwards offered to deliver the horse to deft. at S. without payment of any charges, but deft. refused to receive it unless delivered at his farm & with payment of a sum of money for his expenses & loss of time. Some time after, pltf.s. paid the livery stable-keeper his charges, & sent the horse to deft., who received it. In an action brought to recover the amount of the charges:—Held: pltf.s. acted reasonably in putting the horse in the livery stable, & deft., having refused to take the horse, was liable to pltf.s. for all the livery charges which they had paid.—*GREAT NORTHERN RY. No written contract was entered into, nor any declaration of its value made on its delivery to defts. 535. Carrier exempted from responsibility for injury "however caused."]—Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7, extends to cases where a special contract has been signed in conformity with the subsequent provisions in the Act.

Pltf. brought three horses to the cattle station of defts.' railway at L., to be forwarded by a cattle truck to Y. Defts.' servant provided a truck for the purpose, which to all external appearance, so far as the servant knew, was sufficient for the purpose. Pltf. signed a ticket, which contained the following memorandum: "This ticket is issued subject to the owners undertaking all risks of conveyance, loading & unloading whatsoever, as the co. will not be responsible for an injury or damage (howsoever caused) occurring to live stock of any description travelling upon the railway or in their vehicles." Twopence per mile was charged for horses laden at the cattle station. Horses so laden were forwarded in open trucks by a cattle or luggage train. At a passenger station horses were taken at the rate of fourpence a horse per mile. Horses laden at this station were forwarded in horse-boxes by the trains departing from the passenger station, usually passenger trains. The tickets issued by the co. for horses forwarded by the passenger trains were similar to that signed by pltf. The truck proved to be insufficient for the carriage of the horses, & a hole was made in it on the journey, by which the horses were injured:—Held: (1) the condition that the co. "would not be responsible for any injury or damage howsoever caused" was not just & reasonable, & was void; (2) it did not protect defts. from liability in respect of the defect in the truck.—M'MANUS v. PART VII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.

n. Carrier exempted from "all risk of loss" unless arising from "gross negligence or default" of company's servants.]—Held: (1) a railway co. not liable to the owner of cattle forwarded by the line, for loss sustained from the cattle being crowded in a waggon of insufficient dimensions, as the owner had himself bespoken a waggon of those dimensions, had superintended the loading thereof, & had signed conditions of carriage, whereby he undertook "all risk of loss," etc., "in loading, unloading, conveyance or otherwise, except such as shall arise from the gross negligence or default of the railway co., or their servants," & these conditions were "just & reasonable," within Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7; (2) in the ordinary case it would not be a just & reasonable condition that the co. should not be liable for the negligence of their officials.—RAIN v. GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1869), 7 M. 439.—SCOT.

o. Carrier exempted from all liability for loss on specified route—Damage sustained on different route.]—A railway co. agreed to charge only half rates for the return journey of stock not sold at a show at A., on condition that the exhibitor consigned them "on the return journey by the same route as they were sent." An exhibitor signed a form supplied by the co. requesting them to carry back to M. three unsold cattle "by the same route as on the journey here" at their reduced rate, & in consideration thereof he undertook to relieve the co. of all liability for loss or damage unless caused by wilful misconduct on the part of their servants. The cattle on the outward journey had been consigned from M. to A. via K., no route being specified between K. & A. From K. there were two routes to A., with little difference as regarded distance & convenience. The co. had carried the cattle by the one route on the outward journey & were carrying them by the other on the return journey, when the truck containing the cattle caught fire, from the effects of which they died:—Held: (1) the stipulation for carriage back "by the same route as on the journey here" was not a condition of the contract which the co. could waive as having been made solely in its own interest; (2) the co. had broken the contract; (3) the breach did not put the co. outside Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7,

p. Carrier exempted from liability caused by restiveness of animal carried.]—The owner of a dog, carried by defts., authorised a porter to get a ticket for the dog, which ticket was handed to the owner, but not read or signed by him. One of the conditions of the ticket was that defts. should not be liable for damage occasioned by the restiveness of the animal carried. The dog was, with pltf.'s knowledge, tied to some luggage in the guard's van by a chain & collar furnished by the owner, but escaped in course of transit & was lost:—Held: (1) pltf. entered into a contract upon the terms & conditions of the ticket supplied by the porter; (2) the contract not being signed in accordance with Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7, did not relieve defts. from liability for negligence, although just & reasonable, & pltf. not disentitled to recover by reason of his knowledge of the mode in which the dog was tied up.—STRITCH v. 536. Carrier not exempted from liability for loss occasioned by wilful wrong—Contract severable.]—

A passenger by railway from L. to W. took with him two horses & a retriever dog; the horses were put into a horse-box, & a servant of defts. proposed that the dog should be placed in the horse-box, to which pltf. assented. The dog was fastened in the horse-box by a strap attached to a leather collar round its neck, the collar & strap being furnished by pltf. Pltf.'s agent signed a ticket subject to the following conditions:—"The co. will not be liable in any case for loss or damage to any horse or other animal above the value of £40 or any dog above the value of £5, unless a declaration of its value, signed by the owner or his agent, at the time of booking same, has been given to them, & by such declaration the owner shall be bound, the co. not being in any event liable to any greater amount than the value so declared. The co. will in no case be liable for injury to any horse or other animal or dog, of whatever value, when such injury arises wholly or partially from fear or restiveness. If the declared value of any horse or other animal exceed £40 or any dog £5, the price of conveyance will, in addition to the regular fare, be after the rate of 2½ per cent., or 6d. in the pound, upon the declared value above £40 [or £5] whatever may be the amount of such value, & for whatever distance the horse or other animal is to be carried." Pltf. made no declaration of the value of the dog, & paid 3s. for the carriage of it. On the arrival of the train at W. a window in the horse-box was found open, through which the dog had escaped, & was lost:—Held: (1) the loss of the dog was occasioned by pure accident; (2) assuming Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7, applied, the conditions on the ticket were just & reasonable within that sect. because the effect of the first condition was not to exempt defts. from liability for loss or injury occasioned by wilful wrong, & if it exempted them from responsibility for any negligence it was severable, & valid to exempt when there was no negligence, & it lay upon pltf. to show that the extra charge in the third condition was exorbitant or unfair, & the question whether it was so was for a jury & not for the ct.; (3) (ERLE, C.J. & KEATING, J.) the above sect. was confined to cases in which the loss or injury was occasioned by misconduct on the part of the co. & did not apply where it occurred through pure accident.—*HARRISON v. 537. Carrier exempted from liability for detention or delay or over-carriage "however caused."—

A railway co. issued a consignment note for the carriage of cattle from O. to B., one of the conditions of which was, "the Co. are not to be amenable for any consequences arising from detention or delay in or in relation to the conveying or delivery of the animals however caused":—Held: this was an unreasonable condition within Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7 (first proviso). Semble: a condition that a railway co. shall not be amenable for any damage arising from over-carriage however caused is also unreasonable.—*ALLDAY v. 539. Carrier exempted from liability for negligence & default of servants & defects in plant—Free pass.]—A contract for the conveyance of cattle by a railway, signed by the party sending them, contained the two following conditions: (1) The owner undertakes all risks of loading, unloading, & carriage, whether arising from the negligence or default of the co., or their servants, or from defect or imperfection in the station, platform, or other place of loading or unloading, or of the carriage in which the cattle may be loaded or conveyed, or from any other cause whatsoever. (2) The co. will grant free passes to persons having the care of live stock, as an inducement to owners to send proper persons with & to take care of them:—Held: the first of these conditions was unreasonable, & its unreasonable character was not removed by the fact that the co., under the second condition, granted, & the owner accepted, a free pass for a person who travelled with the cattle sent.—*ROOTH v. 544. Offer of fair alternative contract—Alternative rates at owner's risk or carrier's risk.]—Cattle were carried by a railway co., under a special contract signed by the consignor, which stated that the co. had two rates for the conveyance of cattle, one the ordinary rate when they took the ordinary liability of the carrier, the other a reduced rate; that these cattle were to be carried at the reduced rate, the co. to be relieved from all liability in case of damage or delay, except upon proof that such loss, detention or injury arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the co.'s servants. A notice was posted up in the co.'s office which stated that the co. had two rates, namely, the owner's risk rate upon the terms above given, & the co.'s risk rate, which was 10 per cent. above the owner's risk rate, at which the co. undertook the ordinary risk of carriers in respect of rail transit, limited for neat cattle to £15, for pigs & sheep to £2, but did "not admit liability for any animals dying of disease or arriving at destination in such condition as to be able to walk from the truck." The consignor had never seen any rate but the owner's risk rate. After two trials cattle had ceased to go at the higher rate. The higher rate was less than the maximum allowed by the co.'s Acts. No list of rates was exhibited. The cattle having been injured through the negligence (but not the wilful misconduct) of the co.'s servants:—Held: (1) the notice of the higher rate was not invalidated by the limitation as to value, nor by the fact that it did not mention the terms upon which cattle could be carried without limitation of value, as provided by Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7; (2) the clause as to not admitting liability meant only that the liability must be established by proof, & so construed the condition was just & reasonable within the above sect.; (3) the consignor might have known, & must be taken to have known, the terms of the higher rate, & had the offer of a just & reasonable alternative; (4) the co. were protected by the special contract.—GREAT WESTERN RY. The horse arrived safe at the Windsor station, but the owner not appearing to claim it, it was forgotten & left tied up in a horse-box in an exposed situation for twenty-four hours, & was seriously injured by such neglect:—Held: the co. were not responsible for the injury done to the horse.—*WISE v. 549. Negligence—Contract not relieving carrier of liability for negligence.—Pltf. desiring to send a cow from D. to S., took her to the station at D., belonging to G. N. Co., where he booked her for S. by defts.' ry. He signed a contract, in which it was agreed between him & G. N. Co. that they should not be responsible for any loss or injury to cattle in the delivering, if such damage should be occasioned by kicking, plunging, or restiveness. The cow was put into a truck belonging to defts. & on arriving at S. was brought into a siding by defts.' yard for the purpose of being unloaded. A porter in charge of the yard began to unfasten the truck. Pltf. thereupon warned him not to let the cow out, as she would run at him; nevertheless he did let her out, & she ran about the yard, & ultimately got on to the line & was killed. By an agreement between defts. & G. N. Co. it was provided that a complete & full system of interchange of traffic in passengers, goods, parcels, etc., should be established from all parts of one co. & beyond its limits to all parts of the other co. & beyond its limits, with through tickets, through rates & invoices & interchange of stock at junctions, the stock of the two cos. being treated as one stock, & that the two cos. should aid & assist each other in every possible way, as if the whole concerns of both cos. were amalgamated. In an action brought against defts. for the loss of the cow:—Held: (1) the agreement, if it did not constitute a partnership between the two cos., showed that G. N. Co. became the agents of defts. to make the contract for the carriage of the cow; (2) the condition in the contract did not relieve defts. from liability for negligence on the part of their servants in delivering the cow; (3) the inference to be drawn from the facts was that there was negligence on the part of defts.' porter, & they were liable to pltf. for the loss of the cow.—*GILL v. such stipulation did not qualify the implied contract to deliver within a reasonable time, but only prevented the question of reasonable time from being affected by the express wish of the consignor to have his cattle delivered at a particular time or for a particular market.

The sailing bills of a steam packet co., whose vessels formed a link in a through booking system, contained a condition as follows: "Cattle to be forwarded by this route are received subject to the express stipulation that, if it shall be found on the arrival of the cattle in Dublin that there is not room for the conveyance of the cattle by the next ordinary vessel of the London & North Western Ry. By the contract of carriage the owner undertook all risk of loss, except such as should arise from the gross negligence or default of the co. or their servants:—Held: there was no evidence of negligence or fault on the part of the co. or their servants, & the overcrowding being due to the fault of the owner, the co. were not liable.—*GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. divided, & the front portion was shunted to allow a horse-box to be taken off. The horse-box containing pltf.'s horse was in the rear portion of the train. Before the front portion of the train was backed on to the rear portion the horse was heard groaning, & on the box being opened it was found lying on its back with its feet in the air, the ropes to the headstall being still secured & drawn tight. The horse was got out, when it was found to be injured in two or three places. There was no evidence of any improper slowing down or stopping of the train at Surbiton. The box was then converted into a loose box by taking out the partitions, which left exposed the hooks or hinges on which the partitions hung, & the horse was sent on by a later train to Guildford. There was no evidence that any of the injuries were occasioned between Surbiton & Guildford. In an action against the railway co. to recover damages for the injury to the horse:—Held: there was no evidence of any "neglect or default" on the part of the railway co., & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—RUSSELL v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1908), 24 T. L. R. 548, C. A.

552. Injury through wrongful refusal to give delivery — Not "detention."—Pltf. delivered cattle, carriage prepaid, to defts. for carriage on the terms of conditions whereby, in consideration of an alternative reduced rate, it was agreed that the co. were "not liable in respect of any loss or detention or injury to the animals, or any of them, in the receiving, forwarding, or delivery thereof, except from proof that such loss, detention, or injury, arose from the wilful misconduct of the co., or its servants." The cattle were carried, but, on application made for them by pltf., defts., in consequence of their clerk having negligently omitted to enter the cattle on the consignment note as "carriage paid," refused to deliver them, & alleged that the carriage was not paid. The cattle were kept exposed to the weather until the next day, when, the mistake having then been ascertained, they were delivered. They were injured by the exposure. In an action for damages by reason of wrongful detention & negligence:—Held: the withholding of the cattle, under a groundless claim to retain them, at the end of the transit was not "detention" within the conditions, & the co. were liable.—GORDON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 44; 51 L. J. Q. B. 58; 45 L. T. 509; 46 J. P. 294; 30 W. R. 230.

553. Provision for supply of food & water—Exceptions in charterparty.—A live-stock charter-party provided that water for cattle & sheep was to be provided by the ship in accordance with the A. Govt. regulations, which required a daily supply of 11½ tons. Four bullocks died as a result of bad & insufficient water, & others were deteriorated in value. The exceptions in the charterparty exempted the owners from liability for damage from unseaworthiness, & from the master's negligence:—Held: the exceptions did not relieve the owners from liability to supply water according to the A. Govt. regulations, & they were liable for the damage to, & loss of, the cattle.—VALLÉE v. BUCKNALL (1900), 16 T. L. R. 362.

554. Damages limited to declared value of animal injured.—Pltf. delivered to defts., a railway co., some horses to be carried on their railway, & at their request signed a declaration that the value of the horses did not exceed £10 per horse, & that, in consideration of the rate charged for their conveyance, he thereby agreed that same were to be carried entirely at the owner's risk. In the course of the journey the horses were injured in consequence of the defective state of the truck in which they were carried. In an action against the railway co. they paid £25 into ct. The horses were in fact worth more than £10 each, & if taken at their real value, £40 was the measure of pltf.'s damage; if at £10 each, the £25 covered pltf.'s claim:—Held: (1) the declaration of the value of the horses was no part of the contract, but a statement which formed the basis of the intended contract, & by which it was to be regulated & governed; (2) it was not competent to pltf. to deny the truth of the statement & prove that the real value of the horses exceeded £10 each.—MCCANCE v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1864), 3 H. & C. 343; 4 New Rep. 467; 34 L. J. Ex. 39; 11 L. T. 426; 29 J. P. 148; 10 Jur. N. S. 1058; 12 W. R. 1086; 159 E. R. 563, Ex. Ch.

555. ——A condition in a contract for the carriage of a pair of horses limited defts.' responsibility to £50 each horse, unless a higher value were entered & an additional percentage paid. One horse was fatally injured on the journey through the negligence of defts.' servants, & the consignee, who had agreed to buy the pair for £140, refused to accept the survivor, which was subsequently sold for pltf. Pltf. claimed £100 damages, including as special damages £2 15s. 4d. for carriage of the horses, & £15 11s. 6d. for additional expenses in the case of the survivor:—Held: all the damage arose from the mishap to one horse, & defts.' liability was limited to £50.—BERRY v. SOUTH EASTERN & CHATHAM & DOVER RY. COS.' MANAGING COMMITTEE (1901), 18 T. L. R. 159.

exposing for sale some wild birds on Mar. 18, 1881. 558. ——— Birds recently taken.]—A wild bird is not of necessity not recently taken because it has been in the possession of a person for a period of three weeks.

The offence of exposing for sale, or having possession of, any wild bird recently taken is dependent upon Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880, s. 3, as amended by Wild Birds Protection Act, 1881 (c. 51), & it is incumbent upon the prosecution to show that the birds were wild birds & have been recently taken.—*GREEN v. He then sold them to a publican, who liberated the sparrows one by one, while R. & others shot at them for prizes in the publican's field:—Held: both G. & R. committed an offence against Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880 (c. 35), as they were not owners or occupiers of the land where the birds had originally been caught, nor were they authorised by the owners or occupiers of such land, & were not within the proviso in s. 3 of the Act. Qu.: whether they would not in the circumstances have committed the offence, even if they had been authorised by such owners or occupiers.—*R. v. tion to entertain same, notwithstanding that no public notice of the order has been given by the county council of the county, as required by Wild Birds Protection Act, 1894 (c. 24), s. 4, & Wild Birds Protection Act, 1896 (c. 56), s. 2.—*DUNCAN v. 562. ——— ——— ———.]—On the hearing of an information charging deft. with knowingly & wilfully having in his possession certain wild birds recently taken, contrary to Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880 (c. 35), s. 3, the evidence for the prosecution showed that on July 30, deft., a dealer in wild birds, had on his premises in seven cages seven young larks, that they were very wild, beating themselves against the bars of the cages, & that their feathers were of a light colour. The magistrate at the hearing, without calling on deft., dismissed the information on the ground that there was no evidence that the birds were "recently taken" within the above sect.:—Held: there was evidence that the birds were recently taken within the sect., & the magistrate was wrong in dismissing the information without calling on deft.—HOLLIS v. YOUNG, [1909] 1 K. B. 629; 78 L. J. K. B. 340; 98 L. T. 751; 72 J. P. 199; 24 T. L. R. 500; 21 Cox, C. C. 582.

Part X. Cruelty to and Killing, Maiming, and Wounding Animals.

SUB-SECT. 1.—GUILTY KNOWLEDGE.

565. Horse suffering from wounds—Absence of colliery owner and manager.]—In a colliery certain horses were worked while suffering from raw wounds. T. was an owner, & S. was the certificated manager, but neither was proved to be present or to have any notice or knowledge of the state of the horses:—Held: the justices were wrong in convicting S. of ill-treating the horses under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 2, merely because he was certificated manager, some knowledge of the matter being an essential ingredient of that offence.—SMALL v. WARR (1882), 47 J. P. 20.

566. Injured sheep sent to market—Carelessness.]—Resp. conveyed nine sheep to a market, one of which broke its leg in getting out of the waggon. The sheep were then placed in a pen, in consequence of which the injured animal was trampled on by the others. Deft. having been charged under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849:—Held: although resp. was guilty of carelessness in not having looked after the sheep, his conduct did not amount to the offence of torturing it.—WESTBROOK v. FIELD (1887), 51 J. P. 726; 3 T. L. R. 465.

567. Cattle left in headropes—Neglect of master's orders by servant.]—Applt., the receiver of large consignments of cattle, which he was supposed personally to receive & attend to, had not removed the headropes from the cattle (which arrived in port on Saturday) until the Monday following. The magistrate having convicted deft. of cruelty for not removing the head ropes, deft. appealed on the ground that there was no guilty knowledge & no intentional cruelty on his part, he having ordered his men to examine the cattle & attend to the headropes, which they had neglected to do:—Held: there being no evidence of a guilty knowledge on applt.'s part, or that he wilfully abstained from the knowledge of the alleged cruelty, the conviction must be quashed.—ELLIOTT v. OSBORN (1891), 65 L. T. 378; 56 J. P. 38; 17 Cox, C. C. 346.

568. Horse worked in unfit state—Veterinary surgeon giving wrong advice.]—The owner of a horse, which was lame, consulted resp., a veterinary surgeon, as to whether the horse was in a fit condition to work. The surgeon advised that it was free from pain & quite fit for work. The owner worked the horse, which was very lame & in great pain. Resp. was summoned, under s. 2 of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, for cruelly ill-treating the horse by causing it to be worked while in an unfit state. The magistrate found that resp. knew, when he advised the working of the horse, that to work it in its then state would be an act of cruelty, but he dismissed the information, on the ground that resp.'s advice was only the remote cause of the cruelty in some degree & not the proximate cause in any degree, & not the cause of the cruelty within the Act, & also that resp. was not charged with knowingly counselling an act of cruelty to be caused, the offence shown by the facts. On a case stated:—Held: the magistrate should have convicted, as by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 5, a person who counselled the commission of an offence punishable summarily might be proceeded against as a principal.

There are very special findings in this case, which affords no ground for supposing that a veterinary surgeon, who gives a wrong opinion & commits an error of judgment, is liable to be convicted of cruelty, if from following his opinion cruelty results (CHANNELL, J.).—BENFORD (BENFIELD) v. SIMS (SIMMS), [1898] 2 Q. B. 641; 67 L. J. Q. B. 655; 78 L. T. 718; 47 W. R. 46; 14 T. L. R. 424; 42 Sol. Jo. 556; 19 Cox, C. C. 141.

569. — In charge of servant.]—Applt., who was convicted of causing two horses to be worked

a. Animals left without food.]—Held*: a contravention of Cruelty to Animals (Scotland) Act, 1850, (c. 92), s. 1, by a butcher leaving four oxen at the slaughter-house unsupplied with food for seventy-seven hours was relevantly charged in a complaint which did not set forth that the cruelty or ill-treatment libelled was committed with the personal knowledge of the accused.—WILSON v. JOHNSTONE (1874), 3 Couper, 8; 1 R. 16; 11 Sc. L. R. 548.—SCOT.

568 i. Horse worked in unfit state.]—Applt. was convicted under Police Offences Act, 1908 s. 7 (1) (a), of cruelly ill-treating a horse by permitting it to be driven whilst in a weak condition. The magistrate did not find that applt. actually knew that the horse was being driven, but that he should have known it, & should have given instructions for the horse not to be used:—Held: to justify a conviction under the above sect. there must be proof of guilty knowledge on the part of the accused. Seemle: actual knowledge is not necessary, if it is proved that the accused has wilfully abstained from acquiring knowledge on the subject.—McFARLANE v. ROBSON (1916), 35 N. Z. L. R. 216.—N.Z.

569 i. — In charge of servant.]—An innkeeper's servant drove a pair of horses from Alloa to Stirling in a waggonette, which held nineteen people & then made four & a half double journeys between Stirling & Bridge of Allan, where games were being held. One of the horses then showed signs of

in an unfit state on a certain day, carried on business in London, & the two horses in question were under the charge of L. at a farm at C., where applt. resided. He was practically always away & did not see the horses above once a fortnight, they being under the entire management of L. There was some evidence that applt. knew that the horses had been out of condition at some time, but no evidence was given as to the date when that was, or how long it was before the alleged improper working. There was no evidence that applt. had interfered with L., had given any order for the horses to be worked, or knew of their condition on the day of the alleged offence:—Held: there was a failure on the part of the prosecution to give any evidence of guilty knowledge with regard to the offence in question, & the conviction must be quashed.—GREENWOOD v. BACKHOUSE (1902), 86 L. T. 566; 66 J. P. 519; 20 Cox, C. C. 196.

570. — Onus of proof.—Resp. was the owner of several horses, & he used them for the purposes of his business. These horses were left in charge of a servant, who was entirely responsible for them. The servant bought a horse for resp. When the purchase had been made resp. saw the animal, & remarked that it was in poor condition. The servant, however, stated that it was a good horse & good worker, & resp. left it to him. About six weeks after the horse had been purchased whilst the servant was driving it, it fell & was found to be suffering from mange & to be otherwise in a bad condition. The servant was summoned for cruelty to the animal & was convicted. Resp. was afterwards summoned, as the owner of the horse, for permitting it to be cruelly ill-treated by being worked whilst in an unfit condition. The justices, however, were of opinion that the onus of proving want of exercise of reasonable care & supervision was on the prosecution, & that there was no evidence of such want of reasonable care & supervision before them. They therefore dismissed the summons:—Held (1) the justices were wrong in law in so deciding; (2) there was a prima facie case established against resp., which he ought to be called upon to answer, & the case must be remitted to the justices.—WHITING v. IVENS (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1878; 113 L. T. 869; 79 J. P. 457; 31 T. L. R. 492; 25 Cox, C. C. 128; 13 L. G. R. 965.

571. Attempt to kill dog—Intention immaterial.—Resp. beat a dog, which was chained to a kennel, with a large piece of wood. He then struck the dog several times with a handbill used for chopping wood, & when it ran into the kennel he prodded it many times with a spade; the beating, etc., lasted for half an hour during which time the dog suffered great pain. Ultimately resp. obtained a gun & shot the dog. Upon the hearing of an information for cruelly beating & ill-treating the dog under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), resp. alleged that the dog was in the habit of barking & running at children & that he had committed the acts complained of in trying to destroy it. The justices dismissed the information on the ground that the resp. had no intention to commit cruelty because he was trying to destroy the animal:—Held: the justices were wrong & should have convicted resp., as the only question for them was whether there was cruelty in fact & resp.'s intention was immaterial.—DUNCAN v. POPE (1899), 80 L. T. 120; 63 J. P. 217; 15 T. L. R. 195; 19 Cox, C. C. 241.

572. Gamekeeper shooting dog—Intention to frighten.—A keeper seeing a dog come into a field, over which his master had the shooting rights, & frightening the pheasants, shot at it, not with the intention of killing it but intending to injure it, if necessary, for the purpose of frightening it away:—Held: this did not necessarily amount to cruelly ill-treating the dog, each case being a question of degree, & one of fact for the justices, who could lawfully dismiss the summons, although they found that deft. intended to injure the dog, if necessary for the purpose of frightening it.—ARMSTRONG v. MITCHELL (1903), 88 L. T. 870; 67 J. P. 329; 19 T. L. R. 525; 20 Cox, C. C. 497.

573. Pony exposed to performing lions.—Applt., a lion-tamer, conducted performances in a cage with lions, & part of the performance consisted of a roundabout of six boats, in each of which was seated a lion, the roundabout being drawn by a pony. At one of these performances, after applt. had introduced the pony into the cage & attached it to the roundabout, one of the lions jumped out of its boat & raised itself on to the hindquarters of the pony & sniffed at it. Applt. drove the lion back to its boat, but immediately applt.'s attention was diverted from the lion it attacked the pony, causing injuries from which the pony died two days afterwards. A considerable number of performances with the same pony had taken place for several years & nothing of the kind had happened. Formerly, during the performance three or four men with iron bars kept watch on the stage, & recently a man with a firehose kept watch. Applt. having been convicted under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 2, of having unlawfully & cruelly caused the pony to be ill-treated:—Held: there distress, & the innkeeper ordered it to be changed to another waggonette holding twenty-four people, & which was drawn by three horses. It made three single journeys in this carriage, when it fell dead in the street:—Held: the innkeeper was rightly convicted of cruelty by overdriving.—CARMICHAEL v. WELSH (1887), 1 White, 333; 24 Sc. L. R. 348.—SCOT.

569 ii. — — —.]—M. had used a horse belonging to D., his master, to draw a cart of stones when the horse was suffering from a bleeding wound under the fore part of the saddle:—Held: knowledge of the horse's condition not being proved against D., the conviction of D. must be quashed.—DOWNIE v. FRASER (1893), 1 Adam, 80; 30 Sc. L. R. 897; 1 S. L. T. 177.—SCOT.

569 iv. — — —.]—Liability of company secretary.—The secretary of a limited liability co., who has nothing whatever to do with the state of the co.'s horses, cannot be convicted of an offence under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 2, for "causing or procuring" a horse "to be cruelly ill-treated."—HUGHES v. MOONEY (1909), 43 I. L. T. 127.—IR.

572 i. Coachman shooting trespassing dog.—A dog trespassing on a field in pursuit of rabbits was deliberately shot at from a distance of five yards by a coachman in the employment of the owner & occupier of the field, & was wounded in the thigh:—Held: this was not cruelty within Cruelty to Animals (Scotland) Act, 1850 (c. 92), & conviction quashed.—JACK v. CAMPBELL (1880), 8 R. 1; 18 Sc. L. R. 16.—SCOT.

b. Wounding dog with knife—To separate dogs fighting.—A. was walking along the street when a large dog attacked two small dogs which accompanied him. For a considerable time A. endeavoured in vain to separate the dogs, & finally struck the large dog twice with a knife, thereby inflicting two wounds, of which the dog subsequently died:—Held: A. was not guilty of "wanton cruelty" within Cruelty to Animals (Scotland) Act, 1850, s. 1.—CORNELIUS v. GRANT (1880), 7 R. 13; 17 Sc. L. R. 633.—SCOT.

c. Permitting sale alive of animal delivered to knacker.—A knacker's assistant, while in charge of a cart belonging to the knacker, at a distance from the knackery & without the knowledge of his master, bought a horse for £1 & sold it alive for £1 10s. to another person, who exported it to Antwerp. The assistant was charged with selling the horse alive, & the knacker with permitting him so to do, in contravention of Protection of Animals (Scotland) Act, 1912 (c. 14), Sched. 1 (9):—Held: (1) the knacker, not having been proved to have had any knowledge of the transaction, had not "permitted" the sale; (2) the assistant had been rightly convicted.—DUNDAS v. PHYN, [1914] S. C. (J.) 114; 51 Sc. L. R. 427; 1 S. L. T. 311.—SCOT.

574. Omission to alleviate suffering—Dog mortally wounded—Refusal to kill.]—Applt., convicted under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 2, of ill-treating & torturing & causing to be cruelly ill-treated & tortured a dog, had shot with a bullet from a pistol through the eye a neighbour's dog, which was trespassing in his garden, & it was assumed for the purposes of the case that the shooting the dog was lawful. Applt. immediately gave notice of what he had done to the owner of the dog & to a policeman, & dragged the dog into the road. When in the road he found for the first time that the dog was not dead, but was in pain; he however left it in the road, & although desired so to do by the policeman, refused to cause it to be killed. It died some hours afterwards in great pain, & deft. knew when he left it that it could not survive its wound, & that death only could put an end to its pain:—Held: applt. had not been guilty of any offence within the Act, & the conviction was wrong.—POWELL v. KNIGHT (1878), 38 L. T. 607; 42 J. P. 597; 26 W. R. 721.

575. Horse incurably diseased—Failure to slaughter.]—The owner of a horse who, knowing it to be incurably diseased & in pain, merely omits to have it slaughtered, commits no offence within Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 2, & cannot be convicted of "cruelly ill-treating, abusing, or torturing," such animal by reason of such omission only. But if he keeps the animal in such manner as that it is inevitably put to intense pain in moving about a field, in its efforts to graze in order to support its life, he thereby commits an act of cruelty & an offence under the Act, & is guilty of "torturing or causing the animal to be tortured," as much as if he had actively tortured it with his own hand.—EVERITT v. DAVIES (1878), 38 L. T. 360; 42 J. P. 248; 26 W. R. 332.

576. — Cat severely injured—Failure to kill immediately.]—Resp. shot a cat in his garden with a saloon rifle with intent to kill it. The bullet struck it, wounding it severely, but not killing it. He saw the cat was not dead, & it crawled away out of resp.'s view to its owner's premises next door. About thirty minutes later, on the owner of the cat pointing out to resp. that it was still alive & suffering great pain, resp. destroyed it. Resp. did not call the owner's attention to the injured state of the cat, although he knew to whom it belonged, & although he knew that the animal was severely injured, he took no steps to have it attended to or its suffering alleviated:—Held: resp. was not guilty of an offence under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 2.—HOOKE v. GRAY (1907), 96 L. T. 706; 71 J. P. 337; 23 T. L. R. 472; 21 Cox, C. C. 437.

577. — Diseased sheep—Neglect to dress maggot wounds—Onus of proof.]—On the hearing of an information against resp. for cruelty to a sheep, evidence was given that the sheep died in a field belonging to resp. a quarter of a mile from his house, death being due to exhaustion owing to the sheep being eaten by maggots, & that it must have suffered great pain. Evidence was also given that resp. stated that he knew some of his sheep were affected with fly, & that four days previous to the death of the sheep he sent a man down to dress the wounds. The justices dismissed the information on the ground that there was no sufficient evidence that resp. unlawfully & cruelly caused the sheep to be ill-treated:—Held: as it was for the prosecution to prove the offence, it could not be said that the justices were wrong.—POTTER v. CHALLANS (1910), 102 L. T. 325; 74 J. P. 114; 22 Cox, C. C. 302.

578. — Dog caught in trap—Failure to release.]—Resp., a farmer & the owner & occupier of certain land on which was a rabbit warren, was in the habit of setting spring traps near the warren to catch vermin, & on a certain morning he found a dog caught by the foot in a trap with sharp teeth so set by him. The foot was severely injured, & the dog was suffering great pain, which was obvious to resp., who went at once to a neighbour to find out if the dog was his, & finding that it was not, returned to his farm & attended to his horses & then went to the police. He would have run some risk of being bitten if he had attempted to release the dog with his hands. The dog was released from the trap by two police officers about two hours after resp. had observed it. Upon an information against resp. for cruelly ill-treating the dog, the justices were of opinion that the dog had been cruelly ill-treated by resp., but that, as there was a mere omission to release the dog, they felt compelled, in view of certain authorities, to dismiss the complaint:—Held (CHANNELL, J. diss.): the magistrates were not bound by the authorities to dismiss the information, but had jurisdiction to convict resp. if they should think fit so to do, & the case should be remitted to them for further consideration.—GREEN v. CROSS (1910), 103 L. T. 279; 74 J. P. 357; 26 T. L. R. 507.

579. — Cow overstocked—Failure to milk.]—Resp. was summoned under Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (c. 27), s. 1, for causing a cow to be cruelly ill-treated by allowing her to be overstocked with milk. Resp., a farmer & the owner of the cow, caused the cow & her calf, which was muzzled, to be walked to the market, a distance of more than five miles, for the purpose of selling her. The cow, which had calved only twelve days before, was a heavy milker & was in full milk, but had not been milked for some nineteen hours, though it was usual for cows to be milked every twelve hours. She appeared to be in pain, & when walking along her legs rubbed against her distended udder, which caused her great pain & suffering. The suffering was unnecessary so far as any benefit of improvement to the cow was concerned. The justices found that the udder of the cow was overstocked with milk & that the cow suffered pain in consequence, but they dismissed the summons on the ground that it was an old-established custom in the district to expose cows for sale in this condition:—Held: resp. was guilty of the offence of cruelty within the above sect., by unreasonably doing or omitting to do an act which caused to the animal suffering unnecessary in the interests or for the benefit of the animal, & the fact that there was a custom to expose cows for sale in such a state was no defence to the charge of cruelty.—WATERS v. BRAITHWAITE (1913), 110 L. T. 266; 78 J. P. 124; 30 T. L. R. 107; 24 Cox, C. C. 34.

was given that the operation caused very great pain, & was inflicted in order to fit the birds for one or other of two purposes, cock-fighting or winning prizes at exhibitions:—Held: (1) (KELLY, C.B.) resps. did, as a matter of fact, "cruelly ill-treat, abuse, or torture the birds," & as a matter of law, the act could not be justified by the purpose of cock-fighting; (2) (CLEASBY, B.) neither the purpose of cock-fighting nor that of winning prizes at exhibitions would prevent the case from being within the Act.—*MURPHY v. 585. Rabbit coursing—"Baiting" animals.]—A match took place between the owners of two dogs as to which could kill the greatest number of rabbits by running after them. The match took place in a field containing an area of three acres, walled in so that the rabbits could not escape:—Held: this was not "baiting" animals within Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 3.—PITTS v. MILLAR (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 380; 43 L. J. M. C. 96; 30 L. T. 328; 38 J. P. 615.

586. ——— Domestic animal.]—Resps. coursed with dogs in an enclosed field wild rabbits, which had been caught in nets five or six days previously & since kept in confinement & fed. The rabbits, which, owing to the fence, were unable to escape, were all of them killed. On a prosecution of an official of the meeting under s. 1 (1) of Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (c. 27):—Held: (1) notwithstanding there was no chance of escape, there was evidence on which the magistrate could find that the chasing of the rabbits in the above circumstances was

e. 588 i. Neglect to supply food—Seller or buyer liable.]—A calf was sent by steamer to deft., & was landed on a wharf, where it remained seventeen days without food, & died of starvation. Deft. had, immediately after its being landed, sold the calf to a butcher:—Held: (1) as the property in the calf had passed from deft., he was not bound to feed it, & was not liable under Cruelty to Animals Act, 14 Vict. No. 40; (2) even if the property had not passed by the sale, deft. would not be liable under the Act, if he really believed that the property had passed, & thought that the calf was on the wharf at the purchaser's risk.—Ex p. FOLEY (1875), 14 N. S. W. S. C. R. 162.—AUS.

f. Horses—Cruelty to.]—Held: a complaint against a cab driver for a contravention of Cruelty to Animals (Scotland) Act, 1850 (c. 92), was relevantly laid, which charged against the accused that he did, at a time & place libelled, "cruelly ill-treat or cause to be ill-treated a horse under his charge," by causing or allowing such horse to remain yoked to a cab during the night libelled on, "such horse suffering severely from hunger, cold & exposure, in consequence of which the horse suffered great & unnecessary pain, & whereby the horse was thus ill-treated, abused or tortured."—*ANDERSON v. “coursing” within the sect.; (2) the word “liberated” in s. 1 (3) (b) meant “set free from the receptacle in which the animal has been confined,” & the mere fact that the rabbits had no chance of escape did not prevent their being liberated; (3) no offence against the sect. had been committed, although unnecessary suffering had been caused to the rabbits.

The mere fact that the chasing of the animals takes place in an inclosure from which there is no possibility of escape does not prevent it amounting to coursing, unless the space is so small as to render it impossible to test the relative coursing abilities of the competing dogs, & thereby to defeat the object of the coursing (BRAY, J.).—WATERS v. MEAKIN, [1916] 2 K. B. 111; 85 L. J. K. B. 1378; 115 L. T. 110; 80 J. P. 276; 32 T. L. R. 480; 25 Cox, C. C. 432; 14 L. G. R. 699.

588. Neglect to supply water—Cattle on railway journey.]—Applt. was the consignor of cattle from K. to C., to be carried over a railway upon a journey which lasted more than thirty hours. He did not make any request that the cattle should be supplied with water. The justices of C. issued a summons against applt., then being in W., & on his appearing on the summons, convicted him of an offence against Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), s. 64:—Held: (1) the offence was within the summary jurisdiction of the justices; (2) the conviction could not be sustained, for the offence was completed before the cattle reached C., the thirty hours having then expired; & applt., by appearing before the justices in obedience to their summons, did not “happen to be” at C. & within their jurisdiction.—JOHNSON v. COLAM (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 544; 44 L. J. M. C. 185; 32 L. T. 725; 40 J. P. 135; 23 W. R. 697.

589. Impounded animal.]—Where the keeper of a common pound had neglected to provide food & water for sheep placed in the pound by another person:—Held: (1) the keeper of a common pound was not, as such, within Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 5, “a person who impounds or confines, or causes to be impounded or confined” animals brought to his pound, & he was under no obligation to provide such animals with food & water, nor subject to the penalty for neglecting so to do; (2) that obligation was imposed on the person bringing the animal to the pound.—DARGAN v. DAVIES (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 118; 46 L. J. M. C. 122; 35 L. T. 810; 41 J. P. 468; 25 W. R. 230.

590. — Domestic animal—Parrots.]—Applt., foreman to a dealer in foreign birds, sent some parrots from L. to D. by rail in a box without water. They were found at H., a station on the route, after ten hours’ travelling, suffering from want of water, which they drank eagerly when offered to them. The magistrate having convicted applt. under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 2, of torturing or causing to be tortured “domestic animals”:—Held: the conviction was bad, on the ground that there was no evidence of cruelty or that the parrots in question were “domestic animals” within the Acts relating to cruelty to animals. Qu.: whether if an offence had been committed, such offence would have been a continuing one.

Cruelty to animals to be within this stat. must cause substantial & unnecessary suffering, & without evidence of such suffering to keep parrots for a few hours without water is not an act of cruelty upon which a conviction can rightly follow (per CUR.).—SWAN v. SANDERS (SAUNDERS) (1881), 50 L. J. M. C. 67; 44 L. T. 424; 45 J. P. 522; 29 W. R. 538; 14 Cox, C. C. 566.

591. Domestic animal—Linnets used as decoys.]—Resp. caught linnets, kept them in cages for a year & used them as decoy birds. On a charge of cruelly ill-treating the birds, it appeared that resp. tied a string round the breast under the wing, by pulling which the birds were jerked into the air, & made to struggle & twitter, & so attract wild birds. The justices found that resp. cruelly ill-treated the birds, but dismissed the information, being doubtful as to whether the birds were domestic animals:—Held: the linnets were domestic animals within Cruelty to Animals Acts, 1849 & 1854 (c. 60), & the case must be remitted.—COLAM v. Afterwards one of them was made to jump over a board. Except in these respects the lions did not differ in any way from wild animals kept in confinement:—Held: the lions were not “domestic animals” within Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, ss. 2, 29, & Cruelty to Animals Act, 1854, s. 3, & resp. could not be convicted on an information charging him with cruelly treating them.—HARPER v. The bird had been the property of its owner for three years, & was used by her in her business as a photographer. It was tame, & was kept in a field. One wing having been pinioned, it could not fly, but could get out of the field by going down a river. It would go to its owner when called, & feed from the hand:—Held: the seagull was not a “domestic animal” within Cruelty to Animals Acts, 1849, s. 29, & 1854 (c. 60), s. 3, & resps. could not be convicted.—YATES v. Upon the hearing of a summons against M. for having ill-treated & caused & procured the cattle to be cruelly ill-treated, tortured & abused contrary to Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 2, evidence was given that the operation of dishorning caused very great pain & suffering, & that the reasons for cutting off the horns were (1) greater convenience in feeding cattle in yards, & (2) that cattle without horns brought in some places £2 a head more than those with horns. The magistrate having refused to convict:—Held: the above sect. & ought to have been convicted.—BRADY v. MCARDLE (1884), 14 L. R. N. 174; 15 Cox, C. C. 516.—IR.

594 ii. —.]—It is not an offence punishable under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 2, to dishorn cattle, provided the operation be skilfully & ill-treating, abusing, & torturing a number of oxen, it appeared that he had caused their horns to be sawn off, & evidence was given by scientific witnesses that this operation caused extreme & prolonged pain, & was cruel, & absolutely unnecessary; that dishorning was not practised in other counties of England, & had been long discontinued in Norfolk, & only revived within four years in one part of that county, & that goring was prevented by "tipping" the horns, or by removing the core before the animal was six months old, which caused only trifling pain. For the defence, evidence was given by farmers that dishorning changed the character of the animals, rendered them quiet, prevented them from goring & ill-treating others, made them graze better & fatten more quickly, enabled a greater number of them to be stowed in a yard or railway truck, & slightly increased the value of each animal, & that "tipping" the horns was of no benefit. The justices were of opinion that the dishorning had caused considerable pain & suffering to the animals, that resp. had exercised ordinary care in the operation, that the practice had been carried on in a part of the county of Norfolk to a considerable extent during the past three or four years, that the results attained by dishorning would not be attained by merely tipping the horns, that resp. had not any cruel intentions, but acted under the honest belief that the operation was for the benefit of the animals themselves, & as well for the benefit of himself as a grazier, & that the object he had in view could not be attained by any known method; & they accordingly dismissed the information:—Held: (1) the operation of dishorning caused extreme pain without adequate & reasonable object, & was unnecessary abuse of the animal & unjustifiable; (2) resp. ought to have been convicted.—FORD v. WILEY (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 203; 58 L. J. M. C. 145; 61 L. T. 74; 53 J. P. 485; 37 W. R. 709; 5 T. L. R. 483; 16 Cox, C. C. 683.

595. Spaying Sows — Operation to improve value.—A person who, with reasonable care & skill, performs on an animal a painful operation, which is customary, & is performed bond fide for the purpose of benefiting the owner by increasing the value of the animal, is not guilty of the offence of cruelly ill-treating, abusing, or torturing the animal within Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), s. 2, even though the operation is in fact unnecessary & useless.

Resp., a veterinary surgeon, performed the operation of spaying five sows, which operation consisted in cutting out & removing the uterus & ovaries. It caused severe pain to the sows, but it was admitted that the operation was performed in a skilful & careful manner. There was evidence for the prosecution that the operation did not improve the flesh of the sow except at the periods of heat, but that it was a customary operation in many parts of the country & was supposed (though it was alleged erroneously) to increase the weight & development of the animals. The justices having dismissed an information against resp. for cruelly ill-treating & abusing the sows:—Held: the justices were right.—LEWIS v. FERMOR (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 532; 56 L. J. M. C. 45; 56 L. T. 236; 51 J. P. 371; 35 W. R. 378; 3 T. L. R. 449; 16 Cox, C. C. 176.

596. Attempting to kill—Pig.—A. was convicted of cruelly ill-treating a pig. He tried on Saturday to catch one of his pigs, & chased it round a stable, hacking at it with a carpenter's axe, & inflicted four wounds on its head & nose. He sent for a butcher, but was unable to find one till Monday, the pig meanwhile lying half dead & bleeding:—Held: there was sufficient evidence to support the conviction.—*ADCOCK v. 600. Lambs—Branding with hot iron.—Upon an information under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, s. 2, for cruelly ill-treating lambs by branding them on the nose with a hot iron, it was proved that the branding was done by the accused by drawing the hot branding iron across the nostrils of the lamb three or four times, thereby burning through the skin & leaving a permanent scar on the nose. The justices found that the branding of the sheep with a hot iron in the manner described caused substantial pain & suffering, that there had been no unnecessary abuse of the animals, that the practice of branding sheep on the unclosed mountain lands of certain Welsh counties had existed for a great number of years, & that the practice was reasonably necessary for the purpose of identifying sheep grazing in large numbers on unclosed mountain lands, & could not be effectually attained by ear-marking & pitch-marking; & they dismissed the information:—Held: as the justices had not applied any wrong principle of law, & had come to the conclusion that the practice of branding, on the nose was reasonably necessary for purposes of identification, the ct. could not say that there was no evidence to support their finding, & could not interfere with their decision.—BOWYER v. MORGAN (1906), 95 L. T. 27; 70 J. P. 253; 22 T. L. R. 426; 50 Sol. Jo. 377; 21 Cox, C. C. 203.

602. Stag hunting—Captive hind—Whether hunt ended.—Resp. was master of certain drag hounds, & in connection with the drag hounds a number of hinds were kept & hunted with the hounds. A hind which was not in a mutilated or injured state was released & hunted, & three times it took refuge in a yard from which it was dislodged by being prodded & beaten. On two occasions it charged against barbed wire, trying to break through. Two men were seen to get hold of the neck of the hind, which had turned & was fighting with its forelegs, & put a whip thong round it & skull, it was proved that the operation caused great pain but that it was in common use throughout the counties of Fife, Forfar & Kincardine as a means of preventing the cattle doing each other harm by goring one another or in railway trucks, & that in other districts operations securing the same result, but painless, were made use of:—Held: the accused were rightly acquitted.—*RENTON v. pull it along by the neck, & another man pulled its tail, endeavouring to get it out of the yard. They dragged it a short distance, when it fell down in the yard exhausted. It was lifted up & dragged in the same manner through the gateway on to the road, where it again fell down exhausted. It lay there for a short time, when it was again lifted up & dragged along the road in the same way as before for about 15 or 16 yards, when it fell down again & died. The hind had a wound in its chest, which was bleeding, caused by the barbed wire, against which it had charged, as mentioned above, it was bleeding at the hocks and it was exhausted. One witness deposed that resp. was present the whole of the time, & subsequently when seen by a witness said that he was present all the time & was responsible for all that took place, that there was no cruelty so far as he could see, & that he gave orders for the hind to be got out of the yard with a view to hunting it again, because it was not blown, but was only sulking, as it had done before. At the close of the evidence for the prosecution it was submitted that there was no case to answer, as all the acts deposed to took place while the hind was being hunted, & by Wild Animals in Captivity Act, 1900 (c. 33), the Act did not apply to anything done in the hunting of an animal:—Held: there was a case which required an answer—namely, as to whether the hunt was or was not at an end when the acts proved took place, & the case must be remitted.—*RODGERS v. At the trial M. did not appear, & the only defence raised by defts. was that M., in giving pltf. into custody, was not acting within scope of his authority. As evidence that M. was so acting, a code of suggestions issued by defts. to its inspectors was put in, one of which suggestions stated that Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92), enabled the offender to be given into the custody of a policeman & that in flagrant cases this was the best course to adopt:—Held: (1) although an inspector of defts. would not, without special instructions, be acting within scope of his authority in giving a person into custody, nevertheless the code of suggestions pointed out to the inspectors that they might, & in some cases ought to, do so; (2) defts. were liable in damages for their inspector's action.—*LINE v. The justices after a view dismissed the summons. On the following Aug. 7 another summons was applied for in respect of cruelty to the same horse, the alleged cruelty then being the same stiff joint, & an open wound on the shoulder. The justices, considering the circumstances to be the same as before, refused to issue a summons:—Held: the justices were wrong, inasmuch as the sores seemed to be not identical in circumstances with the former adjudication.—*R. v. #### SECT. 2.—KILLING, MAIMING, AND WOUNDING ANIMALS.

626. Horse—Included as cattle—9 Geo. 1, c. 22.]—Held: the provisions of the above Act were designed to extend & not to abridge the offences described in 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 7, & horses, mares & colts were included in the word cattle.—R. v. PATY (1770), 2 Wm. Bl. 721; 2 East, P. C. 1074; 1 Leach, 72; 96 E. R. 423.

627. ———.]—M. was convicted for wounding a gelding. It was objected in arrest of judgment that the gelding was not averred in the indictment to be cattle within the above Act, & that the word cattle did not necessarily include horses, mares & colts:—Held: the objection must be overruled.—R. v. MOTT (1783), 2 East, P. C. 1075.

628. ——— Permanent injury not essential—9 Geo. 1, c. 22.]—Prisoner was indicted under the above Act for maliciously wounding a gelding. Prisoner had driven a nail into the frog of the horse's foot rendering it useless for a time, but likely to be sound in a short time:—Held: prisoner was rightly convicted, as the word "wounding" did not import a permanent injury.—R. v. HAYWOOD (1801), Russ. & Ry. 16; 2 East, P. C. 1076, C. C. R.

629. ——— Indictment — Evidence.]—Prisoner was indicted under 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, for killing & for wounding certain cattle, to wit, one mare. The evidence showed that the animal was a colt, but no evidence was given as to its sex:—Held: the evidence did not support the indictment, for (1) though "cattle" only were mentioned in the Act, it was necessary to specify the species in an indictment; (2) there being no evidence of the sex of the colt, the allegation that it was a mare was not supported.—R. v. CHALKLEY (1813), Russ. & Ry. 258, C. C. R.

630. ——— "Maiming"—Blinding horse—7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 16.]—Where it was proved that prisoner poured a quantity of nitrous acid into the left ear of a mare, & that he had either also poured some of it into the left eye or, what was more probable, that some of the acid which he had poured into the ear had run into the eye:—Held: the injury done to the eye of the mare in this manner & thereby blinding her was a maiming within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 16.—R. v. OWENS (1828), 1 Mood. C. C. 205

m. ——— Maliciously damaging.]—Deft. was convicted of having, in a secret & clandestine manner, cut off the hair from the manes & tails of two horses, the property of B.:—Held: (1) the offence did not come within R. S., 3rd series (c. 169), ss. 12 & 13, but was covered by s. 22; (2) the offence having been committed wrongfully & intentionally, without just cause or excuse, & with full knowledge as to the ownership of the property, malice might be fairly inferred.—R. v. SMITH, 7 N. S. L. R. 29.—CAN.

n. ——— Poisoning.]—In considering the question of compensation where a 631. Permanent injury essential—7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 16.]—Where prisoner laid hold of the tongue of a horse, a part of which was left in his hand, & it was proved that the wound had healed & that the horse was able to work as well as before, the only injury resulting from the loss of the point of its tongue being that it could not eat its food quite as fast as before:—Held: there was no such permanent injury as would support a count for maiming under the above sect.—R. v. JEANS (1844), 1 Car. & Kir. 539.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Bullock (1868), 16 W. R. 405, C. C. R.

632. — “ Wounding ”—Instrument unnecessary—Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (c. 97), s. 40.]—Upon an indictment for wounding a gelding, contrary to the above sect., prisoner was convicted upon evidence which showed that the gelding had suffered a laceration of the roots of the tongue, which protruded, & a tearing of the mouth, which injuries might have been caused by a pull of the tongue by the hand; but there was no evidence to show that any other instrument than the hand had been used:—Held: (1) it was not necessary the wounding should be done by an instrument; (2) there was sufficient evidence of a wounding, & the conviction must be affirmed.—R. v. BULLOCK (1868), L. R. 1 C. C. R. 115; 37 L. J. M. C. 47; 17 L. T. 5. 32 J. P. 102; 16 W. R. 405; 11 Cox, C. C. 125, C. C. R.

633. — Malice—Evidence—Malicious Damage Act, 1861, s. 40.]—On an indictment under the above sect. for unlawfully & maliciously killing, maiming, & wounding a mare, it was proved that prisoner caused the death of the mare through injuries inflicted by his inserting the handle of a fork into her vagina, & pushing it into her body. There was no evidence that prisoner was actuated by ill-will towards the owner of the mare, or spite towards the mare, or by any motive except the gratification of his own depraved taste. The jury found that prisoner did not, in fact, intend to kill, maim, or wound the mare, & nevertheless did what he did recklessly & did not care whether the mare was injured or not. The jury convicted the prisoner:—Held: there was sufficient malice, & the conviction was right.—R. v. WELCH (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 23; 45 L. J. M. C. 17; 33 L. T. 753; 40 J. P. 183; 24 W. 634. — Property of accused—Malicious Damage Act, 1861, s. 40.]—Prisoner was indicted under the above sect. for feloniously & maliciously wounding a mare which was prisoner's property. For the defence it was contended that the stat. aimed only at injury to the property of a person other than accused:—Held: the prisoner could be convicted upon this indictment, although the mare was his own property.—R. v. PARRY (1900), 35 L. Jo. 456.

number of horses died from poison, the question to be considered is whether the poisoning was accidental or maliciously done—malice not being understood in the ordinary sense of ill-will. The sole question is that of intention.—STEED'S PRESENTMENT (1888), 22 L. L. T. Jo. 247.—IR.

632 l. — Wounding—Difference in civil & criminal proceedings.]—A mare apparently sound & well in the morning was soon afterward caught by defenders, the first of whom had been seen that morning with a hayfork in his hands.

One of defenders rode her to a village & left her there, & soon afterwards two recently inflicted wounds were seen in her side, having the appearance as if inflicted by a hayfork:—Held: sufficient, in a civil action of reparation, to establish that defenders, although previously acquitted by a jury when tried criminally, had caused the mare's death.—WILSON v. M'KNIGHT (1830), 8 S. 398.—SCOT.

o. Snake—Not included—29 Vict. No. 5, s. 43.]—A snake is not an animal “ordinarily kept in a state of 636. Sheep—Killing with intent to steal—Indictment—Evidence.]—Held: cutting off & carrying away part of a sheep whilst it was alive, with intent to steal it, would support an indictment for killing with intent to steal, although the sheep was not completely killed at the time of the larceny, if the cutting off must have occasioned the sheep's death.—R. v. CLAY (1819), Russ. & Ry. 387, C. C. R.

637. — — — — —.]—On an indictment under 14 Geo. 2, c. 6, for killing sheep, with intent to steal the whole carcase:—Held: proof of killing with intent to steal part was sufficient to support the charge. Semble: merely removing a live sheep, for the purpose of killing it with intent to steal part of the carcase, was an asportation under the Act of the live sheep, as removal whilst alive was essential to constitute larceny.—R. v. WILLIAMS (1825), 1 Mood. C. C. 107.

638. — — — — —.]—Held: inflicting a mortal wound on a sheep, of which it afterwards died, would support an indictment for killing with intent to steal the carcase, though the sheep did not die till two days afterwards.—R. v. SUTTON (1838), 8 C. & P. 291; 2 Mood. C. C. 29, C. C. R.

639. — — — — — Receiving.]—An indictment charged in the first count that A. & B. killed a sheep, with intent to steal one of its hind legs, & in the second count that C. received 9 lbs. weight of mutton “so stolen as aforesaid,” & in the third count that C. received the mutton “of a certain evil-disposed person,” scilicet, etc.:—Held: on this form of indictment, all the three prisoners might be properly convicted.—R. v. WHEELER & COWLEY (1835), 7 C. & P. 170.

HUGHES* (1826), 2 C. & P. 420.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Bullock (1868), 16 W. R. 405, C. C. R.

641. — Maliciously killing—Malicious Injuries to Property Act, 1827 (c. 30), s. 16.]—Prisoner, indicted under the above sect. for unlawfully & maliciously killing a sheep, had killed the sheep with intent to steal it:—Held: prisoner might be convicted, for maliciously meant malo animo, i.e., with any improper motive or bad intention.—R. v. FORDHAM (1839), 4 J. P. 397.

650. Cat—Setting trap for—Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (c. 97), s. 41.]—A closet of resp.’s adjoined the boundary wall between his premises & applt.’s garden. Applt. set a trap in his garden, where resp.’s cat was in the habit of jumping over from the wall & the cat was caught in the trap & injured:—Held: there was nothing unlawful or contrary to the above sect. in setting a trap in a garden to catch cats trespassing there.—BRYAN v. EATON (1875), 40 J. P. 213.

651. ——— Domestic animal—Evidence—Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (c. 97), s. 41.]—Three boys found a couple of cats in the neighbourhood of a farm & chased them into a barn, where they killed the cats with a hurdle rail. No evidence was called on behalf of the prosecution to prove the ownership of the cats or to show that they were kept for domestic purposes:—Held: (1) it was not necessary for the prosecution to prove that the particular animal killed was in fact kept for a domestic purpose, if it belonged to a class of animals which were ordinarily so kept ; (2) it was not necessary to prove the ownership of the animal.—*NYE v. Dog—Setting poison after notice—Malicious Damage Act, 1861, s. 41.]—Resp.’s dog was wont to stray into applt.’s garden, which was fenced with a quickset hedge, in which were holes sufficiently large for the dog to get through. Applt. gave resp. notice to keep his dog out of the garden, & that he should place poisoned flesh there which would kill the dog. He did place poisoned flesh there, & the dog ate it & so was killed:—Held: applt. was not guilty of unlawfully & maliciously killing the dog within the above sect. Seemle: he was liable to be convicted summarily under Poisoned Flesh Prohibition Act 1864 (c. 115), s. 2.—*DANIEL v. shot by applt., a farmer, were at the time on land in his occupation, which was sown with seed. Resp. & her husband had been previously warned by applt. not to allow their fowls to trespass on the land. It was contended for applt. that having warned persons keeping fowls in that neighbourhood against allowing them to trespass on his land, he was entitled to kill the fowls of such persons at the time they were damaging his crops, & that there was no malice on his part & he merely protected his crops:—Held: applt. was wrongly convicted under the above sect.—SMITH v. WILLIAMS (1892), 56 J. P. 840; 9 T. L. R. 9; 37 Sol. Jo. 11.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

657. Failure to prevent trespass of diseased animal—Knowledge of disease.—Trespass quare clausum fregit et cum averiis did beat & trample & that the cattle having infectious diseases did infect the cattle of pltf., so that several died. Pltf. had a verdict & 20s. damages. On a motion to allow pltf. full costs, these were granted, the consequential damage being matter of aggravation.—ANDERSON v. BUCKTON (1719), 1 Stra. 192; 11 Mod. 658. ———.]—Sheep of deft. having a contagious disease were found in pltf.'s field with his sheep, & the disease was communicated to them. Deft. occupied land near pltf.'s, but there was no evidence as to how deft.'s sheep got into pltf.'s field. Four days afterwards, deft., on being told that his sheep were diseased, said, "I could not help it; I had the sheep at tack at P.'s; they caught it from B.'s sheep":—Held: these facts did not show any right of action, for there was no evidence of any knowledge by deft., at the time the disease was communicated, that his sheep were diseased.—COOKE v. WARING (1863), 2 H. & C. 332; 32 L. J. Ex. 262; 9 L. T. 257; 159 E. R. 138.

659. ———.]—Deft.'s sheep trespassed on pltf.'s land, where, in the course of a few days, they developed scab, in consequence of which they were interned in a circumscribed area on pltf.'s land, under a notice of detention given under Sheep-scab Ord., 1905, made in pursuance of Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), the notice extending also to sheep belonging to pltf., which had been in contact with the trespassing sheep. In an action by pltf. to recover damages for the trespass, the ct. judge nonsuited pltf., on the ground that there was no allegation or proof that deft. was aware of the condition of his sheep at the date of the trespass:—Held: the doctrine of scienter had no application to an action founded on trespass, & pltf. was entitled to recover all such damages as were the natural consequence of the presence of deft.'s sheep on his land, as well after as before the date of the notice of detention.—THEYER v. PURNELL (PARNELL), [1918] 2 K. B. 333; 119 L. T. 285; 16 L. G. R. 840, D. C.

Knowledge of servant — Defective fencing.—An action will lie to recover damages sustained by the negligence of servants having the care of cattle, which they knew to be suffering from an infectious disease, in allowing such cattle to intermingle with other cattle.

Upon the trial of such an action it was proved that the condition of the cattle was known to defts.' servants at the time the cattle came into contact with those of pltf., & that shortly before defts. had been convicted at the petty sessions for allowing their cattle infected with the foot-&-mouth disease to be at large in a field insufficiently fenced. The certificate of such conviction was tendered & received in evidence, & the jury found in favour of pltf.:—Held: (1) the knowledge of their servants was sufficient to make defts. responsible, & there was evidence of negligence to support the findings of the jury; (2) the certificate was improperly received in evidence, but this was cured by Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77), Ord. 39, r. 3, as no substantial miscarriage of justice had been thereby caused.—EXEP v. FAULKNER (1875), 34 L. T. 284; affd. 24 W. R. 774, C. A.

661. Bailment of diseased animal—Bailee's animals infected.—The declaration alleged that deft. had a horse & well knowing it to be glandered, & to be in an infectious state, delivered the horse to pltf. to be kept by pltf. for deft. in a stable of pltf. with another horse of pltf. & without informing pltf. that the horse was glandered, by means of which pltf., not knowing that the horse was glandered, was induced by deft. to, & did, place the horse in a stable of pltf. with pltf.'s horse, & the disease was then communicated by deft.'s horse to pltf.'s horse, so that it had to be killed. After verdict for pltf.:—Held: the declaration

657 i. Failure to prevent trespass of diseased animal—Knowledge of disease.—Where sheep of deft., a runholder, which were to deft.'s knowledge infected with scab, strayed upon the adjoining run of pltf., & infected his sheep:—Held: such straying afforded a presumption of negligence on the part of deft.—HOWELL v. RAYMOND, Mac. 525.—N.Z.

g. Diseased animal put in another's stable—Knowledge of servant.—A servant was instructed by his master to take a horse to a fair fifty miles off for sale. On his way to the place of sale, the servant put the horse in the pursuer's stable for a night's lodging. The horse was ill of glanders, & communicated the disease to the pursuer's horses in the same stable, by which again it was communicated to other cattle, in consequence of which both horses & cattle were destroyed. In an action against the master, to make good the damage thus occasioned:—Held: sufficient to aver & prove that the servant knew that the horse under his charge was affected with the disease, & it was not necessary to prove knowledge against the master.—BAIRD v. GRAHAM (1852), 24 Sc. Jur. 313; 14 D. 615; 1 Stuart, 578.—SCOT.

r. Agisted animal infected by diseased animal—Liability of agister.—A. averred that he placed a chestnut horse in a grazing park belonging to B., to be grazed at a certain stipulated rate; that B. thereafter put into the park a grey pony, knowing the pony to be diseased with glanders; that the pony communicated the disease to A.'s chestnut gelding; that A., seeing that his gelding was ill, but not knowing what was the disease, nor how the animal had caught it, took it home to his own stable; that it infected two other horses in the stable; & that these three horses died of the disease. In an action upon these averments, at A.'s instance against B., to recover the value of the three horses:—Held: the averments were relevant to infer liability not only for the chestnut gelding which had caught the disease in the park, but also for the other two horses which had caught it in the stable.—ROBERTSON v. CONNOLLM (1851), 23 J. 348; 14 D. 315; 1 Stuart, 104; 23 Sc. Jur. 348.—SCOT.

662 iv. —.]—Lien notes were given by deft. for the purchase price of two horses, which were infected with glanders & were killed by the govt. veterinary surgeon. Deft. failed to prove a warranty:—Held: the contract of sale was illegal, although there was no evidence that pltf. knew of the disease, & the lien notes were void, but pltf. might recover the sum of $200 received by deft. for compensation money from the govt., as money had & received by deft. for pltf.'s use, deft. being entitled to the costs of the action, to be set off pro tanto against the $200.—NICKLE v. HARRIS (1910), 14 W. L. R. 515; 3 S. L. R. 200.—CAN.

666 i. — Purchaser's animals infected.—Measure of damages.]—Defts. agreed to buy certain horses, provided they were as good as those defts. had inspected. In an action by pltf., defts. contended (inter alia) that pltf. knowingly allowed diseased animals to mix with the rest of the horses:—Held: (1) the failure of defts. in making an examination could not be considered contributory negligence; (2) pltf. did not knowingly spread the infection by allowing diseased animals with others not affected; (3) pltf. were negligent in not giving a warning; (4) defts. entitled only to fix damages caused by quarantine, etc.—URCH v. BALLS (1857), 2 H. & N. 299; 27 L. J. Ex. 45; 3 Jur. N. S. 592; 5 W. R. 740; 157 E. R. 124.

666. Measure of damages.]—Upon a sale of two oxen pltf. told deft. that if there was the least fear of disease, he would not have them, as he wanted to put them with his other stock, whereupon deft. replied that they were quite sound & free from disease. Pltf. thereupon purchased them, & placed them with his cattle; in a few days the two oxen died of the rinderpest, which they had upon them at the time of sale, & which disease they communicated to the other cattle of pltf., nine of which died therefrom. Upon an action upon the warranty:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover for the loss not only of the two oxen purchased, but for that of the nine other beasts.—KNOWLES v. NUNNS (1866), 14 L. T. 592.

667. — — —.]—Deft. sold a cow to pltf., a farmer, with a warranty that she was free from foot-&-mouth disease. Pltf. placed the cow (which had the disease) with other cows, & some of these became infected with the disease, & died, as also did the cow in question:—Held: deft. was liable in damages for the entire loss, if when he sold the cow he knew that pltf. was a farmer, & that he would or probably might place the infected cow with others.—SMITH v. GREEN (1875), 1 C. P. D. 92; 45 L. J. Q. B. 28; 33 L. T. 572; 40 J. P. 103; 24 W. R. 142.

Held: pltf. liable for damages due to the consequent infection of such other animals, viz., the price of the cow destroyed, loss of milk from that & other cows which had become affected through being inoculated by deft. to prevent the spread of the disease amongst her herd, & the cost of inoculation, such inoculation being a reasonable precaution in the circumstances, in order to minimise the damage & prevent further infection.—DEMPSTER & WALSH v. s. Animal shown at exhibition.—Owner's animals infected.]—Pltf. exhibited dogs at a show held by defts., & within a short time after the dogs were brought back to pltf.'s kennels, they & other dogs belonging to pltf. became ill with a violent form of distemper, in consequence of which many died & some were permanently injured. Pltf. alleged negligence, in consequence of which the dogs contracted the disease by infection from other dogs at the show:—Held: there was no proof that distemper germs, from which pltf.'s dogs could have contracted disease, were present at defts.' dog show at which pltf.'s dogs were exhibited, & pltf. had failed to establish negligence on the part of defts.—COLTART v. 669. Return of animal for breach of warranty—Infected while in possession of purchaser.—A purchaser of a horse sent it back to the seller on the ground of non-compliance with a warranty. The horse complied with the warranty, & whilst in the purchaser's stables, contracted a contagious disease. Of this the purchaser was unaware, when he sent back the horse. On arriving back at the seller's stables, other horses of the seller's contracted the disease from it & died:—Held: the seller could not recover damages from the purchaser for the loss of those other horses.—WRIGHT v. HETTON DOWNS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY (1883), 1 Cab. & El. 200.

670. Impounding mangy cattle — Custom of forest.—In an action of trespass for seizing & impounding pltf.'s mare, which was grazing in Waltham Forest, defts. pleaded a custom of the forest for seizing & impounding mangy cattle being thereon, & alleged that pltf.'s mare was mangy when she was put into the forest, & justified the impounding her under the custom. Pltf. replied that the mare was sound & well, & not labouring under any catching or infectious distemper whatsoever, & traversed without this, that the mare at the time when, etc., was sick & ill of, & labouring under, a catching & infectious distemper called mange, as defts. had alleged in their plea; & thereupon issue was joined & tried, when a verdict was found for pltf. & he had judgment for his damages, & all his costs.—PALMER v. 671. Throwing entrails of diseased animals on neighbour's land—Neighbour's animals thereby infected.—In an action upon the case for killing of cattle infected with murrain & throwing their entrails into pltf.'s field, whereby pltf. suffered loss, after verdict for pltf., upon not guilty pleaded, it was moved to be too uncertain because it did not appear what, nor how many, beasts perished:—Held: judgment should be given for pltf., because no such certainty was necessary in an action upon the case, which was not brought for the beasts themselves, or the value of them, but for damages sustained by their death through deft.'s means.—LODG (LODGE) v. WEEDEN (1647), Sty. 50; Aleyn, 22; 82 E. R. 522.

E. was a contractor for the supply of beef to the Royal Navy, & supplied beasts to be slaughtered at one of the dockyards, at which deft. C. was the superintendent of E.'s business, & that it was deft.'s duty to take care that healthy & sound beasts were supplied & slaughtered; yet defts. supplied & slaughtered certain diseased cattle, whereby pltf., who had been employed to cut up the carcasses of the cattle, was infected by the disease & suffered therefrom. The second count alleged that defts., by representing certain carcasses of beasts to be sound & healthy, procured pltf. to cut them up, & the carcasses being diseased, pltf. contracted the disease & was permanently injured. The third count alleged that defts., well knowing that certain carcasses were diseased & infectious, employed pltf., who was ignorant of their being diseased, to cut them up, whereby pltf. became infected & was injured:—Held: the first & second counts did not disclose a cause of action, but the third did.—DAVIES v. ENGLAND & CURTIS (1864), 33 L. J. Q. B. 321; 10 Jur. N. S. 1235.

Exposure of diseased animal—In public place—Nuisance.—An indictment charged deft. with bringing a mare into a public place where divers liege subjects then were, well knowing it to be inflicted with a contagious, infectious, & dangerous disease called the glanders, to the great danger of infecting with the disease the liege subjects to the common nuisance, etc.:—Held: the indictment was good, after verdict, without an allegation that deft. knew the glanders to be a disease which was communicable to the human race by infection.—R. v. HENSON (1852), Dears. C. C. 24; 20 L. T. O. S. 63; 16 J. P. 711.

SECT. 2.—UNDER STATUTE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—ISOLATION.

§ 674. Removal of animals.—An Ord. in Council prohibited cattle being brought or sent without licence from any place out of district C. into any place within such district, provided that it should not be unlawful to send or carry such animal by railway through such jurisdiction. A. drove cattle without licence from a place out of C. into a railway station within C., thence to be conveyed by railway:—Held: he was rightly convicted, for he was not within the exception contained in the proviso.—CHAPMAN v. CHAMBERS (1866), 30 J. P. 583.

675. — Different part of farm.—An order of justices, made with reference to the cattle plague, prohibited the removal of certain animals specified from any one farm or place in the same county to any other farm or place therein, except that by licence of justices the owner might remove them from premises in his own occupation to other premises also in his own occupation:—Held: the above order did not prohibit the owner from removing without licence cattle from a field on one side of a highway to a field on the other side of such highway, both fields being part of the same farm, but it might be otherwise if they belonged to different farms, though in the same occupation.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

t. Removal of animals — Order for fine or imprisonment—Jurisdiction of justices.—M. was prosecuted upon two summonses, by the guardians of the B. Union, for moving into a district under their control certain cattle from a district declared to be infected, without having obtained a licence for such removal. After the evidence had concluded, the chairman announced that the magistrates were of opinion that the charge was proved, & that a fine of £50 altogether would be imposed,

£25, with £1 costs, in each case, & in default of payment within fourteen days, imprisonment for one month for each offence. The minute in the Ord. Book, in column 7, headed "Particulars of Ord. or Dismissal" was, in each case: "Fined £25, & costs £1, one-third to the guardians, or, in default, one month's imprisonment. Warrant to issue"; but columns 9, 10, 12, 13 & 14 were not filled up. The orders were not made up as convictions, & no warrant had been issued, in consequence of an intimation by M. that he intended to apply for a certiorari. A conditional order for a certiorari having been obtained, on the grounds, amongst others, that the orders were ex facie bad, uncertain, & alternative, & that they left to M. the option of electing between fine & imprisonment, & that the magistrates failed to exercise the discretion as to which punishment should be inflicted under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, s. 61:—Held: such objections to the orders were not tenable, & the conditional order for a certiorari should be discharged.—R. v. DUBLIN COUNTY JUSTICES (1885), 18 I. L. R. 106.—IR.

ANIMALS.

Sect. 2.—Under statute: Sub-sects. 1 & 2.]

—EUSTACE v. SARGEANT (1866), 14 L. T. 552; 30 J. P. 584.

676. — Completion of offence—Jurisdiction of justices.]—The removal of an infected animal from the county of S. to that of M. does not give the justices of the latter county jurisdiction to deal with the case. The offence is complete as soon as the animal has been removed from its place of location, & therefore, the justices of the former county alone have power to hear the cause or to punish the offender.—R. v. WILLIAMS (1866), 15 L. T. 290; 30 J. P. 823.

677. — Licence—Power of justices to inquire into.]—On the hearing of an information under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1848 (c. 107), s. 4, for removing cattle without a licence, the magistrates, on the production of a licence, have no jurisdiction to inquire into the sufficiency of the evidence upon which it was granted.—STANHOPE v. THORSBY (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 423; Har. & Ruth. 459; 35 L. J. M. C. 182; 14 L. T. 332; 30 J. P. 342; 12 Jur. N. S. 374.

678. — Implied repeal of Order.]—An Ord. in Council of Nov. 23 prohibited all cattle (including sheep) from being brought into the jurisdiction from places without. Another Ord. in Council of Dec. 16 prohibited cattle (other than sheep) being removed from places within to other places within the jurisdiction. B., after the Ord. of Dec. 16 had been applied to his county, imported sheep from a place without the jurisdiction:—Held: he was properly convicted, for the Ord. of Dec. did not impliedly repeal the Ord. of Nov., the one Ord. being directed against importation of sheep, & the other being directed against removal of cattle other than sheep within the same jurisdiction.—BOLTON v. HODGKINSON (1866), 31 J. P. 132.

679. — —.]—The justices of the petty sessional division of S., on Dec. 12, 1865, made an order prohibiting sheep, etc., being brought from any place without their jurisdiction to any place within. B. was a parish without, & W. a parish within, their jurisdiction, but both were within the same county. On Jan. 18 P. brought sheep without licence from B. to W., but the justices of the quarter sessions of the county had, on Jan. 4, made a new order under an Ord. in Council which substituted the justices of the county instead of the justices of petty sessions for the local authority. There was no express repeal of the petty sessional order by the quarter sessions' order:—Held: the latter order impliedly repealed the former order, & P. had committed no offence, inasmuch as he had not brought sheep from without the county to a place within it.—PEARCE v. O'BRIEN (1867), 31 J. P. 133.

680. — Mistake in licence—Jurisdiction of justices.]—W. bought cattle at A. in Norfolk & directed them to be sent to B. in Yorkshire. By mistake the licences & invoices necessary were filled up, showing the destination of the cattle to be D. in Durham county, & were sent there. W. at once ordered them, while still at the railway station at D., to be sent on from D. to B., & was afterwards convicted by the justices of Yorkshire for sending the cattle without licence from D. to B.:—Held: the offence, if any, was committed at D., & as the justices of Yorkshire had no jurisdiction in D., the conviction was defective on the face of it.—R. v. WORDSWORTH (1867), 31 J. P. 727.

681. — Metropolis.]—The prohibition to remove cattle within the metropolis without a licence from the comrs. of the police under orders of Mar. 24, 1866:—Held: to apply to cattle removed from a place without to places within the metropolis, though the owner had duly obtained a licence signed by a justice of the place from which the cattle were about to be removed.—MACKAY v. MARCHANT (1867), 31 J. P. 710.

682. — Liability of railway company—Jurisdiction of justices.]—An Ord. in Council made under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), provided that if an animal was moved in contravention of the regulations of any local authority, the person "causing, directing, or permitting" the movement should be deemed guilty of an offence against the Act. The local authority of the county of Dorset having by regulations prohibited the movement of animals into their district except under specified conditions, animals were consigned to a place within the district, with through bills from Cork via Bristol & a specified route. Applts. were no parties to the contract with the consignor, but in furtherance of the scheme of carriage carried the animals on their railway over a portion of the route outside the county of Dorset, whence they were subsequently carried into that county by another co.:—Held: applts. were liable to be convicted of an offence against the Act as persons "causing, directing, or permitting" the movement of the animals within the Ord. in Council, & the justices of the county of Dorset had jurisdiction to convict.—MIDLAND RY. CO. v. FREEMAN (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 629; 53 L. J. M. C. 79; 48 J. P. 660; 32 W. R. 830.

Annotation:—Appld. Williams v. G. W. Ry. Co. (1885), 52 L. T. 250.

683. — —. For refusal to carry.]—By an Ord. in Council made in exercise of the powers given under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), it was ordered that any local authority in England or Wales might, with the view of preventing the introduction of foot-&-mouth disease into their district, make regulations for prohibiting or regulating the movement by land or water of animals into their district from the district of any other local authority, provided that any regulation made by a local authority under the Ord. should not restrict movement of animals by railway through the district of that local authority; & that if an animal was moved in contravention of the Ord., or of a regulation of a local authority thereunder, the owner of the animal, & the person for the time being in charge of the animal, & the person causing, directing, or permitting the movement, & the person or co. moving or conveying the animal, should be deemed guilty of an offence against the above Act. The local authority of G. county made a regulation that no animal might be moved into the district of the local authority, except that fat animals for immediate slaughter might be moved in from districts free from disease, subject to the following regulation: "Before any movement into the county district, or removal from the railway truck in the county district, takes place, the owner, consignee, or person in charge shall deliver to the inspector of the local authority a declaration under the Act." W. tendered fat animals to defts. in a district free from disease for carriage into G. district, but defts. refused to carry the cattle unless furnished by W. with a "declaration under the Act." In an action by W. against defts. to recover damages & expenses incurred by him through breach of duty on the part of defts.:—Held: notwithstanding the words of the regulation "or before removal from the railway truck in the

684. Removal of dung—Risk of infection—Evidence.]—An order of quarter sessions ordered that no persons should bring or send hides, skins, or any dung whatsoever, or any litter likely to propagate infection from any place, etc., to any place, etc. Y., who had stables in London, sent without licence a cartload of his stable litter into another jurisdiction, & the justices convicted him under the above order, though there was no evidence of the likelihood of such dung to propagate infection:—Held: the conviction was wrong, & the justices could only convict where it was proved the dung was likely to propagate infection.—YOUNGMAN v. MORRIS (1866), 15 L. T. 276; 31 J. P. 6.

685. Removal of grass—Prohibition of removal of hay.]—An Ord. in Council prohibited the removal without a licence of hay, straw, litter, or other articles forming the food of animals, or used for or about animals. W., a farmer, bought at an auction some growing grass within an infected district, & after cutting it, removed it for the purpose of being stacked near his homestead, which was not in such district:—Held: this was hay within the Ord., & he was properly convicted for not obtaining a licence.—WATSON v. COATES (1867), 31 J. P. 150.

686. Holding sale—Hawking pigs.]—Markets & Fairs (Swine Fever) Ord., 1896, made in pursuance of Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 22 (xix.), provided that no market, fair, sale, or exhibition of swine should be held in a district to which the Ord. applied except as expressly authorised by the Ord., & that a sale of swine (not being in a swine fever infected area) might be held with the licence of a local authority. M. was in charge of a horse & float passing along a highway containing pigs, two of which had been previously ordered, & whilst so travelling, asked other people if they wanted to buy pigs, & subsequently sold them all to various people. This was not a swine fever infected area, & there had been no licence obtained from the local authority. The magistrates held that there had been no contravention of the above Ord., & dismissed the information:—Held: the magistrates were right, for, although there was a selling, there was no holding a sale.—MCLEAN v. MONK (1898), 77 L. T. 663; 62 J. P. 180; 42 Sol. Jo. 199; 18 Cox, C. C. 686.

SUB-SECT. 2.—DISINFECTION.

687. Inspector's order to foreman—Liability of master for foreman's disobedience.]—By an Ord. in Council, issued under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1848 (c. 107), every inspector had power to cause to be cleansed & disinfected within his district any premises in which animals labouring under the cattle plague had been, & every owner or occupier of such premises was to obey any order given by such inspector for that purpose, subject to a penalty of £20 for disobedience. An inspector gave an order to the foreman of applt. (who was not present, & resided at a distance) to disinfect the premises, which order was not obeyed:—Semble: applt. was not liable for the disobedience of the order by his foreman.—SEARLE v. REYNOLDS (1866), 7 B. & S. 704; 14 L. T. 518; 31 J. P. 4.

688. Cleansing cattle trucks—Charges by railway company.]—An Ord. in Council under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1848, directed that every carriage, truck, etc., should be cleansed & disinfected by the owners in manner therein pointed out once in every twenty-four hours during the time when it was used for any animal. Defts. were authorised by stat. to charge certain rates for the carriage of goods on their line, & also to "charge a reasonable sum for loading, covering, & unloading of goods . . . & for delivery & collection & any other services incidental to the business or duty of situate, was declared to be an area infected with foot & mouth disease, & it became unsafe to move the cattle except by a licence of the local authority, & they averred that no such licence was forthcoming when cattle arrived at Lynn, & the local authority prevented the cattle from being moved until such licence was obtained & produced to their proper officer, & defts. averred that such licence was afterwards obtained & produced to the officer, whereupon the local authority permitted the cattle to be removed, & defts. thereupon forthwith removed same & delivered them to pltf. They further pleaded that it was unlawful to move or carry the cattle from Peterborough to March without a licence of the local authority of the county of Norfolk, & that previous to the arrival of the cattle at Peterborough pltf. had not obtained such licence, nor was any such licence given, & the cattle were prevented from being carried for a time. Pltf. replied that as owner of the cattle he made & signed the required declarations, but defts. negligently made default in forwarding same & producing same to the local authority:—Held: defts. were under no obligation to procure the licences, nor was any duty imposed on them to forward the declaration, & they would not be responsible in the circumstances for delay in carriage within such reasonable time, occasioned by the regulations of the Act & Ord. in Council.—LYNCH v. MIDLAND RY. Co. (1882), 16 I. L. T. 115.—IR.

w. — Permitting.]—A cattle dealer was convicted of an offence within Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, on the ground that he had permitted the removal of certain cattle from his farm into Lanarkshire unaccompanied by a declaration under the regulations of the local authority of Lanarkshire. In a case on appeal obtained by him it was stated that applt. sold the cattle at his farm in Ayrshire, where they were delivered to the purchaser; that the person who drove them into Lanarkshire had not a declaration properly filled up under the regulations of the local authority of that county; that the justices were "of opinion that applt. was the only person who could have made the declaration, & in permitting the removal of the cattle without such declaration, in the knowledge that they were to be removed into the county of Lanarkshire, was guilty of the offence charged":—Held: the grounds stated were not sufficient to justify the conviction, which must be set aside.—DUNLOP v. WEIR (1888), 16 R. 14; 26 Sc. L. R. 93.—SCOT.

x. Lawful excuse.] A person accused of an offence against a regulation of a local authority, forbidding cattle to be moved into its district without the person so moving them having made a certain declaration, or obtained a certain licence, admitted that he had moved a cow into the district without making a declaration or obtaining a licence, but proved that the inspector of the local authority, acting in official capacity, had informed him, shortly before the occasion charged, that a declaration or licence would not be necessary:—Held: he had established a lawful excuse, & not liable to be convicted.—ROBERTS v. INVERNESS LOCAL AUTHORITY (1889), 17 R. 19; 27 Sc. L. R. 198.—SCOT.

y. — — —.]—A local authority issued a regulation prohibiting the landing in their district of certain animals, including horses, without a declaration by the owner & a veterinary certificate to a certain effect. The captain of a ship landed certain ponies on the faith of a statement by the agent for the owners that a certificate & declaration had been sent to him. The certificate & declaration, when produced, did not satisfy the requirements of the regulation:—Held: the captain was bound to see that the requirements of the regulation were satisfied, & he had not, in the circumstances, "lawful authority or excuse" for failing to comply with it.—HOWMAN v. (1897), 2 Adm 369; 25 R. 8; 1 F. 55; 35 Sc. L. R. 29; 5 S. L. T. 151.—SCOT.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

a. Disinfecting cattle trucks—Injury to animals therefrom.]—Action for the loss of pigs which had been penned by defts. in a pen at the station negligently covered with lime-wash, by reason of which the pigs were injured. Defts. pleaded that an Ord. in Council had been made requiring loading pens to be disinfected with lime-wash, & that it was necessary for defts. to pen all pigs; that the disinfecting with lime-wash was pursuant to the Ord., & that it was the lime-wash that injured the pigs:—Held: the defence afforded no prima facie answer to the charge of negligence alleged, & it was consistent with the defence that the pigs might have been placed in a pen while still wet from the application of the lime or chloride of lime wash, or that there were some means whereby defts. could have prevented the injury caused by the lime.—SHAW v. GREAT S. & W. RY. Co. (1881) 8 L. R. Ir. 10; 15 I. L. T. Jo. 115.—IR.

a carrier . . . & for any other extraordinary services performed" by defts. Pltf. sent cattle by defts.' line:—Held: defts. could not require pltf. to pay the cost properly incurred by defts. under the Ord. in Council in cleansing the truck in which the cattle were sent, as the cleansing was not a service done for pltf. individually as distinguished from the rest of the public.—COX v. GREAT EASTERN Ry. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 181; 38 L. J. C. P. 151.

689. Ship—Disinfection of part insufficient.]—Held*: in cattle-carrying vessels the Ords. in Council under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), required the whole vessel to be disinfected, & not merely those parts with which cattle were in contact while carried.—ISMAY, IMRIE & Co. v. BLAKE (1892), 66 L. T. 530; 56 J. P. 486; 8 T. L. R. 277; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 189.

690. Sheep dipping—Approved dip—Date of dipping.]—Under Sheep Dipping (North of England) Ord. of 1906, it became the duty of deft. to dip certain sheep in an approved sheep dip between Sept. 15 & Sept. 30, 1906. Deft. in fact dipped the sheep, but not in a dip approved by the Board of Agriculture, on Sept. 26. He was thereupon convicted before justices under the Ord. for not dipping the sheep on Sept. 26 in an approved sheep dip:—Held: inasmuch as deft. was under no duty to dip the sheep on Sept. 26, the particular day stated, but had until Sept. 30 to dip them in an approved dip, the conviction disclosed no offence known to the law & was bad.—BINGLEY v. QUEST (1907), 97 L. T. 394; 71 J. P. 443; 21 Cox, C. C. 505; 5 L. G. R. 938.

SUB-SECT. 3.—IMPORTATION OF DISEASED ANIMALS.

691. Provision of proper pens—Jurisdiction of justices at port of arrival.]—Sheep were carried upon the deck of a vessel from Ireland to Wales without being divided into pens as required by an Ord. in Council:—Held: although Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), did not extend to Ireland, this was a continuing offence, punishable in Wales, & Welsh justices had jurisdiction to entertain proceedings for a penalty under the above Act & against the master of the vessel.—MUIR v. HORE (1877), 47 L. J. M. C. 17; 37 L. T. 315; 41 J. P. 471.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.

691 i. Provision of proper pens.]—The owners of a steamship were charged with a contravention of Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), & an Ord. of the Board of Agriculture issued thereunder. It was proved that the mate of the steamship had placed certain sheep in a hold of the ship where there were no battens, because, in his opinion, it was for the advantage of the sheep, in the circumstances, that they should be so placed:—Held: the accused had failed to establish a lawful excuse within the above Act.—HOWMAN v. ORKNEY STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD. (1899), 1 F. 55; 36 Sc. L. R. 325.—SCOT.

691 ii. — Right to recover damages for loss.]—A s.s. co. contracted to carry a number of sheep under conditions excluding liability for any act, neglect, or mistake in judgment of themselves or their servants. On the voyage the sheep were seriously overcrowded in breach of Board of Trade regulations, & several were killed:—Held: the owners could not recover for the loss because (a) even if wilful misconduct did not fall within the condition, no such misconduct had been proved, & (b) the Board of Trade regulations were directed only to preventing the spread of disease, or perhaps to preventing cruelty to the sheep, & neither they nor Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), upon which they were founded, could be construed as giving the owner any right to recover damages for his loss, as that was no part of their policy.—M'ALLISTER v. AYR STEAM SHIPPING CO., LTD. (1910), 41 I. L. T. 106.—IR.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.

b. Power of local authority to withhold compensation—Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), s. 30 (7).]—To justify a local authority in withholding compensation for an animal slaughtered it is necessary that they should ascertain & determine that the offence has been committed, & that such determination should be recorded in the minutes, & it is not necessary that the outbreak of disease should be traceable to the offence.

for carrying cattle from Buenos Ayres to Birkenhead in their vessel, which was not fitted with pens which conformed to the requirements of Foreign Animals Ord., 1895. Resps., who knew that the vessel was not so fitted, instructed the master to ship cattle if an opportunity arose, but they gave him no instructions to have pens properly fitted. Resps. were convicted, but upon appeal to quarter sessions the conviction was reversed:—Held: (1) the absence of instructions from resps. to the master to have the pens properly fitted might or might not make the resps. liable, according to surrounding circumstances; (2) this was a question of fact, & there was no appeal from the recorder's decision upon it.—HINDUSTAN S.S. Co. v. BIRKENHEAD JJ. & POCKOCK (1897), 61 J. P. Jo. 708.

693. Animal "brought from a port"—Slaughtered on board ship.]—Foreign Animals Ord., 1910, art. 2, made under Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 30 (1), provided that it was unlawful, without a licence from the Board of Agriculture & Fisheries, "to bring into a port in Great Britain any cattle, sheep, goats or swine brought from a port in a scheduled country." The schedule provided that France should be a country to which the Ord. should apply. Resp., the master of a steamer, on a voyage homeward from the East, put into the port of Marseilles in France with a live sheep on board, but the sheep was not landed at Marseilles. The steamer subsequently arrived in the port of London with the live sheep still on board. The sheep was not landed in London, but was slaughtered on board for food. No licence had been given by the Board of Agriculture & Fisheries in respect of the sheep:—Held: resp. had not committed an offence against the above art., as the sheep was not brought from the port of Marseilles within the above art.—GLOVER v. ROBERTSON (1912), 106 L. T. 118; 76 J. P. 135; 22 Cox, C. C. 692; 10 L. G. R. 230.

SUB-SECT. 4.—SLAUGHTER OF DISEASED ANIMALS AND COMPENSATION.

694. Foreign animals—Not slaughtered in pursuance of statutory provisions.]—Under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), no compensation is payable by local authorities in respect of foreign animals slaughtered after their arrival, but before being landed at a British port; for compensation is only payable where animals have been slaughtered in pursuance of the Act, &

In an action against a local authority, by the owner of cattle slaughtered by their order, for compensation, the local authority founded on a minute of meeting after the date of the action, in which they stated their opinion "that the pursuer had not adducted any reason to induce the authority to pay compensation for these animals in regard to which it is alleged that an offence had been committed," & resolved to withhold compensation, & pleaded that the jurisdiction of the Ct. was excluded. The Ct., in respect that the minute did not state that defenders had ascertained & determined that the offences had been committed, adjourned the case to allow them to supply this defect in their determination, & on a subsequent minute of meeting being produced, setting forth a finding by them the Act does not authorise local authorities to order such animals to be slaughtered.—NISSLER v. HULL CORPN. (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 325; 49 L. J. Q. B. 501; 42 L. T. 894; 44 J. P. 664; 28 W. R. 700.

SUB-SECT. 5.—LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

695. Expenses—Cattle plague rate—Borough included in county rate—Validity.—On an appeal against an assessment to a cattle plague rate purporting to be in the nature of, & levied in all respects in the same manner as, a county rate, & as provided by Cattle Diseases Prevention Acts of 1866 (cc. 2, 4, 15, 110), it was proved that the rate was levied upon a township situate within & forming part of the borough of S., a borough within Municipal Corpn. Act, 1835 (c. 76), but assessed to & paying its proportion of the county rate, & that no steps had been taken to annex the borough to the local authority of the county for the purposes of the Ord. in Council of Mar. 24, 1866, but that on the contrary the corpn. of the borough had, in pursuance of such Ord., formed themselves into a separate local authority & appointed an inspector, whose fees had from time to time been paid out of the borough fund :—Held : the rate was good & valid, notwithstanding that the result of the rate was that the borough of S. was rated twice over, the question whether the rate was excessive or not being a question for the quarter sessions, & not one which rendered the rate altogether bad.—BRIGHTSIDE BIERLOW OVERSEERS v. WEST RIDING JJ. (1867), 31 J. P. Jo. 388.

696. ——— Recovery of.]—An action was brought in a ct. in which “M., the inspector appointed by the local authority for the county of H., under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70),” was pltf., & S. deft.; in the particulars the local authority claimed £4 10s. for the hire of a meadow for twenty-six days, & the keep & other expenses of certain animals seized under the above Act. Deft. had been summoned before justices for exposing the animals which were affected with a contagious disease, but the information was dismissed, on the ground that deft. had not knowledge of it :—Held : (1) the local authority, though not a corpn., could sue for the expenses in their own name; (2) the expenses were recoverable independently of whether the owner was convicted or not.—MILLS v. SCOTT (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 406; 42 L. J. Q. B. 234; 29 L. T. 96; 37 J. P. 807; 21 W. R. 915.

697. ——— From county council—Limitation of time for suing.]—The justices of a county, as the local authority for the county, neglected between the years 1869 & 1878 to recoup to pltf., as the local authority for a borough within the county, the proportionate amount contributed by the borough to the expenses incurred by the local authority of the county in carrying out Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), which they were bound to repay under s. 97 of that Act. After the passing of Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), pltf. sued defts., as successors of the local authority for the county, to recover the sums which should have been recouped :—Held : the only remedy against the justices would have been by mandamus to them to pay the amounts claimed out of moneys in their hands, or to levy a rate for the purpose, & as Local Government Act, 1888, vested in the county council the property of the justices for the county subject to the same conditions & restrictions as if the Act had not been passed, defts. were not liable in the action; (2) if any action would lie, it would be an action on the case, & not an action for debt on a stat., & Stat. Limitations was a bar to the claim.—SALFORD CORPN. v. LANCASHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 384; 59 L. J. Q. B. 576; 63 L. T. 409; 55 J. P. 85; 38 W. R. 661; 6 T. L. R. 362, C. A.

698. Of burial of frozen carcasses washed ashore—Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 46.]—A vessel carrying a cargo of frozen meat ran ashore, & some of the carcasses were washed ashore & by direction of the Board of Trade were buried by the Receiver of Wrecks. The Receiver of Wrecks demanded from & was paid by the county council the expenses he had incurred, & the county council then demanded them from the owners of the vessel. In an action to recover the amount of the expenses against the owners of the vessel :—Held : the expenses were recoverable from the owners of the vessel, as the above sect. did not refer only to diseased carcasses or to carcasses of animals shipped alive.—THE SUEVIC, [1908] P. 292; 77 L. J. P. 152; 99 L. T. 474; 72 J. P. 407; 24 T. L. R. 699; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 149; 6 L. G. R. 946.

699. Delegation of powers—By executive committee to local sub-committee—Validity of order.]—The duly appointed executive committee of a county council (which, by virtue of Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), was the local authority for the purpose of Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts) made an order delegating to local sub-committees its powers under those Acts & Rabies Ord., 1887. Subsequent to such delegation the executive committee, without expressly revoking the delegation, issued certain regulations under Rabies Ord., 1887, as to the muzzling of dogs & keeping them under control; no regulations under Rabies Ord., 1887, had been issued by the local sub-committee :—Held : (1) the delegation was not equivalent to a resignation by the executive committee of its own powers, & the delegated authority was subject to resumption at any time; (2) the regulations were valid.—HUTH v. CLARKE (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 391; 59 L. J. Q. B. 559; 63 L. T. 348; 55 J. P. 86; 38 W. R. 655; 6 T. L. R. 373.

700. Negligence of inspector—Liability of local authority.]—Local authorities :—Held : not liable, for the negligence of an inspector appointed by them under Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), where the alleged negligence was in respect of his having, whilst acting under Sheep-Scab Ord., 1898, seized & detained in a market sheep suspected of sheep-scab.—*STANBURY v. & pigs.—MACKAY v. DAVIES (1904), 1 C. L. R. 483.—AUS.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 5.

d. Failure to appoint inspectors.]—A local authority failed to appoint an inspector as required by Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), & disease having broken out amongst pltf.’s cattle, some of them died. The local authority did not slaughter any of pltf.’s cattle, nor did they pay him any compensation. In an action for damages for failure to carry out the provisions of the above Act, so that the animals died :—Held : pltf. could not maintain the action, nor an action for a peremptory mandamus.—*MULCAHY v. Removal of herd of cattle—Single offence.]—An Ord. in Council said it should not be lawful to bring or send any animal from one place to another after a certain date, & every person offending, for every such offence, should forfeit a sum not exceeding £20. R. drove nine cows in one herd within a prohibited place:—Held: R. had only committed one offence with respect to the whole nine cattle, & did not incur a separate penalty for each cow.—RAYNOR v. HORNE (1866), 30 J. P. 501.

704. Failure to notify police—Publication of Order in Council.]—On an information against applt., alleging that he had five sheep affected with a contagious disease & did not give notice to a constable, as required by an Ord. in Council, it was proved that applt. had five sheep so affected:—Held: (1) there was prima facie evidence on which applt. might be convicted of the offence charged, & it lay on him to show if he could that he had given notice to a police constable; (2) whether publication of the Ord. in Council was necessary to its validity or not, the production of a copy purporting to be printed by the Govt. printers was prima facie evidence of the Ord. under Documentary Evidence Act, 1868 (c. 37), s. 2; (3) no penalty being imposed by the Ord. & the offence being with respect to more than four animals, the justices had power, under s. 103, to inflict a penalty of £20 or £5 for each animal. Semble: publication was not necessary to the validity of the Ord.—HUGGINS v. 705. — Proof of scienter.]—An Ord. in Council made under the authority of Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, provided that any person in charge or possession of a diseased animal should give notice to a police constable of the fact of the animal being so affected:—Held: before a person could be convicted before a magistrate for a breach of the above enactment, it was necessary to prove that the accused was aware that the animal was suffering from a contagious disorder.—NICHOLS (NICHOLIS) v. HALL (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 322; 42 L. J. M. C. 105; 28 L. T. 473; 37 J. P. 424; 21 W. R. 579.

A further charge was preferred against him before the borough justices of failing to give notice to the borough police in respect of the same animals under the sect.:—Held: (1) the first conviction was no bar to the proceedings on the second charge, the offences being different; (2) the burden of proof of guilty knowledge lay upon the prosecution & had not been discharged, & the charge was properly dismissed on that ground.—R. v. COULMAN (1883), 48 J. P. 8.

PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 6.

e. Exposure for sale of diseased animal.]—The word "animal" in Cattle Slaughtering & Diseased Animals & Meat Act, 1902 (No. 36), s. 47, by which it is an offence to sell, or consign, or expose for sale any diseased animal, means a living & not a dead animal. Costs were allowed against a public officer, where it appeared that, at the time the proceedings were instituted, the complainant had no reasonable ground for believing that an offence had been committed.—Ex p. LOMAX (1906), 6 S. R. N. S. W. 705.—AUS.

f. Failure to notify police—Sheep "suspected of" scabs.]—Sheep-scab Ord. of 1905 of the Board of Agriculture & Fisheries, art. 1 (1), enacts that "Every person having or having had in his possession or under his charge a sheep affected with, or suspected of, sheep-scab shall with all practicable speed give notice of the fact of the sheep being so affected or suspected to a constable of the police force for the police area wherein the sheep so affected or suspected is or was":—Held: (1) in a prosecution for contravention of the above art., if it were proved that it was within the knowledge of the accused that a reasonable suspicion of sheep-scab existed, it was not necessary, in order to convict, to prove that the accused himself shared that suspicion; (2) whether there was or was not a reasonable suspicion was a question of fact in each case, & would depend on the knowledge of the person suspecting the existence of scab, & the comparative knowledge of the owner or custodian to whom the suspicion was communicated.—MACLEAN v. LAIDLAW, [1909] S. C. 68; 4 Sc. L. R. 877; 2 S. L. T. 140.—SCOT.

g. — Form of complaint.]—Held*: in a complaint for contravention of Diseases of Animals Act, 1874 (c. 97), s. 4. (1) (b), as extended by Anthrax Ord., 1829, s. 16, it was sufficient to specify the sect. of the Act constituting the offence & the Ord. extending the Act, without libelling the particular sect. of the Act authorising the Ord., whereby the Act was extended.—CLARKE v. WOOD (1900), 37 Sc. L. R. 929; 8 S. L. T. 118.—SCOT.

h. Driving sheep without permit—Scabby sheep.]—A servant, who drives a flock of sheep for his employer, is liable to the penalties imposed by Sheep Act, 1878, s. 45, unless he has a permit from the inspector, if even one of the sheep is infected with scab, & this although he holds a clean certificate for the flock, is unaware of the existence of the disease, & is driving through a clean district.—RICHARDSON v. KENDERBY (1882), 1 N. Z. L. R. 231.—N.Z.

i. Failure to clean—Scabby sheep.]—When, under Sheep Act, 1878, deft. is ordered to clean a flock of sheep, & nine months afterwards he is convicted under s. 23 for having failed to clean the flock, he may be fined for the number of sheep composing the flock when the information on the latter charge was laid, & not when the original order was made.

An information, under s. 23, that the deft., having been served with an order to clean his flock, failed to do so within six months, " & has further failed to clean the sheep within a further period of three months next following such period of six months," when sworn by the sheep inspector himself, imports that in the opinion of the inspector the sheep are infected at the time of the

m. Conviction for keeping scabby sheep—Liability of purchaser to be further convicted—Res judicata.]—Where sheep are bought from an owner, who has been convicted of being the owner of infected sheep under Sheep Act, 1878, s. 23, the purchaser cannot be convicted under the same sect. of having the same sheep still infected six months after the former conviction.—INGLIS v. R. (1885), 4 N. Z. L. R. 61.—N.Z.

n. Seizure & sale on non-payment of penalties—Scabby sheep.]—Where a conviction has been recorded against "the owner" of a scabby flock of sheep, the sheep can be seized & sold on non-payment of the penalties under Sheep Act, 1878, s. 64, as against a mtgee. not in possession, & although the warrant of distress is not issued for more than ten days after the conviction. Qu.: whether such a seizure would be good as against a bona fide purchaser or incumbrancer for value after the expiration of ten days from the conviction.—LEVIN v. SMART (1884), 2 N. Z. L. R. 290.—N.Z.

o. Evidence—Opinion of sheep inspector—Scabby sheep.]—To support a conviction under Sheep Act, 1878, s. 23, it is necessary to prove that some sheep are actually infected. The mere non-existence of a clean certificate is not sufficient. Semble: where it is proved the sheep are infected, the opinion of the sheep inspector is final on the question whether reasonable efforts have been made to clean the sheep.—COOKE v. WACHSMANN (1888), 6 N. Z. L. R. 399.—N.Z.

707. Evidence—Certificate of veterinary inspector.]—H. was summoned for exposing in a public market pigs suffering from typhoid fever. A certificate of the veterinary inspector under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), s. 51, that the pigs were so suffering was put in by the prosecution. H. tendered evidence to prove that he did not know, & had no means of knowing, that the pigs were suffering from fever. The justices refused to receive such rebutting evidence & convicted H.:—Held: the justices were wrong in rejecting the evidence, though what effect it might have was a matter for the justices to consider.—HARRIS v. SMITH (1879), 44 J. P. 361.

708. Penalties—Who may recover.]—A private person may prefer informations under Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), & the Ords. made under that Act, for the right to enforce such Act & Ords. is not confined to the local authority.—R. v. STEWART, Ex p. BURNHAM, [1896] 1 Q. B. 300; 65 L. J. M. C. 83; 74 L. T. 54; 60 J. P. 356; 44 W. R. 368; 40 Sol. Jo. 259; 18 Cox, C. C. 232.

707 i. — Certificate of veterinary inspector.]—Where a person is charged before the magistrates under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (c. 74), evidence is not admissible for the purpose of contradicting the fact certified, viz., that the animal was diseased, but is admissible for the purpose of showing that the person charged had no knowledge of the existence of the disease, & could not with reasonable diligence have obtained that knowledge. Such absence of knowledge is a good defence.—LEONARD v. RICHARDS (1891), 25 L. L. T. 58.—IR.

707 ii. — —.]—In pursuance of an Ord. of the Board of Agriculture the inspector of a local authority, by notice in writing, required the owner of certain sheep, certified by the inspector to be affected with scab, to treat them with dipping or other remedy. In a prosecution against the owner for failure to comply, the justices admitted evidence to prove that the sheep were not affected with scab, & in respect thereof held resp. had lawful excuse, & found the charge not proven:—Held: the inspector's certificate being conclusive, evidence to contradict it was incompetent, & resp. ought to have been convicted.—JAMESON v. DOW (1898), 2 F. 24; 37 Sc. L. R. 213; 7 S. L. T. 281.—SCOT.

NOTE.—The Act now in force in England is Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), herein referred to as Act of 1889. The Act repealed (inter alia) Arbitration Act, 1698 (c. 15). Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), & Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c. 125), herein referred to as Act of 1698, C. P. Act, 1833, & C. L. P. Act, 1854, respectively. In considering the cases set out in this title regard must be had to their date, the Act under which they were decided, & the effect of the subsequent Acts.

Part I.—The Submission.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1. Definition of arbitration.]—An arbn. is a reference to the decision of one or more persons, either with or without an umpire, of some matter or matters in difference between the parties.—COLLINS v. COLLINS (1858), 26 Beav. 306; 28 L. J. Ch. 184; 32 L. T. O. S. 233; 5 Jur. N. S. 30; 7 W. R. 115; 53 E. R. 916.

Annotations:—Folld. Bos v. Helsham* (1866), L. R. 2 Exch. 72. Consd. Re Hopper (1867), 8 B. & S. 100; Vickers v. Vickers (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 529. Distd. Thomson v. Anderson (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 523. Apld. Re Evans, Davies & Caddick (1870), 22 L. T. 507; Re Dawdy (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 426, C. A. Reid. Turner v. Goulden (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 57. Mentd. De Rosaz v. Anglo-Italian Bank (1869), 10 B. & S. 354; Re Carus-Wilson & Greene (1886), 56 L. J. Q. B. 530, C. A.

2. — Distinguished from proceedings in court.]—An arbn.-room is anything but a forum of confession; & the whole difference between that & a ct. of justice is, that it is a tribunal chosen by the parties themselves; but still, a matter comes as adversely before an arbitrator as before any other tribunal (VAUGHAN, B.).—DOE d. LLOYD v. EVANS (1827), 3 C. & P. 219.

3. — In nature of judicial inquiry.]—Arbn. is a method of settling a dispute which has arisen between the parties. If it appears from the terms of the agreement by which a matter is submitted to a person's decision that the intention of the parties was that he should hold an inquiry in the nature of a judicial inquiry, & hear the respective cases of the parties, & decide upon evidence laid before him, then the case is one of an arbn.—Re CARUS-WILSON & GREENE (1886), 18 Q. B. D. 7; 56 L. J. Q. B. 530; sub nom. Re WILSON & GREENE, Re CASTERTON ESTATES, 55 L. T. 864; 35 W. R. 43; 3 T. L. R. 22, C. A.

Annotations:—Apld. Re Hammond & Waterton* (1890), 62 L. T. 808; Re Carpenter & Bristol Corpn. (1907), 71 J. P. Jo. 340. Consd. Kennedy v. Barrow-in-Furness Corpn. (1909), Hudson, Bldg. Contracts, 4th ed., Vol. II., p. 411.

4. — Method of determining but not of qualifying rights of parties.]—The marginal note, "Any dispute on this contract to be settled by arbn. here in the usual way," is the fundamental submission to arbn. in this matter, & I interpret it thus: it in no way qualifies the rights of the parties under the contract, but is directed solely to the way in which those rights are to be determined. I treat this as a preliminary point, but the litigation has, I think, arisen from a misconstruction of this submission by the arbitrators, who have taken it as qualifying the rights of the parties under the contract, & not as relating solely to the mode of determination of those rights (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—Re NORTH WESTERN RUBBER Co., LTD., & HÜTTENBACH & Co., [1908] 2 K. B. 907; 78 L. J. K. B. 51; 99 L. T. 680, C. A.

Annotations:—Mentd. Produce Brokers Co. v. Olympia Oil & Cake Co.* (1915), 21 Com. Cas. 320, H. L.; Olympia Oil & Cake Co. v. Produce Brokers Co. (1916), 86 L. J. K. B. 421, C. A.

SECT. 2.—REQUISITES OF VALID SUBMISSION.

Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 27. "Submission" means a written agreement to submit present or future differences to arbitration, whether an arbitrator is named therein or not.

5. At common law — Consideration for agreement.]—In assumpsit pltf. declared whereas lis et controversia had been moved between pltf., lord of the manor, & deft., claiming to hold certain lands, parcel of the manor by copy, & both parties submitted themselves to the arbitrament of G., the parties reciprocally promising each other that they would abide by the award, & G. awarded the copy to be utterly insufficient, yet deft. continued the possession:—Held: a good & sufficient consideration, because it was to avoid controversies & suits.—COOK & SONGATE'S CASE (1588), 4 Leon. 31; 74 E. R. 708.

6. ——— Signature of all other parties.]—Where, in an action by the assignees of a bkpt., petitioning creditor's debt was to be proved by a deed of reference between himself, bkpt. & others their partners, of all accounts between them or any two of them, & by an award (inter alia) of a separate debt of above £100, due from bkpt. to petitioning creditor, who was also the assignee:—Held: it was not sufficient to prove the execution of the deed by petitioning creditor & bkpt., without proving also the execution by the other partners (by whom it appeared on the face of it to have been also executed), for the consideration to each to execute his own submission was the submission of all the others, & without proof of that the arbitrators had no authority to make their award between any of the parties.—ANTRAM v. CHACE (1812), 15 East, 209; 104 E. R. 823.

7. ——— Submission by bond — Evidence of execution.]—In an action upon an award, where the declaration averred a mutual submission of several persons by bond:—Held: (1) it was necessary that the execution by all should be proved, though the action was against one only; (2) it would be otherwise if the action were upon the bond, & the bond were joint & several, for then, though the submission might be joint, pltf. might declare upon the several bond, & the declaration would then be satisfied by proof of the execution by deft. alone.—FERRER & ROLLASON v. OVEN (1827), 7 B. & C. 427; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 222; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 28; 108 E. R. 783.

Annotation:—Distd. Adams v. Bankart (1835), 1 Gale, 48.

8. ——— One party bound by deed — Other by simple contract.]—It is no objection to a submission to arbn., that one of the parties is bound by deed & the other by simple contract only.—TOMLIN

v. FORDWICH CORPN. (1836), 2 Har. & W. 172; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 594.

Annotation:—Mentd. Selby v. Whitbread, [1917] 1 K. B. 736.

9. — Indorsements on counsels' briefs.]—On showing cause against a rule it was agreed by indorsements on counsels' briefs that the matters should be referred to a barrister, who should be at liberty to certify what rule, if any, should be drawn up. The only written memorandum of the agreement of reference was the indorsements on counsels' briefs. The arbitrator certified that a rule should be drawn up in certain terms. The ct. thereupon permitted a rule of reference to be drawn up in the terms of the indorsements, & then a second rule pursuant to the certificate of the barrister.—BRANDON v. SMITH (1853), Bail Ct. Cas. 181; 22 L. J. Q. B. 321; 1 W. R. 130.

See, also, No. 25, post.

10. ——— How proved.]—A submission to arbn. by agreement written & attested is not sufficiently proved by evidence of a rule making such agreement a rule of ct. under the Act of 1698, s. 1.—BERNEY (BERNIE) v. READ (1845), 1 New Pract. Cas. 251; 7 Q. B. 79; 14 L. J. Q. B. 247; 5 L. T. O. S. 194; 9 Jur. 620; 115 E. R. 417.

11. ———.]—Pursuant to directions contained in an award, defts. signed an undertaking not to pirate pltf.'s inventions:—Held: this was a sufficient recognition of the authority of the arbitrators, & supplied the place of a formal submission.—STUART v. NICHOLSON (1836), 3 Bing. N. C. 113; 2 Hodg. 191; 3 Scott, 536; 6 L. J. C. P. 66; 132 E. R. 352.

12. ———.]—An application was made ex p. to make an agreement to refer to arbn. a rule of ct. The signatures of some of the parties to the agreement were not proved by the attesting witness, but an affidavit was made by the solr. to the other parties that he had called on the attesting witness at the address indicated in the attestation, & that he had refused to prove the execution. The agreement itself provided that either of the persons parties to it might apply ex p. to have it made a rule of ct.:—Held: in the circumstances, strict proof of the execution might be dispensed with.—Re DIERDEN'S ARBITRATION (1864), 4 New Rep. 394; 10 L. T. 690; 10 Jur. N. S. 673; 12 W. R. 978.

Reference by order — Order is evidence of consent to abide by award.]—To an action of assumpsit for goods sold, etc., deft. pleaded that pltf. had entered a plaint in a county ct. for the same cause of action, & that pltf. & deft. mutually referred the action in the county ct. & all matters in difference to arbn., & that the umpire afterwards

a. At common law — "Award" not necessary.]—Not using the word "award" in an agreement for submission to arbn. does not alter the legal effect of the agreement or the submission.—AINSWORTH v. CUSACK (1858), 4 Nfld. L. R. 234.—NFLD.

b. — Only signed by one party.]—When an agreement to refer is signed by one party only:—Qu.: whether it is bad for lack of mutuality.—THERIAU v. THERIAU (1858), 4 All. 48.—CAN.

c. — Oral submission.]—A submission of private arbn. may be valid though not put in writing.—BAHAL SINGH v. SHIBO RAM SINGH (1864), W. R. 76.—IND.

10 i. — How proved.]—A witness to a deed of submission to arbn. refused to verify the deed by affidavit; in the circumstances the deed of submission was made an order of ct. without such affidavit.—SHORTALL v. MORAN (1840), 2 I. L. R. 97.—IR.

10 ii. ———.]—In order to sustain a parol submission, there must be clear evidence that all the parties to it understood & intended it to operate as a reference.—DELAPE v. FOSTER (1854), James, 335.—CAN.

10 iii. ———.]—A declaration set out a submission, but contained no averment that defts., a corpn., had contracted under their common seal to perform the award:—Held: it was not necessary specially to aver that the submission was by deed.—M'CLINTOCK v. LONDONDERRY & COLERAINE RY. CO. (1854), 3 I. C. L. R. 609; 6 Ir. Jur. 229.—IR.

10 iv. ———.]—Pltf. had performed services for a mining co. when a resolution was passed, whereby he was requested to accompany H. to England & assist in negotiating the sale of the mines, for which he was to be paid for his expenses & such further sum as H. should consider right. H. declined to allow pltf. anything, & defts. refused to pay him anything:—Held: the acceptance of the resolution constituted an agreement by pltf. to abide by the decision of H. to the exclusion of any right of action upon a quantum meruit, & a verdict for pltf. for a certain amount should be set aside.—CROASDALE v. HALL (1895), 3 B. C. R. 384.—CAN.

e. — Arbitrator must be named.]—By the law of Scotland an agreement to refer future disputes was not binding unless the arbitrator was selected by the agreement. For this purpose the appointment of the person filling a particular office for the time being was not a sufficient selection.—TANCRED, ARROL & CO. v. STEEL CO. OF SCOTLAND, LTD. (1890), 15 App. Cas. 125.—SCOT.

Sect. 2.—Requisites of valid submission.]

made his award of & concerning the matters in difference, etc., & that deft. had been always ready & willing, etc., to perform his part of the award, etc. Replication, that the umpire did not make his award of & concerning the matters in difference:—Held: the allegation that pltf. & deft. mutually referred the action in the county ct. & all matters in difference was supported by proof of an order of reference made by the judge of the county ct., under the powers given him by County Cts. Act, 1846 (c. 95), s. 77, by consent of pltf. & deft.—ROPER v. LEVY (LEVI) (1851), 7 Exch. 55; 2 L. M. & P. 621; 21 L. J. Ex. 28; 18 L. T. O. S. 109; 155 E. R. 853.

—.]—An action having been commenced by pltf. against deft., by a judge's order made by the consent of the parties all matters in dispute were referred to arbn., & it was ordered by the like consent that the parties should fulfil & perform the award of the arbitrator, & an indorsement was made on the order under the hands of pltf. & deft. that the arbitrator should have power to order what the parties should do to prevent a repetition of the injuries complained of. The arbitrator ordered deft. to do certain things, & he having neglected to do them, pltf. brought an action for non-performance of the award:—Held: the action would lie, as the order by consent was evidence of an agreement between the parties to perform the award.—LIEVESLEY v. GILMORE (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 570; Har. & Ruth. 849; 35 L. J. C. P. 351; 15 L. T. 386; 12 Jur. N. S. 874.

15. Under Statute of Frauds—Writing necessary.]—In the course of an arbn., the parties agreed

15 i. Under Statute of Frauds—Writing necessary.]—Deft. assigned lands to pltf. & covenanted to put him in possession on a specified date. The covenant having been broken, pltf. & deft., by parol, referred their differences respecting same to an arbitrator, who, by parol, awarded that pltf. should reconvey the land to deft., & that deft. should pay £100 to pltf. Pltf. tendered a reconveyance of the land to deft., which he refused to accept, & pltf. brought an action on the award for £100:—Held: the action was not maintainable, the contract between the parties being for an interest in land, which had not been reduced into writing, as required by Stat. Frauds.—JOHNSTON v. M'ALLISTER (1835), 1 Jo. Ex. Ir. 499.

15 ii. —.]—The damage sustained by pltf. in an action of debt on an award, in consequence of a road having been made through his land, is not such an interest in land, within Stat. Frauds, as to require that a submission to arbn., to ascertain how much deft. should pay therefor, should be in writing signed by deft.—GILLANDERS v. ROSSMORE (LORD) (1835), 1 Jo. Ex. Ir. 504.—IR.

1. Under Arbitration (Scotland) Act—Arbitrators not named.]—A lease of minerals stipulated that the tenants might give up the lease, on it being ascertained by arbiters that the minerals had become exhausted or workable only at an evident loss:—Held: although the arbiters were not named, a valid obligation was constituted to refer to arbn. the question whether the minerals were workable only at an evident loss.—MERRY & CUNINGHAME v. BROWN (1863), 35 Sc. Jur. 417.—SCOT.

g. —.]—A policy provided that, where the co. did not claim to avoid its liability on the ground of fraud or non-fulfilment of the conditions in the policy, a difference arising between the co. & the insured as to the amount payable should be referred to the arbn. of persons to be chosen by the parties:—Held: reference to unnamed arbiters was valid.—CALEDONIAN INSURANCE CO. v. GILMOUR (1892), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 13.—SCOT.

h. Under Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV. of 1882), s. 523—General requisites.]—The agreement to refer must name the arbitrator or arbitrators, & an agreement which provides for the future appointment or election of arbitrators does not fall within the above sect.—FAZULBOY MEHRALI CHINYOY v. BOMBAY & PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. (1895), I. L. R. 20 Bom. 232.—IND.

k. Under Indian Arbitration Act, s. 4—Contract Act (IX. of 1872), s. 28.]—An arbn. clause in a contract amounts to a "submission" within Indian Arbn. Act, s. 4, & is valid, being covered by exception (1) to s. 28 of Contract Act.—GANGES MANUFACTURING CO. v. INDRA CHAND (1906), I. L. R. 33 Calc. 1169.—IND.

l. —.]—A clause providing for the reference of any dispute to arbn., contained in a contract effected by means of bought & sold notes, identical in their terms & signed by the respective parties or their agents, constitutes a "submission" within Arbn. Act, s. 4.—RAM NARAIN GUNGA BISSEN v. LILAHUR LOWJEE (1906), I. L. R. 33 Calc. 1237; 10 C. W. N. 814.—IND.

m. Under C. P. C., Arts. 1341, 1344—General requisites.]—An agreement that disputes which might arise between the parties to a contract shall be referred to arbitrators constitutes a simple promise to arbitrate & is not an arbn. itself. In order to be valid, this promise must, as the arbn. itself, point out the names & capacities of the parties & the arbitrators, the object in litigation, & the time within which the award shall be given.—MCKAY v. MACKEDIE (1897), Q. R. 11 S. C. 513.—CAN.

by parol that the arbitrator should determine as to a lease to be granted:—Held: such an agreement was within the above stat., & the award, having directed a lease to be made, could not be enforced.—WALTERS v. MORGAN (1792), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 369; 30 E. R. 169, L. C.

—.]—Disputes arose between landlord & tenant as to the validity of a notice to quit, & if the notice was good, as to compensation to be paid to the tenant R. for away-going crops & otherwise under the lease. The disputes were referred to arbn. by parol submission. The lease was granted by a trustee, S., & confirmed by H. & his wife, & the notice was signed only by H. & his wife. An award was made that there was due to R. from H. & his wife & S., some or one of them, £471 8s. 4d., & that sum was ordered to be paid by some or one of them on demand:—Held: the submission related to an interest in land, & required to be in writing under the above stat.—RAINFORTH v. HAMER (1855), 25 L. T. O. S. 247; 3 C. L. R. 298.

17. Under Act of 1698—Writing necessary.]—The ct. has no authority by the above Act to make a parol submission to an award a rule of ct., the Act requiring that where the parties agree that their submission to the award should be made a rule of ct., their agreement should be inserted in their submission or the condition of the bond or promise, etc.—*ANSELL v. Annotations:—Mentd. Dawson v. Sadler (1823), 1 Sim & St.

n. Under Arbitration Ordinance, s. 5—Parties must be ad idem.]—An application, under the above sect., to stay proceedings in an action on the ground that there was an agreement to submit the matters in dispute to arbn. was refused, since the parties were not ad idem as to the terms of the agreement.—KERR v. BROWN (1905), 1 W. L. R. 379.—CAN.

o. —.] Writing necessary.]—A submission, not being in writing:—Held: not governed by the above Ordinance.—KIRBACH v. BENDER (1910), 14 W. L. R. 720.—CAN.

p. Under Arbitration Act, s. 27—Proviso in agreement.]—In an agreement for carrying on a joint business, a board of management was provided, with a proviso that, in case the board should not be able to agree, the matter in dispute was to be referred to the arbn. of S., whose decision was to be final:—Held: this clause contained a submission to arbn. within the word "submission" as defined in the above sect.—Re FENWICK & PORT JACKSON CO-OPERATIVE SS. CO. (1897), 18 N. S. W. L. R. 405.—AUS.

q. Under Arbitration Act, 1908—Clause in lease.]—A lease contained provisions for the ground-rent to be fixed at the commencement of each period of ten years by the award of two arbitrators to be chosen, one by the landlords, & the other by the tenant, or of an umpire to be chosen & appointed by them in writing before they entered upon the arbn., & that the above Act should apply to the arbn. so far as the same was applicable:—Held: by virtue of the wide definition of "submission" in Arbn. Act Amendment Act, 1906, which definition was incorporated in Arbn. Act, 1908, the reference to arbn. in the lease was a submission within the Act of 1908.—BRYANT v. THOMSON (1914), 33 N. Z. L. 19. Cause depending at time of submission.]—Where there was a cause depending at the time of the submission:—Held: the case was not within the above Act.

The Act is only declaratory of what the law was before, in cases where there was a cause depending in the ct. (LORD MANSFIELD).—LUCAS v. MARKHAM v. WILSON (1758), 2 Burr. 701; 97 E. R. 522.

20. Under Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 — Writing necessary.]—Where parties to a deed covenant to refer disputes which may arise to arbitrators to be chosen by them, & on disputes arising appoint arbitrators, the submission is by parol, & therefore, cannot be made a rule of ct. under s. 17 of the above Act.—*Ex p. 21. —.]—A lease contained a proviso that, in case any disputes & differences should arise between the parties, they should be referred to two arbitrators, one to be chosen by each party, & that, if either of them should neglect to name an arbitrator on his part within seven days after notice of the appointment of an arbitrator by the other, the arbitrator so appointed should act for both; & it was further agreed that the submission of the parties to the award of the arbitrators or arbitrator might at the instance of either party be made a rule of ct. Disputes having arisen, the lessor appointed an arbitrator in writing, & gave notice in writing to the lessee that he had done so: the latter did not appoint an arbitrator on his part; whereupon, after due notice, the arbitrator appointed by the lessor proceeded ex p. & made an award:—Held: there was a submission in writing which could be made a rule of ct. under the Act of 1698, & C. 30. Sale of land—Reference by order of court.]—Having preferred a petition to the Lords Comrs. for the custody of the Great Seal, showing (inter alia) that he had been reported the best purchaser of a lot, in the particular mentioned to contain 106 acres, at the price of £4,700, but that such lot did contain no more than 84 acres, & praying a proportionable allowance out of his purchase money, the petition, on coming on to be heard, was ordered to stand over, & it was ordered that defts.' solr. should, according to his undertaking in ct., show to B., at such times as he should appoint, the land, according to the particular under which petitioner purchased, & B. was to certify his opinion. Afterwards, defts. preferred their petition to the Lord Chancellor setting forth (inter alia) that defts.' solr. had shown the land to B., & that he was ready to make his report concerning same, & prayed that C.'s petition might be set down to be heard upon B.'s report, & that same might be dismissed & defts. paid their costs. Both petitions having come on, & B. attended in his place at the bar & delivered in ct. a report in writing, which was offered to be read, but objected to:—Held: this report should be filed as an award, B. being an arbitrator.—*VERNON v. Upon the surveyor's report coming in, the ct. made an order directing timber to be cut as recommended by the report. On a motion by remaindermen to discharge or vary the order:—Held: (1) reports of that nature, although entitled to great weight, as affording independent testimony, could not be considered as awards or in any other light than as furnishing materials for the information & guidance of the ct.; (2) the remaindermen were not bound by the report.—*FORD v. s. Whether submission or not—Question of fact.]—S. & P. were engaged in business together, & a dispute having arisen as to the state of accounts between them, a third person was chosen to enable them to effect a settlement. S. claimed the person so chosen was only to go over the accounts & make a statement, while P. contended that the whole matter was left to him as an arbitrator:—Held: whether or not there was a submission to arbn. was a question of fact, as to which the Supreme Ct. of Canada would not, on appeal, interfere with the finding of the trial judge that all matters were submitted, affirmed as it was by a Divisional Ct. & the Ct. of Appeal.—SNETSINGER v. PETERSON (1894), 1 Cout. Dig. 146.—CAN.

LEAMY* (1897), 27 S. C. R. 545.—CAN.

SUB-SECT. 2.—REFERENCE TO JUDGE.

38. Judge's order—Not award.]—In trover by pltfs., as churchwardens, to recover possession of a book belonging to the parish, a verdict was taken for pltfs., subject to a special case. Upon the argument of the special case, the ct. directed a nonsuit. The case was afterwards turned into a special verdict, & upon the argument, it was agreed "that the judgment of the ct. below should stand, & the select vestry be at an end, the costs of both sides to be paid out of the parish funds." This agreement was embodied in a judge's order, which was afterwards made a rule of ct. Difficulties arising in carrying out this order, the ct. of error awarded a venire de novo; & upon the cause again coming on for trial, an order of Nisi Prius was drawn up, by consent, referring it to Williams, J. to determine the cause & all matters relating to it, with power to direct in what manner the former order (& rule thereon) was to be carried into effect. Williams, J. made an order directing defts. to pay to pltfs. a certain sum (the amount at which pltfs.' costs had been taxed), "unless in the meantime the sum be paid to pltfs. out of the funds of the parish." This last mentioned order having been made a rule of ct., & the money not having been paid, pltfs. issued an execution thereon under Judgments Act, 1838 (c. 110), s. 18:—Held: the order of Williams, J. was not an award, but a judge's order, & made with competent authority, but, being conditional, it was not one upon which an execution could at once issue, in pursuance of the above Act.—GIBBS v. FLIGHT (1853), 13 C. B. 803; 22 L. J. C. P. 256; 17 Jur. 1034; 138 E. R. 1417.

39. — Valid award.]—Certain goods having been seized by the sheriff under an execution against S., a third party claimed to be entitled to them, whereupon the sheriff obtained a rule under Interpleader Act, 1831 (c. 58), & brought pltf. & claimant before a judge at chambers, who decided that the goods belonged to claimant, & ordered the sheriff to deliver up possession of them to him, & that pltf. should pay the costs of claimant & the sheriff. The order was not stated on the face of it to have been made by consent, but was in fact so made. Pltf. accordingly paid the costs, pursuant to the order, & the sheriff gave up possession of the goods; but pltf., having discovered that there was other property in debtor's possession which did not belong to claimant, ruled the sheriff to return the writ, & on his returning nulla bona, brought an action against him for a false return:—Held: although the order was bad as an order under the above Act, still it was binding & final between the parties as an award between them, the parties having, by their conduct, agreed to submit the matter to the decision of the judge.—HARRISON v. WRIGHT (1845), 13 M. & W. 816; 2 Dow. & L. 695; 14 L. J. Ex. 196; 153 E. R. 342, Ex. Ch.

40. Special case—Raising questions of fact — No appeal from decision.]—Where a special case is calculated & intended to raise for decision questions of fact only, the proceedings are extra cursum curiæ, the judgment of the ct. is in the nature of an arbitrator's award, & an appeal cannot be entertained if its competency is objected to by the party holding the judgment. If in these circumstances the Ct. of Appeal reverses the judgment below, the House of Lords has no jurisdiction except to reverse as incompetent the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal.—BURGESS v. MORTON, [1896] A. C. 136; 65 L. J. Q. B. 321; 73 L. T. 713; 12 T. L. R. 104, H. L.

Act, 1875 (c. 77), Ord. 31, r. 11, by the consent of both parties, the documents in question were submitted to the judge:—Held: his decision could not be questioned in the Ct. of Appeal.—BUSTROS v. WHITE (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 423; 45 L. J. Q. B. 642; 34 L. T. 835; 24 W. R. 721; 3 Char. Pr. Cas. 229.

42. Reference to court — Extra cursum curiæ—No appeal.]—Where in the exercise of its proper jurisdiction the ct. has only one course of proceeding preparatory to its decision, e.g., the reference of an issue of fact to a jury, & the parties agree to a deviation, the decision of the issue by the ct., thus giving to the ct. a power which otherwise it would not possess, the ct. is thereby placed in the position of arbitrator, & no appeal will lie.—*DUDGEON v. 43. —.]—Where the ct. below has acted as arbitrator, there is no appeal.

In an action of declarator an issue was submitted to a jury whether a corpn. had, under its charter, levied certain dues. After some witnesses were examined, & had proved payments of dues, it was agreed to withdraw the case from the jury & submit it to the Ct. of Session, each party being entitled to raise any question of law which the notes & record suggested. The ct. decided that the levy of dues was not in virtue of the charter. From this judgment pursuers appealed:—Held: there was an incompetency of appeal.—RENFREW (PROVOST) v. HOBY (1856), 4 W. Where in an action of declarator of right of way defender had consented to judgment against him upon issues describing the footpath claimed as leading "by or near" a red line on a plan in process, & the ct. had subsequently directed an engineer to lay off the footpath so consented to "in such a manner & such a line as to make the footpath least burdensome to defender":—Held: (1) the ct., by so doing, had departed from the cursus curiæ; (2) all the interlocutors following on that departure were extra-judicial & not appealable.—*WHITE v. 42 ii. — — —.]—In the course of a suit for recovery of possession of some land, the parties agreed that they should

46 i. Counsel—Agreement to be bound by opinion—No appeal.]—In a suit pltf. & defts. applied that a pleader might be appointed to ascertain who held the land on either side of the khal in dispute, & agreed that, if pltf. were found in possession of such land, they should get a decree, while if first deft. was found in possession the suit should be dismissed. Pltf.'s suit was decreed in accordance with the comr.'s report. From this decision defts. appealed to the subordinate judge, who remanded the case to the first ct.:—Held: the the steward of races are to be according to the strict rules of law, that there is to be a point regularly raised before him, & parties heard upon it—I suppose by counsel—& a formal decision after the hearing. It would next be said that the evidence must be given upon oath. The truth is, the parties mean that the matter shall be to the decision of the steward, & that, if he in fact, that shall be final (ALDERSON, B.).—*BOW v. 49. — — — — —.]—One of the conditions of a race was that "all disputes should be settled by the stewards, whose decision should be final." There were four stewards, & a dispute having arisen as to whether pltf.'s horse or deft.'s mare was the winner, three of the stewards voted in favour of pltf.'s horse. One of the three had betted against deft.'s mare:—Held: (1) the steward was not disqualified from acting by reason of his pecuniary interest in the event of the race; (2) even assuming that he was, that did not annul the decision of the other stewards.

This is not like the case of a judge or an arbitrator: it is a reference according to certain fixed rules, one of which was that the stewards should decide all disputes, the object being to prevent the necessity of resorting to litigation or arbn. (POLLOCK, C.B.).—ELLIS v. HOPPER (1858), 3 H. & N. 766; 28 L. J. Ex. 1; 32 L. T. O. S. 77; 22 J. P. 724; 4 Jur. N. S. 1025; 7 W. R. 15; 157 E. R. 677.

SUB-SECT. 6.—DISTINCTION BETWEEN ARBITRATION AND VALUATION.

51. Fixing price of real estate—On sale.]—The distinction between an arbn. & a valuation is that an arbn. is a reference of some matter or matters in difference between the parties; but an appraisal or valuation prevents differences & does not settle any which have arisen.

Parties entered into a contract to purchase a brewery & plant at a price to be fixed by arbitrators, who were to choose an umpire before entering upon the valuation. The arbitrators could not agree on an umpire:—Held: the ct. had no authority, under C. L. P. Act, 1854, ss. 1, 2, to appoint an umpire for such a purpose.

Undoubtedly, as a general rule, the seller wants to get the highest price for his property & the purchaser wishes to give the lowest, & in that sense it may be said that an expected difference between the parties is to be implied in every case, but unless a difference has actually arisen it does not appear to me to be an "arbn." Undoubtedly, if two persons enter into an arrangement for the sale of any particular property, & try to settle the terms, but cannot agree, & after dispute & discussion respecting the price, they say, "We will refer this question of price to A. B., he shall settle it," & thereupon they agree that the matter shall be referred to his arbn., that would appear to be "arbn.," in the proper sense of the term, & within the Act; but if they agree to a price to be fixed by another, that does not appear to me to be an arbn. (ROMILLY, M.R.).—COLLINS v. COLLINS (1858), 26 Beav. 306; 28 L. J. Ch. 184; 32 L. T. O. S. 233; 5 Jur. N. S. 30; 7 W. R. 115; 53 E. R. 916.

51 i. Fixing price of real estate—On resumption by Crown.]—By deed of grant, certain lands were vested by the Crown in trustees. The deed provided that the Crown might resume any part of the land for any public purpose, & that, on resumption, the value of the land so required should be paid by the Govt. to the party entitled thereto at a valuation fixed by arbitrators. The Crown gave notice of intention to resume a portion of the land. An arbitrator was appointed by the trustees & one was appointed by the Crown. These arbitrators appointed an umpire. After hearing evidence the arbitrators were unable to agree & the umpire, by a document, which he called an award, awarded £3,835 as the valuation of the land:—Held: the proceedings were proceedings to determine a valuation, & not an arbn.—Re R. & ACCLIMATISATION SOCIETY OF QUEENSLAND (1912), S. R. Q. 10.—AUS.

1. Fixing value of buildings at expiry of building lease.]—A building lease contained a covenant that at the expiration of the lease the buildings on the premises should be valued by disinterested persons:—Held: the valuation provided for was not an arbn., but a mere appraisal.—GILBERT v. SMITH (1878), 2 P. & B. 211.—CAN.

g. Assessment of sums due under building contract.]—Pltf. entered into a contract with a society to erect a building within a specified time, for a certain sum, & the society, if dissatisfied with the progress of the work, was authorised to complete the building, & charge the expense to pltf. The society took possession, & proceeded with the unfinished work. It was agreed that the unfinished work should be estimated by two mechanics, & that from the sum determined by them as necessary for that purpose the society should deduct a certain sum, & charge the balance to pltf.:—Held: the estimate of the unfinished work was not an award in the legal sense of the word, but a mere valuation or appraisal.—HODGE v. REID (1871), N. B. Dig. 308.—CAN.

h. —.]—By an agreement between L. & a building committee L. was to forego all right to compensation except under the agreement. E. was to inspect & value the work done, & if not according to plans L. was to rectify same. E. was to value the building in its then condition, & his award was to be final; he was also to value material on the ground, which was to be paid for at original cost:—Held: the agreement was that a price to be fixed by E. was to be paid for L.'s work, & E. was not payment of the price awarded, such agreement not being within the Act of 1698., & A.'s only remedy is by action on the articles.—Re LEE & HEMINGWAY (1834), 15 Q. B. 306, n.; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 860; 117 E. R. 474; sub nom. LEE v. HEMINGWAY, 3 L. J. K. B. 124.

54. Fixing value of shares — In absence of agreement.]—By an agreement relating to shares in a co. it was provided that the value of the shares should, in the absence of agreement, be determined by two valuers, one to be appointed by each party, & in case they differed by an umpire, to be appointed by the valuers, in pursuance of & in accordance with the Act of 1889:—Held: (1) a valuer was not made an arbitrator by calling him so, or vice versa; (2) the procedure intended was an arbn.—TAYLOR v. YIELDING (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 253.

55. Fixing price of business assets.]—A. & B., being in partnership as distillers, agreed that B. should buy out A., but if, during A.'s life, B. should be desirous of retiring, A. was to have an option of repurchase, & the business assets were to be valued "in the usual way" by two valuers, one to be named by A., & the other by B., or by the umpire of the two valuers. B. gave notice of his intention to retire, whereupon A. gave notice of his intention to repurchase. Two valuers were appointed, but B. then refused to allow his valuer

k. Assessing fire loss.]—By a policy a co. reserved the power of having the loss submitted to arbitrators:—Held: the arbn. intended by the condition was not merely a valuation.—MCINNES v. WESTERN INSURANCE CO. (1870), 5 P. R. 242; 30 U. C. R. 580.—CAN.

m. —.]—A policy provided that differences as to the amount of any loss should be referred to the arbn. of some indifferent person to be agreed upon by both parties, or, failing such agreement, of two such persons, one to be chosen by the party claiming, & the other by the co. In case of disagreement between the arbitrators the difference was to be decided by an umpire to be chosen by the arbitrators before entering on the reference. The clause provided that the award should be conclusive of the amount of the loss:—Held: the office of the persons to be appointed was not that of valuers, but that of arbitrators.—Re COLEMAN & ROYAL INSURANCE CO. (1905), 24 N. Z. L. R. 817.—N.Z.

Offer & counter-offer.]—A. & B., having dissolved partnership, signed an agreement by which, after stating that B. had offered A. £18,000 for the purchase of his interest in the partnership business & assets, & that A. had declined the offer but was willing to accept £20,000, they agreed to leave it to a referee to say what sum should be paid by B. to A.:—Held: one party having named the price he was willing to give & the other party having named the price he was willing to receive, there was in the strict & proper sense of the term an arbn.—THOMSON v. ANDERSON (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 523; 39 L. J. Ch. 468; 22 L. T. 570; 34 J. P. 500; 18 W. R. 445.

57. — Whether appointee liable for negligence.]—Pltf. purchased the goodwill, stock, & effects of a business at a valuation, the amount of which was to be fixed by valuers, one to be appointed on each side for that purpose, & in case of difference by an umpire to be chosen by the valuers. Pltf. employed deft. as his valuer, & deft. & the valuer appointed by the vendor fixed between them the amount of valuation. In an action for negligence in making such valuation, by which the valuation of the goodwill was fixed too high:—Held: (1) deft. had not acted in the matter as an arbitrator, but as a valuer only; (2) he was liable to his employer for negligence.—*TURNER v. 58. — Share of outgoing partner & validity of notice of dissolution.]—The validity of a notice to dissolve a partnership was disputed, & it was agreed that that question, as well as the price to be paid by the continuing partners for the share of the outgoing partner, should be settled by two valuers named in the agreement or their umpire. One of the valuers died before the valuation was made, & the new valuer (appointed under protest) neglected to join with the other valuer in appointing an umpire. In these circumstances, & by virtue of C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 12, the ct. appointed an umpire to act in the matter, in case his services should be required.—Re EVANS, DAVIES & CAD-DICK (1870), 22 L. T. 507; 18 W. R. 723.

By a clause in a farming lease, the tenant was to quit on the expiration of six months' notice from the lessor, at any time during the term, if the premises or any part should be sold, each party to appoint a valuer, such valuers to estimate the compensation to be given to the tenant for delivering up possession:—Held: the decision of the valuers was in the nature of an award on an arbn. & not a mere valuation.—Re HOPPER (1867), L. 62. —.]—An agreement between landlord & tenant for the letting of a farm provided that the tenant should be paid at the expiration of the tenancy the usual & customary valuation, as between outgoing & incoming tenant, in the same manner as he paid on entering the premises; & it was thereby mutually agreed by & between the parties thereto that, when any valuation of the covenants should be made between the tenant & the landlord, or his incoming tenant, the persons making such valuation should take into consideration the state, condition, & usage of the farm, & if not left in a proper & creditable state, should determine what sum of money should be paid to the landlord as compensation therefor, & should deduct such sum from the amount of the valuation. On the expiration of the tenancy, there being no incoming tenant, the landlord & tenant respectively appointed a valuer. The valuers could not agree upon the amount of the valuation, & they appointed an umpire, who held a sitting & heard witnesses, & then made & published an award in writing. The tenant, with the view of obtaining an order remitting the matters in dispute to the umpire for reconsideration, applied for an order to make the submission to arbn. contained in the agreement, together with the appointment of arbitrators & umpire, a rule of ct. under C. L. P.

Act, 1854, s. 17 :—Held : the agreement did not contain any submission to arbn., but it provided only for the appointment of valuers, & it could not be made a rule of ct.—Re DAWDY (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 426, C. A.

63. — Umpire to be appointed.]—The mere fact that an umpire is to be appointed in case the arbitrators are unable to agree does not constitute the proceedings an arbn.

An agreement made between the purchaser of a close of land & the tenant, who was a nurseryman & market gardener, provided that the tenant should give up possession before the expiration of his lease, & that the amount of compensation to be paid to him (a) in respect of such giving up possession, (b) in respect of various plants & shrubs taken by the purchaser, should be determined by two named arbitrators, one of whom was a seedsman & the other a market gardener, & in case of dispute by an umpire to be appointed by the arbitrators. The arbitrators differed, & the amount of compensation was assessed by an umpire appointed by them :—Held : this was a valuation, & not an award, & the tenant was not entitled to issue execution under s. 12 of the Act of 1889.—Re HAMMOND & WATERTON (1890), 62 L. 64. Assessing damages for misstatement in particulars of sale—“Existing or future difference.”]—At a sale by auction of premises belonging to defts., stated in the particulars of sale as being then let at a rental of £30 per annum, one of the conditions was that, if any mistake was made in the description of any of the properties offered for sale, or if any error whatever appeared in the particulars of sale, such mistake or error should not annul the sale, but a compensation in such case should be given, to be settled by two referees, one to be appointed by either party to the sale, or an umpire. Pltfs. purchased of defts. the premises subject to this condition. After the conveyance had been executed an error in the rental stated in the particulars was discovered :—Held : the reference indicated in the condition being one of the quantum of compensation only, was not a reference to arbn. of an existing or future difference within C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, & pltfs. had no power under s. 13 of that Act to appoint their referee as sole arbitrator.—BOS v. HELSHAM (1866), L. R. 2 Exch. 72 ; 4 H. & C. 642 ; 36 L. J. Ex. 20 ; 15 L. 65. Assessing rent to be paid for real estate.]—An order was made in an action referring the question in dispute, which was the rent to be paid under a lease of a mill, to two persons, who had acted as agents of the parties, as arbitrators, & in case of their disagreement to a person therein named as umpire. The arbitrators, having disagreed, submitted the matter to the umpire. The latter, without giving any notice to the parties or their solrs., & without any witnesses being examined before him, but having merely heard the statement of the two arbitrators & inspected the premises, made his award in writing, in which he recited that he had “heard, examined, & considered the allegations, witnesses, & evidence of all the parties :—Held : it was evidently the intention of the parties that they should settle the value & not act as formal arbitrators.

The subject-matter of the reference is essentially one of valuation & opinion. The arbitrators were the paid agents of the parties interested, & it would be absurd to suppose that they were intended to sit with all the pomp of judges (JAMES, L.J.).—BOTTOMLEY v. AMBLER (1877), 38 L. T. 545 ; 26 W. R. 566, C. A.

66. Assessing sum payable for release from agreement.]—W., having agreed to take a lease of certain premises from C., subsequently wrote to the latter, stating that he was not prepared to carry out the agreement, & asked in effect to be released from it, offering to pay £50 by way of compensation. The result of further correspondence between the parties was that it was agreed that the amount to be paid to C. by W. by way of compensation for releasing him from the agreement for a lease should be fixed by M. M. having assessed the amount to be paid by W. at a certain sum, & that sum not having been paid, C., on the footing that there had been an arbn. & award by M. within the Act of 1889, applied for leave to enforce the award under s. 12 in the same manner as a judgment. The terms of the letters were relied upon by C. as constituting a submission to arbn. :—Held : there had been no submission of a dispute to arbn., but merely an agreement for a valuation, & the case did not come within s. 12 of the Act.—Re COLMAN & WATSON, [1908] 1 K. 67. Engineer's certificate — Assessment of damages for delay in completion.]—P. contracted with pltf. co. by deed that on the execution thereof he would commence building a gas-holder tank & other works, the tank to be finished within three months from the date of the indenture, & the other works to be in a fit state for the tank on or before June 30, 1853, under a penalty, & that in default he would pay such liquidated damages as E., the co.'s engineer, should adjudge, & defts., as sureties for P., covenanted that he would observe & keep all the covenants in the deed contained on his part. In an action for damages awarded by E. upon non-completion of the works within the time specified, defts. pleaded (inter alia) that, before adjudication by E., defts. & P. had revoked any submission to arbn. contained in the deed :—Held : the plea was bad, because the adjudication by E. was an assessment of damages merely, & not a judicial award respecting any matter in dispute between the parties.

No judicial powers were entrusted to him. It was not referred to him to say whether the covenants were or were not broken, but solely to ascertain the reasonable compensation, assuming a default to have occurred (per CUR.).—*NORTHAMPTON GAS LIGHT CO. v. 65 i. Assessing rent to be paid for real estate.]—A lease provided that at expiration the lessee should have a further term, & that the amount of the rent should be settled by the award of three parties, or of the majority of them, & that the award should be made before the expiration of the existing term. It was provided that the expense of the arbn. should be borne equally. No provision was made for calling witnesses, & neither party offered to procure witnesses or contended witnesses should be called :—Held : from the language of the agreement & the nature of the subject-matter the parties intended a completion, upon certificates of the architect, & that a certificate of the architect, showing a final balance due or payable to the contractor, should be conclusive evidence of the works having been duly completed, & that the contractor was entitled to receive payment of the final balance:—Held (ROMER, L.J., diss.): the architect, in ascertaining the amount due to the contractor & certifying for same under the contract, occupied the position of an arbitrator, & was not liable to an action by the building owner for negligence in the exercise of those functions.—*CHAMBERS v. S., & either of the parties should be “at liberty to apply to the ct.” to make the “award a rule of ct.,” such submission may be made a rule of the Ct. of Common Pleas under the Act of 1698, since many causes of action & suits in equity may arise out of the disputes stated in the recital.—*SOILLEUX v. 73. Disputes arising out of gaming transactions — Reference to Jockey Club.]—Pltf., in 1833, gave a post obit security on his expectancy in a certain fund, payable on the death of his father, to W., in consideration of certain gaming debts. He subsequently won a larger sum of W. by bets on horse-racing, & both parties having submitted to the arbn. of the Jockey Club, in 1837, the stewards decided that one debt should be set off against the other, & the security given up. W. refused to give up the security, & in 1842, assigned it to C. for valuable consideration, who gave notice to the trustees of the fund. Pltf. having filed his bill to have the security delivered up to be cancelled:—Held: the submission to the arbn. of the Jockey Club amounted to an agreement, which could not be impeached under the Acts against gaming, if any part of the account between the parties was legal.—*HAWKER v. 75. —.]—Action on a contract containing a prospective agreement that, if any difference arose, it should be referred; averment, that a difference arose; breach, a refusal to refer it:—Held: the action lay.

The agreement to refer prospective differences is not illegal in itself. In Tattersall v. Groote (1800), 2 Bos. & P. 131, it would appear that Lord Eldon rather inclined to think it was illegal; but I think it an important principle of law that parties are at liberty to make what contracts they please, so that they stipulate to do nothing but what they are at liberty to do. It is clear that the parties may lawfully & bindingly refer; & they may lawfully & bindingly agree to refer a dispute which has already arisen. It seems to me that they may lawfully & bindingly agree to refer such disputes when they shall arise (ERLE, J.).—LIVINGSTONE (LIVINGSTON) v. RALLI (1855), 5 E. & B. 132; 24 L. J. Q. B. 269; 25 L. 88. ——— Perjury & conspiracy.]—Two indictments, one for perjury, another for conspiracy, were removed into Queen's Bench by certiorari. The indictment for perjury came on for trial at Nisi Prius, when, under the advice of counsel, it was agreed that no evidence should be tendered, a verdict of not guilty taken on both indictments, & that all matters in difference between the prosecutor & deft. should be referred to a barrister, the costs of the indictments, reference & award to be in his discretion. An order of reference, as at Nisi Prius, in the usual form, was afterwards drawn up, & was made a rule of ct. After several meetings, deft. revoked his submission, & took steps in a Ch. suit, which was one of the matters in difference so referred. On motion to attach him for contempt, or to set aside the verdict on the indictments:—Held: (1) it would have been illegal to refer an indictment for perjury, or (semble) for conspiracy, but the indictments were not referred, & the verdicts of acquittal, given on the ground that no evidence was produced, must at all events stand; (2) there was nothing illegal in referring all matters in difference & at the same time consenting to a verdict of acquittal, unless there was a corrupt agreement to stifle a prosecution, which in the present case did not appear to be the fact.—*R. v. 89. ——— Non-repair of highway.] Indictment for non-repair of a public highway, alleging liability ratione tenuræ. The record (removed into Queen's Bench) was made up for trial, but, before a jury was impanelled, the prosecutor & deft. agreed upon leaving the question of liability to reference; & they did accordingly, by agreement of reference, submit all matters in difference relative to the subject matter of the indictment to a barrister, who was to have the same powers in all respects as the judge of assize at Nisi Prius would have had upon the trial; & a verdict was to be entered according to the result of such award, on the application of either party. It was agreed that the submission should & might be made a rule of ct., if the ct. should so please:—Held: the agreement was illegal, as referring an indictment to arbn., & an award having been made, the ct. refused, on motion, to order payment of costs in pursuance of the award, though the submission had been made a rule of ct. according to the agreement.—*R. v. On a dispute between A., a journeyman, & B., a master printer, on the construction of a certain rule, the arbitrator decided in favour of the master. Pltf., a journeyman printer, after this decision, came into the employ of deft., a master printer, & raised the same question:—Held: he was not bound by the award between A. & B.—*HILL v. 96. —.]—A. by articles previous to his marriage agreed to vest £1,000 in trustees, the interest thereof to be received by A. & his wife during their lives, & afterwards to be divided between their issue, & gave the trustees a warrant of attorney to confess judgment for that sum, which was entered up accordingly. A. entered into partnership with B. afterwards, & being indebted to the partnership estate in more than his interest in that estate, they submitted the difference between them to arbn., & part of the stock in trade was awarded to be deposited in the hands of a third party, any part to be delivered to either of the parties on making it appear any bond or other debt due from the partnership had been paid by either, the quantity to be delivered in proportion to the money paid. The trustees in the marriage articles having taken a moiety of the stock in trade as the property of A., in execution upon the judgment, upon a bill by the partnership creditors to set aside the execution & to have the stock appropriated for the payment of their debts:—Held: pltf. being neither parties to the submission nor privy to the transaction, & therefore, under no obligation to abide by the award, were not entitled to the benefit of the award.—*THOMSON v. The witness not proving any agreement on the part of pltf. to be bound by the award :—Held : there was no mutuality, & deft.'s agreement was a mere nudum pactum & not binding upon him.—KINGSTON v. 99. Partner after retirement—Without knowledge of dispute.]—The ct. will not grant an attachment, or make absolute a rule for payment of money found due by an award against a person who was made a party to the action, which was referred without his consent, & who did not authorise the action which was referred, nor the reference to arbn., & had no notice of it until after the award : & although he might be liable in law on an implied authority, by reason of the action & reference relating to partnership transactions in a firm of which he was a member, yet, if it appears that he then had retired from the firm, appct. will be left to enforce the award in an action, & the ct. will not enforce it by the exercise of a summary jurisdiction.—ROBERTSON v. HATTON (1857), 26 L. J. Ex. 293.

100. — Contract still subsisting.]—A contract was entered into by a mercantile firm with a joint-stock co. to manage the general shipping affairs of that co. Shortly afterwards one of the firm retired from the partnership, & it was agreed that he should be indemnified by the continuing partners, who carried out the objects of the contract with the joint-stock co. Disputes, however, arose between the co. & the continuing partners, which were subsequently referred to arbn., as provided for by the original contract. The result was that the mercantile firm were largely indebted to the co. The partner who retired was no party to the reference to arbn. The original contract had not been put an end to at the time of those transactions :—Held : (1) the partner who retired had not been absolved from his liabilities under the original contract with the co. ; (2) the continuing partners were his agents, & what they had

102 ii. — What constitutes acquiescence.]—A suit was referred to arbn. One deft. did not join in the reference, & did not take part in the proceedings before the arbitrators, although he, in obedience to a summons, sent his servant to produce a document before the arbitrators :—Held : his conduct was not such that it could be said that he was bound by the award by reason of acquiescence.—BENI MADHUB MITTER v. PREONATH MANDAL (1900), I. L. R. 28 Cal. 303 ; 5 C. W. N. 268.—IND.

102 iii. — — — —.]—A sum of money, paid by a customer as the result of a reference to arbn., in which the legal personal representatives of a deceased partner were no parties, having been brought into partnership accounts, the latter contended that not being parties to the reference they were not bound by it :—Held : (1) the question whether the legal personal representatives of the deceased partner were bound by the agreement to refer was not a simple question of law to be decided without reference to the facts of the case ; (2) an agreement to refer not originally binding might become binding later on by the acquiescence of the party or his acceptance of benefits thereunder.—DWARKA NATH SARKAR v. HAJI MAHOMED AKBAR (1914), 18 C. W. N. 1025.—IND.

b. — "Parties"—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 525, 526.]—Three parties agreed that in case of any dispute the matter should be referred to persons chosen by each party, & that in case any party should refuse to nominate an arbitrator, then the arbitrator named by the other party should nominate another arbitrator, & the two should nominate a third person as umpire. Certain differences having arisen among the three, two of them called upon the exors. of the third to nominate an arbitrator, but they refused to do so. The first-mentioned parties then nominated an arbitrator, who in his turn nominated another, & these having appointed an umpire, made an award which was objected to by the exors. of one of the parties :—Held : (1) the word "parties," as used in s. 525, should not be confined to persons who are actually before the arbitrators ; (2) if persons by an agreement have undertaken between themselves that, in the event of a certain state of things happening, a particular procedure shall be followed, which under one state of circumstances may be adopted in invitum, they should, for the purposes of s. 525, be regarded as parties to that arbn. ; (3) there was sufficient reason to show that defts. were prima facie bound by the arbn., so as to bring them within the terms of s. 525 as parties thereto, who should be called on to show cause why the award should not be fled.—JONES v. 102. — Unless acquiescing.]—In an action brought against T. by defts. a verdict was taken against him for £10,000, subject to an award. T. then became bkpt., & afterwards the award was made, by which the amount of the damages was reduced :—Held : if the assignees of bkpt. attended the meetings under the reference to which bkpt. was a party, & made no objection to the proceedings, they must be considered as adopting them, & be bound by the award.—DOD v. 104. —.]—An agreement provided that a question of boundary should be referred to an indifferent surveyor, & by a second agreement it was agreed the question should be settled by C., who went to the spot with the maps, with which he had been furnished by the parties by whom he was appointed, heard their statements, & staked out a boundary line. The question was, whether the surveyor had set out the boundary by the assent of defts., given either before or after the boundary was ascertained. A person was employed by the lessors of pltf. & the lessors of defts. to set out the boundary between the lands claimed by them respectively. Defts. were directly interested in the subject-matter of the inquiry. They knew that the boundary was about to be set out, & communicated with C. as the person by whom it was to be set out. They accompanied him when the line was staked out, & before the decision was finally made they applied to pltf.' lessors for a lease of the spot in question, in case C.'s decision should be in favour of the latter :—Held : sufficient evidence that defts. assented to the setting out of the boundary line by C.—TAYLOR v. PARRY (1840), 1 Man. & G. 604 ; 1 Scott, N. R. 576 ; 9 L. J. C. P. 298 ; 4 Jur. 967 ; 133 E. R. 474.

105. ———.]—By a judge's order made in a cause of A. v. B., it was ordered by consent of the parties & of C. (a stranger) that a verdict should be entered for pltf., damages £50, subject to the award of an arbitrator, who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties in the action, & also between B. & C. The arbitrator awarded that all proceedings in the action should cease, etc., & that pltf. had a good cause of action against deft. in the cause, & was entitled to a verdict therein, & assessed the damages at 40s., "to be paid by deft. to A. & C., who had consented to become a party to the cause." An action being brought by A. & C. against B. on the award :—Held : the award was good.—HAWKINS v. BENTON (1846), 8 Q. B. 479 ; 15 L. J. Q. B. 139 ; 7 L. T. O. S. 28 ; 10 Jur. 95 ; 115 E. 107. ———.]—The managing partner of a colliery worked beyond the boundaries of the colliery without proper inquiry as to such boundaries, &, after notice from the adjoining owner that he was committing a trespass, recklessly continued such workings without consulting his co-partners under the bona fide belief that the adjoining owner had no title to the disputed area. An action against him for trespass & damages by the adjoining owner was referred to arbn. The co-partners had no knowledge of the action until after the reference had been agreed to. They attended the reference, however, & did not object to it. The arbitrator found that a trespass had been committed & assessed the damages at £6,000. The co-partners refusing to contribute, the managing partner brought an action against them claiming a declaration that the £6,000 damages was a partnership debt, & that defts. were bound to contribute rateably to it :—Held : the co-partners had acquiesced in the arbn., & were bound by the award, which was equivalent to a verdict by a jury & the judgment of the ct. thereon.—THOMAS v. ATHERTON (1878), 10 Ch. D. 185 ; 48 L. J. Ch. 370 ; 40 L. T. 77, C. A.

108. ——— Except under statutory reference—Affecting public property—Or rights of third parties.]—Pltfs. & defts. were the owners of two adjoining houses in London. The houses were very old & had been built together so as to be mutually dependent upon one another for support. They were separated by a party wall. Defts., having resolved to rebuild their house, served upon pltfs. a party wall notice under London Building Act, 1894 (c. cxxiii.), & the parties, in accordance with s. 91 of that Act, appointed their respective surveyors. The house was pulled down & rebuilt 13 feet further back from the street, & defts. conveyed the vacant 13-foot strip to the county council, who dedicated it to the public. The effect of setting the house back was that the party wall was left exposed to a depth of 13 feet & rendered unsafe by the withdrawal of the support of defts.' house. Subsequently to the dedication the surveyors made an award ordering defts. to erect on the edge of the strip so dedicated a pier for the support of the exposed portion of the party wall. In an action brought to enforce the award, & also to recover damages at common law for the withdrawal of the support afforded by the building pulled down :—Held : the award, in ordering the building of a pier on the vacant strip of land, was not bad, either by reason of the fact that the site had been dedicated to the public as a highway, or that, subject to the rights of the public, it was the property of third parties, for the public by the dedication, & the county council, by the conveyance, took subject to the statutory rights of pltfs. under the above Act.—*SELBY v. A broker having entered into a contract for the sale of corn per account of F. pursuant to the rules, F. denied that the broker was his agent, & refused to deliver the corn or appoint an arbitrator. The bill was sent for pltf. to accept, which he declined to do, having heard from Quebec that the vessel was defective, & he wrote to deft., "I only require the guarantee from you that L. shall perform his contract. If you agree to appoint one merchant, I will appoint the other. Let them agree to an umpire. Give me a letter of guarantee that L. will abide by the award & perform his part without delay." Deft. answered, "If you accept L.'s bill, & return it to us forthwith we Pltf. replied, "Relying on the guarantee you give me, I send inclosed the bill accepted for the full amount of the new ship." The bill was paid at maturity: the vessel arrived in Dublin, & was defective. A surveyor was appointed by pltf. & another by C. & F. to survey the vessel, who reported it would take £376 to make her equal to the contract; & C. & F. thereupon made their award, whereby they ordered deft. to pay that sum, which he refused to do:—Held: (1) pltf. never acquiesced in deft.'s proposal to refer the matter to C. & F.; (2) C. & F. never professed to act under any authority derived from pltf.; (3) pltf. was not entitled to recover in respect of the award.—*FAGAN v. 115. Person becoming party to order of reference.]—A stranger to an action, but interested in the subject-matter, may, by submitting to an order referring the action, be bound by the order.

A cause stood for trial at Nisi Prius. The action was for rent in arrear. One issue was on a plea of an eviction by P. by title paramount to that of pltf. P. was not a party to the cause, but claimed the reversion in the premises held by deft. P. became by parol party to an arrangement, by which the matter was to be settled by a reference of the cause to an arbitrator who was to determine (inter alia) on what terms pltf.'s interest in the premises should be purchased, & in what proportions P. should contribute to the payment, & to the amount of the damages. An order of Nisi Prius was drawn up incorporating these terms & containing a provision that P. should become a party to the reference; it was not expressed to be drawn up by his consent, but it was shown by other evidence that it was in fact by his consent. P. afterwards refused to be bound by this order:—Held: having submitted to the order in fact he was bound by it & could not retract, & the ct. had jurisdiction to enforce obedience in a summary manner.—*WILLIAMS v. 116. Several bonds by joint claimants.]—Where joint claimants submit to an arbn., & enter into separate bonds to the opposite party to abide by the award, if the award be general, that such joint claimants shall do an entire thing, each of them are bound for the performance of the whole award, although their bonds were several. The several bonds, although entered into because the parties will not be bound for each, are but one submission.—HAYES v. HAYES (1636), Cro. Car. 433; 79 E. R. 976.

117. Joint liability—Valuation between incoming & outgoing tenants.]—Two several tenants of a farm agreed with the succeeding tenant to refer certain matters in difference respecting the farm to arbn., & jointly & severally promised to perform the award. The arbitrator awarded each of the two to pay a certain sum to the third:—Held: they were jointly responsible for the sum awarded to be paid by each.—*MANSELL v. 121. ———.]—A submission to an award was signed by three of five joint contractors:—Held: it would not bind the five, as it was not an act within the ordinary course of business of a trading firm, & there was no evidence that either of the parties had authority to bind the others to such a submission.—*STEAD v. d. Executor bound individually.]—One of several exors. being indebted to the estate, the matter was left by himself & his co-exors. to arbn.:—Held: though the award might not be binding on the estate, it was binding on the exor.—KOELLA v. MCKENZIE (1868), 15 Gr. 331.—CAN.

though the application be made before any step taken by the arbitrator, excepting the appointment of a meeting.

Here is an express agreement to refer properly entered into by counsel & attorney; it is now said that they had no authority to enter into that agreement; if so, deft.'s remedy is by action against her attorney. There would be no end to these applications if the ct. were to interfere; such interference would lead to collusion; when a party did not like the prospect of the reference, he would say that he had never given his attorney authority to refer (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—*FILMER v. 123. Submission voidable by infant—Valid as to other parties.—An infant & one of full age, A., join in a bond to perform an award, & it is awarded that they or either of them shall pay £10, & that pltf. shall release to them after they have released to him. The bond is valid as to A., although voidable as to the infant, & the award good & mutual, although the infant cannot make a good release. An award that one of the parties & a stranger shall do an act is binding on the party, & void as to the stranger.—GILL v. RUSSELL (1672), 1 Freem. K. B. 139; 89 E. R. 101.

124. ——A parol submission was made by an infant pltf. to a reference, before trial, & an arbitrator made an award in favour of deft. On pltf.'s refusing to comply with the terms of such award:—Held: deft. might proceed to trial by proviso, after notice given to pltf. that the award had been made, & request made whether he would abide by it or not.—*GODFREY v. 125. ——A cause was referred to an arbitrator who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties at law & in equity, so that he made his award by a certain day (with power of enlargement), to be delivered to the parties, or if either of them should be dead, to their personal representatives. The arbitrator was to be at liberty to make one or more awards at his discretion. At the time of the submission two equity suits were pending, in which the parties to the action & also certain infants were concerned. Before any award was made, one of the parties to one of the equity suits died. The arbitrator by his award ordered a verdict to be entered for pltf., damages £500, & also that defts. should pay to pltf. £350 for grievances not included in his declaration:—Held: the circumstances of infants being parties to those suits did not invalidate it.—WRIGHTSON v. BYWATER (1838), 3 M. & W. 199; 6 Dowl. 359; 1 Horn & H. 50; 7 L. J. Ex. 83; 150 E. R. 1114.

insolvent party.—Pltf. & deft. referred the cause to arbn., to which reference C. was a party. C. was ordered by the award to pay a certain sum to pltf. Pltf. became bkpt. Pltf.'s attorney in the action claimed the sum awarded from C. as in part payment of his bill of costs:—Held: the ct. would not, at the instance of the attorney, order C. to pay the sum awarded to him, although he claimed a larger sum as due to him in respect of his bill of costs.—HOLCROFT v. MANBY (1844), 7 Man. & G. 843; 2 Dow. & L. 319; 8 Scott, N. R. 473; 13 L. J. C. P. 208; 3 L. T. O. S. 282; 135 E. R. 342.

128. ——Cross-actions were brought by M. & G. During the pending of these actions a judge's order was made, by consent, in G.'s action, referring to the reference to arbn. of M.'s action, & providing for the set-off of the amount of any award in the arbn. in M.'s favour against the debt & costs in G.'s action. Before the order of reference was obtained, a fiat issued against G. under which he was declared bkpt. G.'s assignees refused to be bound by the above-mentioned proceedings, & commenced an action against M.:—Held: (1) although assignees were not bound by a mere agreement of bkpt. to refer to arbn., yet the order for reference was a deliberate contract, not merely requiring a reference then pending, but providing that, in the event of the arbitrators awarding any sum to be paid by bkpt. to petitioners, such sum might be set off against the debt due to bkpt., & bkpt. was bound by that contract; (2) the assignees were equitably bound by it, & it would not be just for the assignees, by bringing an action in their own names, to get that which they could not get by proceeding in the former action, & thus defeat the equities of M.—*Re GEDDES, Ex p. On its coming due, B. paid it for the honour of A., but there was no protest of the bill for non-payment, nor did B. make any formal statement that he paid it for the honour of A. B. then claimed to prove for the amount of the bill. The question whether he was entitled to prove was referred by him and the assignees to arbn., without any such authority as required by Bkpcy. Law Consolidation Act, 1849 (c. 106), s. 153. B. never repudiated the reference, but argued the case on its merits before the referee, & took up the award, by which the referee decided that there was no right of proof:—Held: whether an award under such a reference could have bound the estate of the bkpt. or not, B., having taken the chance of having a decision in his favour, could not object to the validity of the award on the ground of the non-compliance with the Act.

The reference being unauthorised, this award could not have bound the estate nor the Comr. (TURNER, L.J.).—Re WYLD, Ex p. WYLD (1860), 2 De G. F. & J. 642; 30 L. J. Bcy. 10; 3 L. T. 794; 7 Jur. N. S. 294; 9 W. R. 421.

Effect of absence beyond the jurisdiction.—By consent of pltf. & deft. within the jurisdiction, the partnership accounts, etc., & all matters in difference, were referred to arbn., notwithstanding the absence beyond the jurisdiction of the other deft., who had been a partner with pltf. & deft. before the ct. ## SECT. 6.—CONSTRUCTION OF SUBMISSION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

131. Transposition or rejection of words.]—To support the condition of an arbn. bond the ct. will transpose or reject insensible words, & construe it according to the obvious intent of the parties.

An arbn. bond provided that, on disagreement of the arbitrators, they should choose an umpire, & that they should stand to his judgment:—Held: (1) any words by which the intention of the parties could appear were sufficient to make a condition of an obligation; (2) the condition on its true construction was that the parties, & not the arbitrators, should stand to the umpire's judgment.—BUTLER v. WIGGE (1667), 1 Saund. 65; 2 Keb. 204; 85 E. R. 74.

133. "Shall or may."]—In an agreement of reference it was agreed that the arbitrator "shall or may" award a certain matter, with a proviso, etc., etc.:—Held: the words "shall or may" were imperative on the arbitrator, & he was bound to insert the proviso in his award, the context of the agreement & the situation of the parties requiring such a construction.—CRUMP v. ADNEY (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 355; 3 Tyr. 270; 2 L. J. Ex. 150; 149 E. R. 436.

PART I. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 1.

e. Submission strictly construed.]—Arbn., having the effect of withdrawing matters from the ordinary cts., constitutes a derogation from the common law & ought to be confined most strictly within the limits of the rules which the law has laid down.—McKAY v. MACKEDIE (1897), Q. R. 11 S. C. 513.—CAN.

f. —.]—Held: an agreement, which in express terms contemplated an award by two valuers in two events, must be construed as it stood.—MASSIE v. CAMPBELLFORD, LAKE ERIE & WESTERN RY. CO. (1914), 6 O. W. N. 457; 26 O. W. R. 421.—CAN.

g. Will not be construed to defeat object of deed containing submission.]—Where a deed contains a clause stipulating a reference to arbn. in the event of dispute, such clause is not to be construed so as to defeat an essential object of the parties to the deed.—SHAW v. JEFFREY (1860), 10 L. C. R. 340, P. C.—CAN.

131 i. Transposition or rejection of words.]—In order to support the condition of an arbn. bond, the ct. will transpose or reject insensible words, & construe it according to the obvious intent of the parties.—GREENE v. BRACKEN (1851), 2 I. C. L. R. 176, 182.—IR.

h. "In a summary way."]—An agreement provided that matters disputed were to be referred "in a summary way" to M. under R. S. O., c. 174, for decision:—Held: by "a summary way" the parties meant a reference without ceremony or delay, the words "under R. S. O., c. 174," merely introducing the procedure under that Act.—SALE v. LAKE ERIE & DETROIT RIVER RY. CO. (1900), 20 C. L. T. 332; 32 O. R. 159.—CAN.

k. "To be ascertained & fixed by arbitration."]—A lease contained a provision that the lessees should have the right of a renewal at a rent to be ascertained & fixed by arbn.:—Held: if the lessees elected to take a renewal, the rent had to be fixed in the manner prescribed by Arbn. Act, 1908.—GISBOURNE HARBOUR BOARD v. HARKER & BARKER (1910), 29 N. Z. L. R. 801, C. A.—N.Z.

l. "The judge."]—Held: where a reference is directed to "the judge" of a certain county, the senior judge is the person referred to.—ELORA AGRICULTURAL CO. v. POTTER (1876), 7 P. R. 12.—CAN.

m. "At such increased rent."]—A lease contained a covenant by the lessor to renew for a further term "at such increased rent as may be determined upon as hereinafter mentioned." The lease provided for the appointment of arbitrators to determine the rent to be paid under the renewal lease:—Held: (1) the arbitrators were bound to award an increased rent, but might award a nominal increase if they thought proper; (2) the increase was to be based upon the rent reserved for the whole term, & not for any particular year or years of it; (3) it might be upon each year's rent or upon the average of the whole twenty-one years, but so that in the result the average annual rent should be greater for the future term than the past.—Re GEDDES & COCHRANE (1902), 22 C. L. T. 54; 3 O. L. R. 75; 1 O. W. R. 15.—CAN.

n. Submission construed with prior deed.]—A proprietor agreed with a co. to allow the co. to take land included in certain notices, of which he had previously disputed the legality, it being stipulated that no other land should be taken, & that no land within the notices should be taken for other purposes than those therein described, "except in so far as an arbiter to be thereafter named should direct, & under such conditions as he might fix." A submission was thereafter entered into, whereby the parties referred to the decision of an arbiter "all demands, claims, & questions at the instance of the proprietor against the co.":—Held: the submission was to be construed by the prior deed of agreement.—RENTON v. N. B. RY. CO. (1847), 19 Sc. Jur. 524.—SCOT.

134. "Wilful delay."]—Covenant on a mtge. deed. Pleas non est factum & payment referred to arbn. The submission stipulated that "if either party, by affected delay or otherwise, should wilfully delay or otherwise wilfully prevent the arbitrator from making the award, he should pay costs," & gave the ct. power to remit to the arbitrator if either party disputed the validity of the award:—Semble: the clause relating to "wilful delay" did not apply to cases where an award had, in fact, been made, but to those cases only where the completion of the award was prevented.—BRADLEY v. PHELPS (1851), 6 Exch. 807; 21 L. J. Ex. 310; 155 E. R. 810.

135. "In the usual manner."]—An arbn. clause in a contract for the supply of chemical materials was in these terms: "Any dispute on the contract to be settled by arbn. in the usual manner, for which purpose it may be made a rule of ct.":—Held: the words "in the usual manner" did not mean, as a matter of law, "in accordance with the Act of 1889," but merely referred to the habitual form of arbn. in fact adopted in cases of the kind in question.—BRIGHT & BROTHERS v. GIBSON & CO. (1916), 32 T. L. R. 533.

136. Affidavits not admissible to vary terms.]—A cause was brought by an administrator, who declared on a promise made to him as administrator, & the cause was referred to arbn., the costs to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded that pltf. had no cause of action:—Held: pltf. was liable personally for the costs, & the terms of the submission could not be varied by affidavits showing that it was not the intention to make him

o. Correspondence not admissible to construe submission.]—Semble: it is not competent to construe a formal deed of submission by previous letters which have passed between the parties.—MOWBRAY v. DICKSON (1848), 20 Sc. Jur. 405.—SCOT.

p. Cannot be qualified by terms of different agreement between same parties.]—Differences arose in Dec., 1903, as to the ports of call to be visited by a steamer during 1904, & were referred to arbn. under a submission signed by the parties:—Held: the submission empowered the arbitrators to settle the ports to be visited by the steamer irrespective of any ports visited by her at any former period, & did not limit the arbitrators to determine what ports (if any) should be visited by the steamer within the time allowed by the contract in addition to those visited in previous years.—Re REID-NFLD. CO. & THE GOVERNMENT (1904), 9 Nfld. L. R. 34.—NFLD.

q. Evidence admissible to construe technical words—"Permanent improvements."]—Where lessors, in case of refusal to renew at expiration of the term, were to pay the lessee "such reasonable sum" as "the buildings & permanent improvements" on the demised premises might then be worth:—Held: in an arbn. to fix their value, evidence was admissible to explain the meaning of the words "permanent improvements."—DALTON v. TORONTO (1906), 8 O. W. R. 154; 12 O. L. R.

r. Custom admissible to construe submission.]—A contract for sale of oil provided that disputes should be referred to arbn. in the usual way. Sellers maintained that procedure must be by way of formal reference. Buyers maintained that arbiters should proceed informally, & presented a petition for appointment of an arbiter under Arbn. (Scotland) Act, 1894, s. 3:—Held: on the evidence the usual practice of the oil trade was that the arbiters proceeded informally, & prayer of petition must be granted.—HIGHGATE (HUGH) & CO. v. BRITISH OIL & GUANO CO., LTD. (1914), 2 S. L. T. 241.—SCOT.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WHETHER ARBITRATION CLAUSE IS INCORPORATED.

138. Clause in charterparty — Incorporation in bill of lading.]—An action was brought by ship-owners against consignees of the cargo & indorsees of the bill of lading, for freight due under the bill of lading. The charterparty provided that any dispute which might arise under it was to be settled by arbn. at the port where the dispute arose. On the bill of lading the words "All other terms & conditions as per charterparty" were stamped:—Held: the arbn. clause in the charterparty did not apply to a dispute arising on the bill of lading. The rule in such a case is to read the conditions of the charterparty verbatim into the bill of lading, as though they were there printed in extenso, & then disregard any which, if so read, are inconsistent with the bill of lading.—*HAMILTON & CO. v. #### PART I. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 2.

a. Clause in contract — Incorporation in sub-contract.]—Defts., one of the parties to a contract, entered into a sub-contract with pursuers. The sub-contract contained the following provision: "The whole work to be executed to the satisfaction of the engineers of the railway co." (the other party to the principal contract) "& according to plans & specifications, & to be finished within the period mentioned in the specification." The specification contained an arbn. clause, by which all disputes were referred to arbn. Disputes having arisen between the parties to the sub-contract:—Held: the arbn. clause had not been imported into the

b. Clause in agreement — Incorporation in subsequent agreement extending time for performance.]—An agreement between T. & Copper Co. contained an arbn. clause. T. assigned his interest in the agreement to M. Co., who entered into an agreement supplemental to the above-mentioned agreement with Copper Co. for an extension of time for performance on stated terms:—Held: the arbitration clause in the first-mentioned agreement applied to the second agreement.—TASMANIA COPPER CO., LTD. v. METALS EXTRACTION CO., LTD. (1912), 8 Tas. 57.—AUS.

c. Clause in trade association's rules — Incorporation in mercantile contract.]—A contract was embodied in a sale note which bore the following side note: "Any dispute under this contract

140. — Cesser clause.]—It was provided by clause 39 of a charterparty, by which pltf's. vessel was chartered by defts. for the carriage of a cargo of wheat from Bahia Blanca to a port in the United Kingdom, that, if the loading of the cargo were delayed by reason of certain causes therein specified, the time so lost should not be counted as part of the lay-days, & that, if any dispute arose under that clause in the loading of the ship, the same should be settled in the Argentine Republic by arbn. in the manner therein mentioned. The charterparty contained the usual cesser clause providing that the charterers' liability should cease upon shipment of the cargo, provided the cargo was worth the bill of lading freight, dead freight, & demurrage at the port of shipment, & that the vessel should have a lien on the cargo for recovery of all such bill of lading freight, dead freight, demurrage, & all other charges whatsoever. A full cargo was shipped by defts. under the charterparty, & bills of lading were given in respect thereof, by which the cargo was made deliverable to defts. or their assigns, they paying freight for the goods against delivery, in cash, at a rate of freight in accordance with the charterparty. The bills of lading stated that all the terms & exceptions contained in the charterparty were therewith incorporated & formed part thereof, & gave the shipowners an absolute lien on the cargo for the recovery of freight & demurrage & all other charges whatsoever. There was no dead freight, & the cargo shipped was worth the freight & charges. A dispute within the meaning of clause 39 having arisen with regard to delay in the loading of the ship between pltf's. & defts. after the completion of the loading:—Held: notwithstanding the cesser clause, & the fact that defts. were the holders of the bills of lading, the provision for arbn. in clause 39 of the charterparty remained operative as between pltf's. & defts., & an action brought by pltf's. after the ship's arrival in the United Kingdom, claiming a declaration that they were entitled to a lien on the cargo for demurrage at the port of loading, should be stayed under s. 4 of the Act of 1889. *Runciman & Co. v. 144 i. Clause in partnership agreement—Withdrawal of one partner—Dispute arising after withdrawal.—Pursuer & fifteen others entered into an agreement to effect an amalgamation of the businesses carried on by them. By art. 19 all disputes during the subsistence of the agreement, or during any continuation thereof, or after its dissolution or termination, or relating to the meaning of the agreement & the rights & liabilities arising therefrom, were referred to arbn. On pursuer's resigning, the remaining parties subscribed a "memorandum of continuation" of the agreement, & continued the business under the same name, firm & style. On a dispute arising between pursuer & the remaining partners as to whether the former was entitled to carry on business in competition with the partnership:—Held: (1) the partnership originally formed had been dissolved; (2) the new partnership agreement was not a continuation of the original agreement; (3) the arbn. clause did not apply to a dispute between the retiring partner & the new partnership.—MACGREGOR v. One of the conditions was that if a false declaration was made in support of a claim, all benefit under the policy should be forfeited. The policy also provided that "all differences under this policy" should be referred to arbn. Appct. made a claim under the policy, & resps. required that it should be referred to arbn. Subsequently it was agreed to extend the time for completion, & by an indenture between the parties the condition for completion on a certain day was rescinded & a new condition was substituted identical in terms except that a new date for completion was inserted. The employer, after the original date for completion & before the new date, purported to determine the contract in pursuance of conditions in that behalf. An action having been brought by the contractor claiming (inter alia) damages for breach of contract, for wrongful prevention of due & complete performance & for wrongful determination of the contract, & upon a quantum meruit for work & labour done:—Held: the matters in dispute were referable to arbn., notwithstanding that the original time for completion had passed when the contract was determined.—*BURTON v. The contractor then raised an action to have it declared that the dispute fell within the clause of reference:—Held: such clause of reference applied only to disputes arising during the execution of the contract, & requiring to be immediately disposed of, & the dispute, which related to completed work, did not fall within it.—*BEATTIE v. The employers determined the contract, & proceeded themselves with the works, but the works were not completed for nearly three years. The contractors brought an action, claiming an account of what was due to them on the contract, & damages for breach thereof, or to have the contract specifically performed:—Held: whatever might be the effect of the arbn. clause, if a dispute arose after the engineer had made a valuation & certificate, there was then no dispute or difference within the arbn. clause.—*SWINEY & M'LARNON v. Both parties appointed arbitrators, but before anything more was done pltf. brought an action against deft. to restrain him from dismissing him & from appointing another agent. Deft. moved to stay proceedings in the action on the ground of the agreement to refer all matters to arbn.:—Held: (1) deft. having taken upon himself to dismiss pltf. without waiting the decision of the matters in difference by arbn., the ct. ought not to exercise their power of staying proceedings in the action; (2) it was too late after the commencement of the action for deft. to withdraw his dismissal of pltf., in order that it might be included in the arbn.—*DAVIS v. B. was let into possession of the plant immediately after Mar. 31, & remained in possession. No arbn. was ever demanded, or any dissatisfaction expressed by B. at the price fixed by the valuers:—Held: the event upon which the arbn. clause of the contract of May 8 was to take effect, viz., the parties differing as to the value, never having arisen, the parties were remitted to a sale at a fair value, & A. was entitled, at the expiration of two months from that date, to recover the value agreed on by the memorandum of Mar. 31.—*CANNAN (CANAAN) v. 155. Contract between English & Scotch firm—Which law governs.]—A vendor resident in Scotland, & a purchaser resident in England, agreed for the sale & purchase of goods to be delivered in Scotland. The agreement contained a clause that any dispute should be "settled by arbn. by two members of the London Corn Exchange, or their umpire, in the usual way." The vendor brought an action against the purchaser in the Scotch ct. for non-acceptance of the goods according to contract. The purchaser pleaded the arbn. clause, which, being an agreement for reference to unnamed arbitrators, was, as the Scotch law then stood, invalid:—Held: (1) the intention of the parties, as gathered from the whole contract, was that it should be governed by English law; (2) the arbn. clause, being good in English law, & not fundamentally opposed in principle to the law of Scotland, was a good defence to the action.—HAMLIN & CO. v. TALISKER DISTILLERY, [1894] A. C. 202; 71 L. T. 1; 58 J. P. 540; 10 T. L. R. 479; 6 R. 188, H. L.

156. Insurance by English company of Jersey risk—Reference to Act of 1889.]—A fire insurance policy, made in Jersey by the agents of an English co. on the goods of a resident of Jersey, provided (inter alia) that the co. should pay what might become due in case of loss out of its capital stock & funds, & contained an arbn. clause specifically referring to the above Act:—Held: the nature of the transaction, the language in which the policy was expressed, & the terms of the agreement & of the conditions, all showed that the contract between the parties was an English contract, & that, wherever sued upon, its interpretation & effect ought, as a matter of law, to be governed by English & not by Jersey law.

The reference to the English Arbn. Acts shows that the arbn. proceedings were to be conducted according to English law, & no other (LORD LINDLEY).—SPURRIER v. LA CLOCHE, [1902] A. C. 446; 71 L. J. P. C. 101; 86 L. T. 631; 51 W. R. 1; 18 T. L. R. 606, P. C.

157. a. Contract between Scotch & Belgian firm—What law governs.]—A contract between a merchant in Scotland & a mercantile firm in Antwerp, to be implemented in Scotland, provided: "Arbn. Any dispute on this contract to be settled by friendly arbn. in London in the usual way":—Held: the question whether the clause was valid & effective fell to be determined by the law of England.—ROBERTSON v. BRANDES, SCHONWALD & Co. (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 635.—SCOT.

b. Contract between Scotch & South African firm—What law governs.]—A contract, whereby a firm in Scotland undertook to supply plant for Johannesburg, provided: "In case any dispute or difference shall arise between the purchasers & the contractors . . . it shall, after the complete delivery of the material, be referred to the arbn. of a single arbiter or umpire to be mutually agreed upon between the parties, or, failing agreement, to be nominated by the president for the time being of the Institution of Civil Engineers of London, or, in the case of disputes arising with local contractors in Johannesburg, to be nominated by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal . . . & the arbn. shall be an arbn. within the Act of 1889 & shall be conducted in all respects as therein provided." The main contract was subsequently modified by a second or "running" contract which provided: "In the event of any dispute between the contractors & the council . . . the matter in dispute shall be referred to a single arbiter or umpire to be mutually agreed upon, or, failing agreement, to be nominated by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal, & to hold the arbn. in Johannesburg . . . & the arbn. shall be deemed to be an arbn. within Transvaal Ordinance of 1904, & shall be conducted in all respects as therein provided." The main contract provided: "This contract shall be deemed for all purposes an English contract enforceable in & subject to the jurisdiction of the English cts." In an action for damages for breach of the two contracts, questions arose as to whether these claims were covered by the arbn. clauses:—Held: the scope & validity of the arbn. clauses fell to be determined by the law of England.—JOHANNESBURG MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. STEWART & Co., [1909] S. C. 860.—SCOT.

155 i. Contract between English & Scotch firm—Which law governs.]—A contract of sale between Glasgow engineers & a London co. contained an arbn. clause in English form providing for the appointment of an arbiter under the Act of 1889. The purchasers rejected certain plant, & on being sued contended that it was for the English ct. to determine the scope of the reference & pleaded forum non conveniens:—Held: as defenders had failed to show it would be more suitable for the interests of all parties & for the ends of justice that the case should be tried in England, there was no reason why the case should not remain in the Scottish cts.—HOWDEN & Co., LTD. v. POWELL, DUFFRYN STEAM COAL CO., LTD. (1912), 49 Sc. L. R. 605.—SCOT.

158. Right to remove plant as set-off against debts—Question of account.]—By the contract between a railway co. & a contractor it was provided that, if the contractor made default, the co. might themselves complete the line, & that the plant, etc., upon the line belonging to the contractor should become the property of the co., & be set off against the debts (if any) due from him to the co., & that the contractor should not hinder the co. from using the same. Default having been made, the co. completed the line, & were proceeding to remove the plant, etc. An arbn. was pending to decide the questions of account between the contractor & the co.:—Held: the co. must be enjoined from removing the plant before award given.—GARRETT v. SALISBURY & DORSET JUNCTION RY. CO. (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 358; 14 L. T. 693; 12 Jur. N. S. 495; 14 W. R. 816.

159. Right to give notice to terminate contract.]—Defts. were carrying out a scheme for a water supply, & had contracted with pltf. to sink certain wells. The work was to be performed to the satisfaction of defts.' engineer, & any dispute was to go to arbn., & if in the judgment of the engineer sufficient dispatch was not used, defts. or their engineer might dismiss the contractors & their workmen. Difficulties having arisen in carrying out the work & delay being thereby occasioned, defts. gave notice dismissing the contractors & their men. On a motion to restrain defts. from acting on the notice:—Held: (1) the provision for arbn. was part of the contract, & the contractors were not bound to give up to the engineer the decision of every question; (2) the ct. ought to imply that defts. would not act upon the summary clauses until the arbitrators had affirmed the judgment of the engineer; (3) an injunction should be granted.—FOSTER & DICKSEE v. HASTINGS CORPN. (1903), 87 L. T. 736; 19 T. L. R. 204.

c. Right of distress.]—Deft. leased land to pltf. on certain terms providing (inter alia) that the lessor might sell any part of the farm, making a reasonable deduction from the rent therefor, to be determined by arbn. in case of dispute. A railway co. gave notice to deft. that they required a portion of the land, which he conveyed to them after an arbn. as to price:—Held: that after the sale the lessor could not distrain without first arranging or offering to arbitrate as to the amount to be deducted.—BICKLE v. BEATTY (1858), 17 U. C. R. 465.—CAN.

161. Particulars of loss—Reference to average stater—On dissatisfaction reference to arbitration.]—In an action for a partial loss on a policy of insurance, embodying a regulation that all claims for partial losses should be adjusted by an average stater, & that in case the co. were dissatisfied with his adjustment, it should be referred to arbitrators, etc., the award to be final, a plea that, although the claim was referred to an average stater, & he made an adjustment, yet the co. have been & are dissatisfied with the adjustment, & desirous of referring it to arbitrators, etc., but pltf. refused, etc., was allowed to be pleaded, since the plea was not so untenably bad as to entitle the ct. to shut defts. out from an opportunity of having its validity deliberately discussed. — JOHNSON v. HOPPER (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 882.

162. — Supplied by assured—Any differences referred to arbitration.]—A fire insurance policy provided: "When a fire takes place, if & whenever any difference arises under the policy as to any claim for loss or damage, etc., or any matter arising under the policy, such differences shall be referred to arbitrators," etc. The policy also contained a condition that, when any fire took place, the co. might insist on having particulars delivered to them of the loss sustained, etc., & that, if the co. should contend that the policy was defeated or the insured deprived of the benefits of it by reason of breach of any of the conditions of it, then they might revoke any submission to arbn. The co. demanded, & pltf. supplied, particulars, but the co. deemed this insufficient, & declined to proceed with an arbn., insisting that pltf. was not yet entitled to it. On his issuing a writ they applied to stay the action on the ground that he was not entitled to proceed by action, but was bound to go to arbn.:—Held: the proper course for pltf. to pursue was to take steps to compel the co. to proceed to arbn., which it was admitted he could do.—KENWORTHY v. QUEEN INSURANCE CO. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 211.

163. Absence of agreement as to occurrence giving rise to dispute.]—Pltf.'s vessel & deft.'s vessel were insured in a mutual insurance co., by the rules of which it was provided that, in the event of a collision occurring between two vessels insured in the co., the owners of such vessels should immediately submit a statement of the whole circumstances of the collision, & the directors, after receiving such statement, should have power to arbitrate on the matter, & their decision should be final:—Semle: the rules must be taken to mean that it should be a condition precedent to an arbn. that both parties had agreed as to the fact of a collision having taken place.—THE WARWICK (1890), 15 P. D. 189; 63 L. T. 561; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 545, D. C.

loss.]—An insurance policy provided that any dispute, arising after proof of loss & damage had been duly given, should be referred to arbn. In an action on the policy:—Held: before an arbn. could be had defts. after receiving proofs would have to admit their liability.—BOWES v. NATIONAL INSURANCE CO. (1880), 20 N. V. R. 437.—CAN.

164. Demand of reference within limited time.]—

Pltfs. bought of deft. jute of a particular mark, to arrive from Calcutta, deft. guaranteeing the jute to be of the average quality of that mark as hitherto imported, & promising that if found to be inferior a fair allowance should be made to pltfs. The quality, as alleged by pltfs., was found to be inferior, & damages were claimed accordingly. Deft. stated in defence that pltfs.' purchase was subject to a term that, in the event of any dispute arising out of the contract, it was to be referred to jute brokers for arbn., & that any reference to arbn. was to be demanded within fourteen days of final landing of the jute. Deft. alleged that this was a dispute arising out of the contract, & no reference was demanded within the stipulated time:—Held: this was a good defence to the action, the effect of the contract being that no allowance for inferior quality was to be made unless a reference was demanded within fourteen days of the landing of the jute.—POMPE v. FUCHS (1876), 34 L. T. 800.

165. Arbitration to be "held" within limited time.]—

A contract for the sale of cotton-seed to be delivered in sound & merchantable condition to buyers' craft alongside steamer at Hull, contained an arbn. clause, which provided for arbn. "to be held within six weeks from date of ship's reporting, unless buyers' & sellers' arbitrators, or umpire, agree in writing to extend the time." The ship containing the cotton-seed was reported on June 23, & delivery was taken by resps. In due course resps. claimed arbn. upon the question of quality. The arbitrators met at the offices of the Oil Seed Assocn., London, on July 25, with a view to proceeding with the arbn., but, finding no samples there, they verbally adjourned the arbn. to enable the samples to be produced:—Held: the arbitrators having met on July 25, & having adjourned for the production of the evidence, the arbn. had been "held" within six weeks from the date of the ship's reporting, & the buyers had not lost the right to arbitrate.—Re VARIPATI & Co. & OLYMPIA OIL & CAKE CO., [1914] W. N. 208.

164 i. Demand of reference within limited time—"Written demand."]—A clause in an accident policy provided that, in case of any difference regarding any claim, it should be in the option of the assocn. to have the difference decided by arbn., & the assocn. should declare within ten days after written demand whether same should be decided by arbn., & in case the assocn. should decline to refer the difference to arbn., or should give no answer to the demand therefor within fourteen days, the insured might proceed by action, provided that if no written demand for arbn. as above mentioned were made within six months, the insured should be held to have waived & abandoned all claims against the assocn.:—Held: the words "written demand" meant a written demand for an arbn., & where a written demand for payment without mention of arbn. was the only demand made on the co. within six months of the date of the accident, the clause barred any claim on the policy.—SCOTT'S EXECUTOR v. SOUTHERN LIFE ASSOCN. (1909), T. H. 223; L. L. R. 91.—S. AF.

164 ii. ———.]—In an action on a policy, the co. pleaded that pltf. had failed to make a written demand for arbn. in terms of one of the conditions of the policy, which provided that, if no written demand for arbn. were made by the insured within six months from the date of the accident, the insured should be held to have waived & abandoned all claim against the co., whose liability to the insured should thereupon absolutely cease & determine. The action was tried before a jury, who awarded the sum of £500 to pltf. An objection was taken on behalf of the co. that, as pltf. admitted that no written demand for arbn. had been sent, the judgment should be entered for the co., but the presiding judge decided, as a matter of law, that the condition did not apply, & judgment was entered for pltf.:—Held: judgment should be entered for the co.—SOUTHERN LIFE ASSOCN. v. TROLLIP (1907), 3 Buch. A. C. 188; 17 C. T. R. 1016.—S. AF.

6. Conditions not precedent to arbitration.]—In an action to set aside an award it was contended that the agreement to arbitrate was conditional, & that the conditions had not been performed:—Held: the so-called conditions were not conditions precedent to arbn., but simply undertakings that certain things should be done.—Re GRAVES & TENTLER (1911), 19 W. L. R. 361; 21 Man. L. R. 417.—CAN.

1. Notice within certain time after dispute arises—"When dispute "arises."]—In a contract between buyers & sellers an arbn. clause contained the following words: "provided that no such dispute or difference shall be deemed to have arisen or be referred to arbn., unless one party has given notice in writing to the other after the existence of such dispute within seven days after it arises." The buyers rejected the goods, & the sellers more than seven days thereafter repudiated the rejection & sued the buyers for the price:—Held: the dispute did not arise until the date of pursuers' letter repudiating the rejection, but the letter of repudiation was itself notice of the

166. The court.]—Articles of partnership between pltf. & other persons for performing a contract contained an agreement that any dispute between the partners should be settled by arbn., but there was no agreement that the submission to arbn. might be made a rule of ct. One of the partners became a liquidating debtor, & deft. was appointed his trustee, & he elected to carry on the contract. Deft. claimed to have purchased the shares of pltf. & the other partners in the undertaking. Pltf. brought an action against deft. asking for an account of the partnership dealings. The main questions at issue were whether the shares of the other partners were purchased on behalf of pltf. & deft. or of deft. alone, & whether deft. had purchased the share of pltf. as well as of the other partners. Deft. moved for an order under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, staying all proceedings in the action, & referring the matters in question to arbn., but before the motion was heard pltf. revoked the agreement for arbn.:—Held: the question whether the matters in dispute were within the agreement for arbn. was one which the ct. would decide, & would not leave to the arbitrator.—*PIERCY v. The agreement contained a provision for reference to arbn. in case of dispute. No limit as to the duration of the agreement was expressed, nor was power given to either co. to determine it:—Seemle: the question whether or not the agreement was revocable could not be determined under the arbn. clause after a notice by one of the parties

Disputes having arisen with regard to minerals drawn by the lessees from their adjoining mine through the demised mine:—Held: on the construction of the lease, the ct. would not decide, but would leave it to the arbitrators to decide whether the matters in dispute between the parties were within the agreement to refer.

The words in the arbn. clause with respect to the rights, duties, & liabilities of either party “in connection” with the premises, evidently are apt to include & were intentionally used to include everything relating to the demised property & the use of it, even things which might arise out of collateral matters between the parties (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—WILLESFORD v. The articles contained an arbn. clause, providing, in effect, that all disputes or questions respecting the partnership affairs, or the construction of the articles, should be referred to arbn. There were also clauses providing for the purchasing by the continuing partners of the share of a deceased partner. An action having been brought by the exors. of a deceased partner against the surviving partner for the winding-up of the partnership, deft. moved for a stay of proceedings & a reference of the matters in difference between the parties to arbn. One of the questions was, whether it was for the ct. or for the arbitrators to determine which of the clauses in the articles, & in particular, whether the purchasing clauses, applied to the partnership so carried on after the expiration of the term:—Held: it was for the arbitrators, & not for the ct., to determine which of the articles applied, & there must be a stay of proceedings & a reference of all matters in difference to arbn.—(COPE v. COPE (1885), 52 L. T. 607.

In a case where it was a condition precedent to the arbitrator's jurisdiction that the dispute should have arisen during a tenancy between pltf. & deft., & where the arbitrator was not authorised by the submission to decide this preliminary question:—Held: the arbitrator could not clothe himself with jurisdiction by finding this preliminary fact in favour of pltf., so as to bind deft.—MAY v. 180. — Whether relating to action or to other matters in difference.—The terms of submission referring a cause & all matters in difference gave the arbitrator power to decide “all matters & questions to do justice between the parties,” & “power to order & direct what shall be done by either or both of the parties, either immediately or prospectively, whether relating to the action or to other matters in difference” :—Held : those words plainly authorised the arbitrator to award up to the time of the award, because, if he was only to deal with matters arising up to the time of the reference, all he could do would be to order payment of damages, & he could not order any compensation.

This absurdity would follow, that, although he could order damages up to the time of the submission & order the weir to be repaired, he could deal in no way with compensation to pltf. between the time of the submission & the time of the award, because he could award neither immediately nor prospectively, whether relating to the action or to the matters of difference (BRAMWELL, B.).—LEWIS v. ROSSITER (1875), 44 L. Issue was taken upon the arbitrament & found for pltf. In arrest of judgment it was moved that in pltf.'s plea “action of account then depending” meant at the time of the award, whereas the submission referred to actions depending at the time of the submission :—Held : the judgment should be stayed until the other party answered it.—

The arbitrators having awarded a sum to be paid to pltf. :—Held : the ct. would not presume that the matters in difference submitted to arbn. arose subsequent to the indenture of assignment & power of attorney from the principals to pltf., but such matter might be pleaded by way of defence to the action.—BANFILL v. 197. Future & contingent claims excluded—Unless within terms of submission.]—A canal co. agreed with B. for the use of an engine constructed by him, during a term of years, they paying a stipulated annual sum. In the course of the term, disputes arising, the parties put an end to the agreement & referred all matters in difference between them to arbn. On the reference B. claimed, among other things, compensation for future loss, in respect of the part of the term unexpired. The co. stated a set-off. The arbitrators, by their award, reciting the submission to arbn., & that they had heard & considered all the evidence of each party, & investigated all the accounts & vouchers touching the matters in difference, adjudicated (not saying that they did so of & concerning the matters referred) that there was due from the co. to B. £515, which they directed the co. to pay him. On motion to set aside the award, on the ground (inter alia) that it was not final, inasmuch as no decision appeared touching the future damage :—Held : the award was sufficient.

An arbitrator on a reference of matters in difference has power over all matters down to the period of the submission, but cannot award on future & contingent claims. The parties, however, may give him such a power if they think fit, & the arbitrator will then award what is due on each account. That power being given here, it is said that the award ought to have shown what was due at the time of the submission, & what was the claim for future damage. I see no reason for that

198. Expenses of voyage current at date of arbitration.]—Upon a reference of a cause & of all matters in difference between pltf. & deft., the main question was, which of them should pay the expenses of a ship, in which they had been jointly interested, incurred after Mar. 24, 1838. The arbitrators directed pltf. to pay them, & to give deft. a bond of indemnity against the payment of such expenses :—Held : the award was good.

The first objection is that the arbitrators had no authority to deal with what was paid for providing a new master on a voyage pending at the date of the submission. I think the objection ought not to prevail. All matters in difference are referred, & if any sum of money is found to be due from deft., it is to be paid at such time & place as the arbitrators shall direct. That seems to refer to past debts ; but the next power given seems to treat this growing demand as if it were bygone ; for the words are, that the arbitrators shall award to pltf., if they think fit, such sum as he may be entitled to, if any, in consequence of his providing another master for the brig on her then present voyage, in order to have the matters in difference brought to a speedy conclusion. It is laid down in Com. Dig. Arbn., E. 9, "There shall not be a constrained construction to make it to be out of the submission" (TINDAL, C.J.).—BROWN v. WATSON (1839), 6 Bing. N. 199. Arrears of annuity accruing after cause of action referred arose.]—R., in 1805, bequeathed to S., the wife of J., an annuity of £20 (without expressly limiting it to her sole & separate use), charged upon certain estates. J. & his wife were at the date of the will living apart. The annuity was for many years paid to the wife under an order made in a suit in Ch., instituted for the purpose of carrying into effect the trusts of the will. In 1839, a distress was taken in the name of J. & his wife for £50, arrears of the annuity, J. permitting his name to be used under an indemnity. The distress was replevied, & after several abortive attempts on the part of J. (in collusion, as was suggested, with the tenant for life of the property upon which the annuity was charged) to render the distress fruitless, a reference was agreed to of "the cause & all matters in relation to the annuity in question." The arbitrator by his award directed that judgment should be entered for defts. in the replevin suit, & that pltf. should pay to the wife £50 as & for the arrears of the annuity that were due at the time of the distress, & a further sum of £40 for arrears accruing between that time & the date of the order of reference :—Held : the arbitrator had not exceeded his authority in dealing with the arrears accruing after the cause of action arose.—WYNNE v. Under a judge's order of July 27, "by consent of both sides all matters in difference between the parties, including the claim of deft. in her set-off in the action," were referred to arbn.:—Held: the claim made in the set-off was properly entertained by the arbitrator as a matter in difference, though not payable till after the date of the action & the judge's order.—*PETCH v. 203. — Award of damages beyond date of action—Nominal damages not affecting costs.]—An arbitrator gave a shilling damages, which he declared to be in full satisfaction for the injury which pltf. had sustained up to the time of making the award:—Held: the arbitrator had exceeded his authority in giving damages beyond the commencement of the action, but, as the damages themselves were (& a fortiori the excess was) merely nominal, & could not affect the costs, the award was good.—*HARDING v. The arbitrator in his award decided that pltf. had no claim whatever against the heir-at-law, but that a certain sum was due to pltf. by defts., though part of the work for which the demand was made, & to which the award referred, had been performed since the death of testator:—Held: in so awarding, the arbitrator had exceeded his jurisdiction.—*JONES v. The arbitrators by their award found sums due by each of the partners, not only on partnership account, but on separate account. In an action of trover, where the sole question was upon a debt, which in turn depended upon the validity of the award, the deed of covenant appeared, on the face of it, to have been executed by all the partners, but could only be proved to have been executed by pltf. & one other partner. It being objected that the award could not be received in evidence for want of proving the deed executed by all the partners, the judge non-suited pltf.:—Held: (1) this was a reference of the aggregate accounts between all & each of the partners, & the consideration to each for entering into the submission was that each party's account should be liquidated, not only as to one, but as to all, & each should have a termination of all accounts with all, & they mutually stipulated with each other that the arbitrators should liquidate not only partnership accounts, but also separate accounts between any two of them;

l. “All claims, questions, disputes,” etc., “of every kind,” etc.—A landlord & tenant agreed that all claims, questions, disputes & differences of every kind depending & subsisting between them, upon any account, transaction or action whatever, preceding the date of the agreement, should be referred to arbn. The arbiters discerned in favour of the tenant for a large sum inasmuch as the lands had been greatly improved by him:—Held: the submission was sufficiently ample to include every subject of claim or dispute which existed between the parties, & every obligation incumbent on the landlord as constituted by the lease or otherwise was referred to arbn.—PITCAIRN v. DRUMMOND (1822), 1 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 431.—SCOT.

m. “Any difference concerning import of articles or implement thereof.”—It being declared in articles of roup that any difference between the exposor & the purchaser “concerning the import of the articles, or the execution & implement thereof,” should be referred to arbn.:—Held: an objection to the sale, on the part of the highest offerer, that fictitious offers had been made in order to raise the price, fell under the operation of the clause.—EWING v. LAWRIE (1825), Fac. Coll. Jan. 13.—SCOT.

o. All questions between the parties.—A reference of “all questions between the parties,” by the practice in Scotland, is confined to the questions in the particular actions referred.—BAILLIE v. EDINBURGH OIL GASLIGHT CO. (1835), 3 Cl. & Fin. 639; 6 E. R. 1577, H. L.—SCOT.

p. Repairs to be executed “to the satisfaction of arbiters.”—Where in a lease the landlord was bound to put the houses & fences in repair “to the satisfaction of arbiters named”:—Held: the arbiters were entitled to commute the landlord's obligation into a sum of money.—M'GREGOR v. STEVENSON

q. “Regarding intent & meaning of these articles.”—A subject was exposed to sale under articles, which contained a clause enumerating a progress of titles, of which the purchaser was bound to satisfy himself before the roup, & also a clause to submit any questions which might arise “regarding the intent & meaning of these articles.” The purchaser raised doubts as to whether the interest of the sellers had vested, & refused to arbitrate, alleging that the question raised by him did not fall within the submission:—Held: the question fell within the terms of the submission.—WATT v. SHAW (1849), 11 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 970.—SCOT.

r. “Regarding true intent & meaning of these presents.”—Pursuer agreed to sell to defenders the goodwill, etc., belonging to him. The agreement contained a reference clause that, should any question arise “regarding the true intent & meaning of these presents,” same was thereby referred, etc. In an action for the price of the goodwill, it was argued that the meaning of turnover was a question arising out of the true intent & meaning of the contract & referable to arbn.:—Held: the questions raised in the action were not questions upon the true intent & meaning of the contract.—MILLER & SON v. OLIVER & BOYD (1906), 13 S. L. T. 789.—SCOT.

s. “Relative to true intent & meaning of contract”—“Or rights of parties under same.”—In a contract to build steamships it was stipulated that failing prompt delivery the builders should pay damages at a certain rate. The contract provided: “In case any questions or differences shall arise between the parties hereto relative to the true intent & meaning of this contract, or the rights of parties under same, they shall be submitted” to arbiters named. Prompt delivery was not made, & the builders, being sued, pleaded the clause of reference:—Held: the question fell within the clause of reference.—LEVY & CO. v. THOMSONS (1883), 20 Sc. L. R. 753.—SCOT.

t. Dispute “as to true intent & meaning of” specification—“Or in adjusting contract referred to, etc.”—The specification for a contract provided: “The whole of the works when finished shall be remeasured & paid for at the schedule rates. Any other description of works ordered shall be measured & paid for at rates to be fixed by the engineer, & no reference shall be made to any arbiter to fix such rates for additional or altered work, the engineer's decision being final & binding on all parties with respect to the character, description, execution, & measurement of the works to be executed under this contract & the rates to be paid therefor.” . . . “Should any dispute arise as to the true intent & meaning of this specification, or as to the adjustment & terms of the contract deed to follow hereupon . . . or as to any other matter connected with this contract to follow hereon (except as to maintenance or matters otherwise specially provided to be settled by the engineer solely), same shall be referred to the decision of S.” etc. There was a provision in the contract subsequently executed “that all disputes & differences in any way connected with, or arising out of the execution of, or failure to execute the works hereby contracted for” should be referred to arbn. In an action (1) for the price of certain extra or altered work involving remeasurement of some unadjusted items, & (2) for damages incurred in erecting a temporary bridge rendered necessary by the failure of the engineer to furnish the plans for the permanent bridge within a reasonable time:—Held: the first claim was excluded by the arbn. clause, but the second was not excluded.—M'ALPINE v. LANARKSHIRE & Ayrshire Ry. Co. (1889), 17 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 113.—SCOT.

debt due from the wife of one of the parties as extrix. is within the submission.—LUMLEY v. HUTTON (1817), Cro. Jac. 447; 1 Roll. Rep. 268; 79 E. R. 383.

218. "All debts, trespasses, & injuries."—On a submission of all debts, trespasses & injuries, the award directed releases of all actions, debts, duties, trespasses & demands :—Held : the award did not go beyond the submission, & was valid.—CABLE v. ROGERS (1825), 3 Bulst. 311; 81 E. R. 259.

219. "All controversies."—On a general submission of "all controversies," an award to pay a sum of money in satisfaction of a debt due from a third person is bad.—ADAMS v. STALEY (STATHAM) (1879), 2 Show. 61; 2 Lev. 235; 89 E. R. 793.

220. "All matters in difference between parties in cause"—All matters in dispute in cause between parties.]—A submission to arbn. of "all matters in difference between the parties in the cause" (which is merely a description of the persons) is not confined to the subject-matter in the particular action then depending, but will extend to cross demands between the parties, though not pleaded by way dispute or difference "as to the meaning of the contract" to the decision of the architect as sole arbiter. The contract stipulated that lime should be mixed up with sharp fresh water sand & pure fresh water. The builder used "shivers" :—Held : a dispute as to the meaning of "sharp fresh water sand" was not a dispute within the submission.—GREENOCK P. B. v. COGHILL & SON (1878), 5 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 732.—SCOT.

v. "In regard to import & effect of any clause therein or as to obligations & rights," etc.]—A lease stipulated that any disputes arising "in regard to the import & effect of any clause therein, or as to the obligations & rights" of either party thereunder, or as to carrying same into effect, should be submitted to the decision of M. The landlords raised an action for payment of the cost of removing certain workshops under a clause in the agreement. Defenders founding upon a clause, which provided that pursuers should supply water for their works, & that defenders should provide pipes for carrying same, averred that, when the agreement was entered into, it was understood that the mode of carrying same into effect was to be by giving a permanent supply from H. pit, but that pursuers had offered them a supply from a pit some distance off, & defenders were entitled to be reimbursed for the expense incurred by them in connecting their works with such supply :—Held : (1) as far as regarded pursuers' claim, the subject of the dispute fell within the reference clause of the agreement; (2) as regarded defenders' counter-claim, it did not, that claim being founded, not upon the agreement, but upon an understanding collateral thereto.—SHORTS IRON CO. v. DEMPSTERS (1891), 29 Sc. L. R. 40.—SCOT.

x. "As to construction of this agreement or any matter arising out of same," etc.]—Defenders, an insurance co., entered into an agreement which was intended to indemnify pursuers against loss arising from the live-stock which they sold being condemned as unfit for food. The contract provided that "any dispute or difference between the insurers & the sellers as to the construction of this agreement or any matter arising out of or in connection with same shall be referred to an arbitrator," etc. In an action pursuers claimed damages through defenders having refused to insure any of their live-stock. The dispute which defenders contended ought to be decided by arbn. arose out of a clause which, as construed by defenders, bound pursuers to pay of set-off; & the costs being to abide the event makes no difference. But a reference of all matters in dispute in the cause between the parties is confined solely to the matters in dispute in that trial.

Assignees of a bkpt. having received £1,500 from a debtor to bkpt. as a debt due to his estate, & having commenced an action against him for a further demand on the same account, to which he had only pleaded the general issue, agreed with him to refer their differences to arbn. The submission provided "that all matters in difference between the parties in the cause be referred" :—Held : the arbitrator had power to award that the assignees should repay a part of the sum already received, if it appeared to have been paid by mistake.—MALCOLM v. FULLARTON (1788), 2 Term Rep. 645; 100 E. R. 347.

221. —.—.]—The distinction between a reference "of all matters in dispute between the parties in the cause" & "of all matters in dispute in the cause between the parties," although clearly & fully understood, is too refined for the general understanding of mankind, & the terms of the reference ought to be amended by making the former a reference "of all matters in difference premiums upon all live-stock which they sold, & did not entitle them to insure bad and doubtful animals, while refusing to pay premiums on good ones :—Held : the reference clause applied to the dispute.—HEGARTY & KELLY v. COSMOPOLITAN INSURANCE CORPN., LTD. (1913), 1 S. L. T. 18.—SCOT.

y. "Any dispute as to quality or delivery."—A. sold ground to B., who became bound to furnish A. with coals, at certain prices, to be delivered before a certain date. Any dispute as to the "quality or delivery" of the coals was referred to an arbiter. For a considerable time no deliveries were made, & the time having elapsed without A. taking full delivery, B. refused to deliver more at the agreement prices. The arbiter held the agreement, quoad delivery of coals, forfeited, & no longer binding on B. :—Held : same was a competent judgment, within his powers as arbiter, & a reduction of the award refused.—MILLER v. HOWIE (1851), 23 Sc. Jur. 272.—SCOT.

a. "All differences"—Partnership dispute.]—A submission clause in a contract of co-partnery, referring "all differences" between the partners to arbn., does not apply to an action for reparation & implement of the contract at the instance of the one partner against the other.—LAUDER v. WINGATE (1852), 1 Stuart, 594.—SCOT.

b. "In regard to quantities & qualities" & "generally all disputes," etc.]—A clause of reference in a contract specially referred disputes "in regard to the quantities and qualities of material" to be furnished, & generally all disputes & differences that might arise in regard to the execution of the work contracted for :—Held : (1) a dispute in regard to the construction of the agreement was thereby referred; (2) the arbiter, under the general terms of the submission, had no power to assess damages for breach of contract.—ABERDEEN RY. CO. v. BLAIKIE (1852), 15 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 20.—SCOT.

c. "Any difference arising in any way relating to the premises."—Subjects were exposed to sale under articles, which provided that the purchaser should grant bond for the price, with interest till the date when the price was payable, & declared that, "in case of any difference arising between the exposor & offerers in any way relating to the premises, same" should be decided by an arbiter. The purchaser placed the price in a bank the day after the sale, & proposed to the seller to take the deposit receipt & conclude the matter as a ready money transaction.

The seller refused :—Held : the matter fell under the arbn. clause.—TURNBULL v. MACBRIDGE (1858), 30 Sc. Jur. 278.—SCOT.

d. "All claims, debts & demands."—Held : a deed by which a truster & trustee, under a voluntary trust for creditors, & the creditors submitted to arbn. "all claims, debts, & demands" against the truster's estate, excluded an ordinary action of reduction, on the ground of fraud, of documents of debt held by one of the creditors.—KINTORE (EARL) v. UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND (1863), 1 Macph. (H. L.) 11.—SCOT.

e. "Connected with this contract or execution of work."—A contract provided : "Should a dispute or difference of opinion arise betwixt the contracting parties connected with this contract or the execution of the work, same shall be & is hereby referred to B., whose decision shall be final." After the work was completed the builder had it measured & priced. The employer challenged the measurements, & maintained that an action was excluded by the clause of reference :—Held : the question between the parties, being merely as to the measurement of the completed work, was not a dispute or difference of opinion "connected with this contract or the execution of the work" within the clause of reference.—KIRKWOOD v. MORRISON (1877), 5 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 79.—SCOT.

f. "All matters relating to co-partnership," etc.]—Where a contract of co-partnership between five persons provided that "In all matters relating to the co-partnership, whether during its subsistence or at & after its dissolution, & also in all matters relating to the meaning of these presents, where any question or dispute or difference of opinion shall arise between the partners, or between any of them, & the representatives of a deceased bkpt. or insolvent partner, & which is not otherwise herein specially provided for, every such question, dispute or difference shall be & is hereby referred to," etc. :—Held : a dispute in which a majority of the partners desired to appoint a new manager (an office provided for in the contract) did not fall within the reference, as it was a matter relating to the internal arrangements of the business, & was not a question which would have been within the jurisdiction of a ct. of law had there been no reference.—LANDALE v. GOODALL (1879), 16 Sc. L. R. 434.—SCOT.

between the parties," omitting the other words "in the cause," & the latter a reference "of all matters in difference in the cause," omitting "between the parties" (BULLER, J.).—SMITH v. MULLER (1790), 3 Term Rep. 624; 100 E. R. 769.

222. "All matters in difference" between partners & "terms & conditions on which co-partnership should be dissolved."—By submission to arbn. it was agreed between A. & B., who carried on the business of surgeons & apothecaries at H., to dissolve partnership, & that all matters in difference between them, & the terms & conditions of accounts for goods & workmanship supplied "by A. to B., issued an award in which he set off against the amount of these accounts payments to account said to have been made by bills, & a debt alleged to be due upon an independent transaction. The set-off brought out a balance against A., & B. sued for payment:—Held: the arbirer had no jurisdiction under the terms of the reference to entertain pleas of compensation, & the scope of the reference had not been extended by the parties.—WILSON v. PORTER (1880), 17 Sc. L. R. 675.—SCOT.

l. "In relation to execution, construction," etc.—Clause in exhaustive terms.—A specification provided that the contractor would get possession "immediately after acceptance of tender," & that he must enter into a formal contract. A formal contract was executed, which, while declaring that the specification was incorporated, reserved right "to appoint the time when the contractor may enter on the lands & proceed with the works." The contract further provided that in the event of any dispute arising "in relation to the execution, construction, or completion of the whole works contracted for, or any of them, or any part or portion thereof, or as to the quality or quantity of the work or the materials thereof, or as to the settling of accounts, or as to any points or matter whatever in regard to the works, or as to the contract, or the true intent, meaning, or effect thereof, or of the plans, drawings, specifications, or conditions," same should be referred to the decision of an arbirer. The contractors did not get prompt entry & claimed damages, maintaining that the question whether prompt entry had been given should be referred to the arbirer:—Held: that question did not fall to be referred to the arbirer.—MACKAY & SON v. LEVEN POLICE COMRS. (1893), 30 Sc. L. R. 919.—SCOT.

n. "Any disputes that may arise between partners in any way relating hereto."—A contract of co-partnership for the carrying on of a watchmaker's & jeweller's business provided that "any disputes that may arise between the partners in any way relating hereto" should be referred to arbn. A question having arisen as to whether certain proposed additions to the business fell within scope of a watchmaker's & jeweller's business, for which alone the co-partnership existed:—Held: the question was one relating to the construction of the contract, & fell under the clause of reference.—MUIR v. MUIRS (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 240.—SCOT.

p. "Claim in this case & all matters in difference between the parties in this cause."—Semble: a reference of "pltf.'s claim in this case, & all matters in difference between the parties in this cause," refers only the matters in dispute in the cause.—BLANCHARD v. SNIDER (1868), 28 U. C. R. 210.—CAN.

q. "All manner of causes, etc., controversies, etc., & demands whatsoever," —Arbitrators were chosen to arbitrate, award, order, judge & determine upon & concerning the possession of a certain lot of land & all manner of causes, etc., controversies, etc., & demands whatsoever from the beginning of the world to the date thereof:—Held: under the general words of the submission, authority was given to the arbitrators to arbitrate as to the fee simple of the land in dispute, if that were a matter in difference.—BENEDICT v. PARKS (1850), 1 C. P. 370.—CAN.

r. Cause & all matters in difference.—Where a cause & all matters in difference had been referred, & an award made:—Held: all questions of law as well as fact were submitted.—MCCOLLUM v. MCKINNON (1862), 22 U. C. R. 175.—CAN.

s. "All disputes concerning affairs of society."—Pltfs., a building society, advanced to deft. money on the security of mtges. Deft. claimed that he was entitled to a release of a portion of the mtged. property under a certain rule. Pltfs. refused such release, & refused to submit the matter to arbn., as demanded under a rule providing "that the board, for the time being, . . . shall determine all disputes concerning the affairs of the society, . . . which shall or may hereafter arise between the trustees, officers, or other shareholders of the society, . . . & if the decision be not satisfactory, reference shall be made to arbn.":—Held: the demand & refusal of such release did not constitute a "difference" or "dispute" which deft. could insist on having referred to arbn.—ALMON v. FAIRBANKS (1876), 1 R. & C. 407.—CAN.

t. "Any legal or what right in each claim," etc.—Authority to determine whether pltf. has "any legal or what right in each claim or claims, & the nature & extent of such rights," extends to rights legal or equitable, in fee, life or years, & whether in possession, remainder or reversion.—MILNER v. BRYDGES, MILNER v. LUTTRELL (1876), 2 P. & B. 87.—CAN.

x. "Any other matter relating to the insurance."—By an arbn. clause in a policy, arbitrators were to decide any differences which might arise "as to the loss or damage, or any other matter relating to the insurance" in accordance with the terms & conditions of the policy & the laws of Canada:—Held: a question as to the payment, or default in payment, of the premium was a difference "relating to the insurance" within the policy.—ANCHOR MARINE INSURANCE CO. v. CORBETT (1882), 9 S. C. R. 73.—CAN.

y. "All matters which may hereafter come into dispute," etc.—An agreement provided that "all matters which may hereafter come into dispute" between the assocn. or board of directors thereof, or any member or members, relative to "the original agreement of assocn., or any alleged breach or non-observance thereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made, or to be made, by the board thereunder, & all matters of complaint by any member or members against any other member or members in respect of the premises," should be referred to arbn. Acting under the agreement, the board fixed a sum of three cents per gallon to be paid to the assocn. by the parties thereto on the sale of lubricating oil. A dispute having arisen as to whether the three cents were payable on sales made by one member to another, & whether the rate was payable upon distilled petroleum used in making axle grease:—Held: these matters were properly within scope of the arbitrator, though they amounted to a dispute upon the construction of the agreement, & the rules made under it.—WOODWARD v. McDONALD (1887), 13 O. R. 671.—CAN.

223. Question of value & all matters in difference—Questions of law.—K. entered upon the death of S. & died, devising his real estates, charged with his debts, & bequeathing his personal estate to T. K., against whom a bill was filed, charging that K., during his possession of the lands, had committed equitable waste, by cutting trees planted, etc., for ornament, & praying that an account might be taken out of the trees cut, & the value, observance thereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made, or to be made, by the board thereunder, & all matters of complaint by any member or members against any other member or members in respect of the premises," should be referred to arbn. Acting under the agreement, the board fixed a sum of three cents per gallon to be paid to the assocn. by the parties thereto on the sale of lubricating oil. A dispute having arisen as to whether the three cents were payable on sales made by one member to another, & whether the rate was payable upon distilled petroleum used in making axle grease:—Held: these matters were properly within scope of the arbitrator, though they amounted to a dispute upon the construction of the agreement, & the rules made under it.—WOODWARD v. McDONALD (1887), 13 O. R. 671.—CAN.

z. "Should any dispute arise from any cause whatever during continuance of contract."—The expression "should any dispute arise from any cause whatever during the continuance of the contract" is most comprehensive & should be read as meaning "all disputes that may arise between the parties in consequence of this contract having been entered into." The contract should be held to "continue" until all payments under it have been made.—NORTHERN ELECTRIC CO. v. WINNIPEG CITY (1913), 24 W. L. R. 547; 4 W. W. R. 221; 10 D. L. R. 489.—CAN.

a. "Or on any other grounds whatsoever"—Rule of ejusdem generis.—A contract contained a stipulation that the sellers would not sell similar goods to other traders, & contained a clause providing for the reference of any disputes with regard to the quality of the goods "or on any other grounds whatsoever." The sellers in breach of their obligation sold similar goods to other traders. The purchasers refused to accept the goods & to appoint an arbitrator:—Held: (1) the question whether the sellers had committed a breach of the stipulation was not properly a subject of reference under the arbn. clause; (2) the general words "or on any other grounds whatsoever" meant any other grounds of a like character & did not include questions of law.—CARLISLES' NEPHEWS & Co. v. RICKNAUTH BUCKTEARMALL (1822), 1 L. R. 8 Calc. 809.—IND.

b. "Compensation . . . to be determined in usual mode of arbitration."—A clause in a contract for the sale of land, & the erection of a house by the vendor in a specified manner, provided that "no error or misdescription of the property shall annul the sale, but compensation shall be made or given, as the case may require, to be determined in the usual mode of arbn.":—Held: the clause related only to the physical condition of the land at the date of the contract & was not applicable to an alleged breach of the contract to erect the house in the manner specified.—Re

& that T. K., as representative of K., might pay the amount out of his assets. A decree was made according to the prayer of the bill. But before the master had proceeded under the decree, the question of value, & all matters in difference between the parties, were by an order of the ct., by consent, referred to an arbitrator, appointed by the master under the order, & arbn. bonds were executed by the parties:—Semble: such a reference as above stated submitted the law, as well as the facts, to the arbitrator.—BUTLER v. KYNERSLEY (1828), 2 Bli. N. S. 374; 4 E. R. 1171, H. L.

224. "Cause & all matters in difference including equity suit"—Power to "direct verdict & determine what should be done."—A cause & all matters in difference, including an equity suit, were referred to arbn., with power to the arbitrator to direct such verdict as he thought proper, & to determine what should be done by either party touching the matters in dispute. The costs of the cause & equity suit were to abide the event of the award, the costs of the reference & award to be in the arbitrator's discretion. The bill in equity, filed by defts. in the action against plffs., prayed, among other things, an injunction against further proceeding in the action. The arbitrator directed that a verdict should be entered for plffs. at law, with damages, on some issues in the cause, & for defts. on the others; but he ordered that no execution should be taken out by plffs., & that, after entering of the verdict as above, & any judgment thereon, all proceedings on the judgment by either party to the action should be stayed. But for such directions the verdict would have entitled plffs. to the general costs. He also directed that the suit in equity should cease:—Held: no excess of the arbitrator's authority.—REEVES v. M'GREGOR (1839), 9 Ad. & El. 576; 1 Per. & Dav. 372; 2 Will. Woll. & H. 127; 8 L. J. Q. B. 177; 112 E. R. 1330.

225. "All disputes & differences which existed between parties"—Following recital of specific claim.—By articles of submission to arbn., after reciting that plffs. claimed a balance of £201 9s. 10d. to be due to them from deft., with interest, it was agreed that all disputes & differences which existed between the parties should be referred to the arbn. of B., to determine the account between them. An account of the balance claimed by plffs. up to a certain date had been previously delivered, & plffs. afterwards sent to deft. a subsequent account, which deft. contended was not intended to be a subject of the reference:—Held: the recital of the specific claim did not limit the general power given to the arbitrator to decide all matters in difference between the parties.—CHARLETON v. SPENCER (1842), 3 Q. B. 693; 12 L. J. Q. B. 23; 6 Jur. 1013; 114 E. R. 672.

226. "Matters in difference in cause"—Arbitrator to determine what he shall think fit to be done, etc.—Where, by an order of reference, the arbitrator was to determine what he should think fit to be done by either of the parties:—Held (PARKE, B., diss.): he was not bound to direct affirmatively that something should be done, unless he should so think fit.

The matters in difference in the cause are the matters raised upon the issues on the record, & which are necessary to the determination of the cause. Upon these the arbitrator has decided. If there were other grievances of a more general kind, not in issue in the cause, the party ought, according to the requisition of the arbitrator, to have submitted them to him in writing, & desired him to adjudicate upon them (PARKE, B.).—*ANGUS v. 227. —Overpayments.—An order was obtained by consent that all matters in difference in an action should be referred; before this order deft. alleged in an affidavit under R. S. C., Ord. 14, that plff. had been overpaid:—Held: the arbitrator had jurisdiction to consider such overpayment under the terms of the order of reference.—WEALL v. JAMES (1893), 68 L. T. 54; 37 Sol. Jo. 194; 5 R. 157.

228. Cause & all matters in difference—Subject to special provisions.—In assumpsit for goods sold & delivered, money lent, etc., defts. pleaded non assumpsit & Stat. Limitations. The cause & all matters in difference were afterwards referred, upon the terms, amongst others, that "the action should be decided according to the pleadings, but that, under the reference, so far as it related to matters in difference, the plea of Stat. Limitations was not to be set up by either party." The arbitrator directed a verdict to be entered for plff. for a sum excluding items that were barred by the stat., & he allowed those items as matters in difference. The ct. refused to disturb the award.—SLOWMAN v. WIGGINS (1848), 6 C. B. 276; 136 E. R. 1257.

229. —Matters decided which might have arisen but did not arise out of cause.—An arbitrator does not exceed his jurisdiction, when a cause & all matters in difference are referred to him, by making an award "in respect of matters in difference" which could not have been decided at the trial of the action, but might have arisen out of it.—COX v. KERSLAKE, KERSLAKE v. COX (1867), 16 L. T. 396.

230. "This cause & all matters in difference in this cause & in the cause of etc."—W. & M., who had contracted to cover wires with gutta percha for R., who supplied the wires, afterwards assigned their business to C., & gave him a power of attorney authorising him in their names to bring any action or suit or other proceeding to enforce any existing contracts, & otherwise to deal in respect thereof as he might think proper. C. himself, after the assignment, covered wires with gutta percha for R. Afterwards C. brought two actions for debt against R., one in his own name, the other in the name of W. & M., to recover the balance due for covering the wires. Deft. pleaded in each action the general issue, payment & set-off. Issue was not joined in the second action. On the trial of the first action, an order of reference by consent of C. & R. was made in the cause C. v. R., & professed to refer "this cause, & all matters in difference in this

c. "Touching the lease or any matter, clause or thing therein contained."—An agreement for a lease provided that any doubt, difference, or dispute arising between the parties thereto touching the lease or any matter, clause or thing therein contained should be determined by arbitrators in manner provided by Arbn. Act, 1890:—Held: the determination of the lessee's for breach of covenant under such agreement was within scope of the reference to arbn.—TROUTBECK v. TANNER (1910), 29 N. Z. L. R. 1171.—N.Z.

d. "Difference arising out of contract."—A contract giving a concession to build a railway provided that, if the line was not completed within a certain time, the agreement should cease & appct. might enter upon the uncompleted line. A clause in the contract provided that differences arising out of the contract should be settled by arbn. The line not having been completed within the time fixed, appct. applied for an order declaring that the agreement had ceased & authorising him to enter upon & take over the line:—Held: the right to such order was a question of law going to the root of the contract & could not be regarded as a difference arising out of the contract.—COLONIAL GOVERNMENT v. HILLS (1903), 20 S. C. 292; 13 C. T. R. 504.—S. AF.

cause, & in the cause of W. & M. v. R., & all matters in difference between the parties, & all matters in difference in the cause of W. & M. v. R. between those parties." After the reference a rule for a discontinuance having been obtained in the action of W. & M. v. R., the order of reference was amended by consent, & it was ordered "that the rule for a discontinuance should be suspended, & left to the decision of the arbitrator." R. before the arbitrator made a claim for damages in respect of some wires spoilt by W. & M. in covering them. The award, among other things, decided that the claim was not valid, & awarded a discontinuance in the action of W. & M. v. R. M. was called by R. as a witness before the arbitrator:—Held: there was no excess of jurisdiction in awarding on the claim by R. against W. & M. for spoilt wires, as it was a cross-claim under the contract, & one which C. had authority to settle by virtue of the power of attorney.—HANCOCK v. REID (REEDE) (1851), 2 L. M. & P. 584; 21 L. J. Q. B. 78; 15 Jur. 1036.

231. "Should any dispute arise"—Questions of law included.]—A contract entered into between plffs. & defts. for the purchase of some wheat contained the following clause: "Should any dispute arise, the same to be submitted for settlement to the arbn. of two London corn factors respectively chosen, whose decision shall be final & binding":—Held: (1) the clause in question formed part of the consideration for the contract, & was intended to include questions of law as well as of fact which might arise upon the construction of the contract.—FORWOOD & Co. v. WATNEY (1880), 49 L. J. Q. B. 447.

232. "In matters of detail."]—By an agreement between two telegraph cos., whose submarine lines were not then constructed, for the exclusive working of their undertakings in unison for twenty years, & for payments each to the other of a proportion of their gross receipts in manner therein-after mentioned, it was arranged, amongst other things, that either party might, after five years, claim to have the agreement or any of the provisions thereof modified in matters of detail by arbn. In case the parties should not agree upon a sole arbitrator the matter was to be referred to a sole arbitrator to be appointed in accordance with Railway Cos. Arbn. Act, 1859 (c. 59), & the provisions of that Act were to apply to every reference to arbn. under the agreement, & as if the parties to the reference were railway cos. Amongst other things, one of the two cos. claimed, after five years, to vary the proportion of gross receipts to be paid to each other, & the other co. refused to agree to an arbn. The Board of Trade, upon application, refused to appoint an arbitrator under the above Act. A master's order was obtained appointing an arbitrator under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 12:—Held: (1) the order was within the jurisdiction of the ct. given by that sect.; (2) the claim to vary the proportion of gross receipts was not a matter of detail, & in respect of this modification the order would not be confirmed.—Re BRAZILIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. & WESTERN & BRAZILIAN TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. (1880), 42 L. T. 234.

233. "All usual terms as to access to children, etc."]—Cross petitions for divorce by husband & wife were withdrawn at the hearing, upon terms which included the execution of a separation deed to be settled by a counsel agreed upon in cases of difference, & to contain "all usual terms as to access to children, etc." The parties could not agree, & the counsel settled a deed providing that the wife should have the sole custody of the children, two boys of thirteen & fourteen, for half their vacations. In an action by the wife for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: (1) these provisions related to the custody & not access, & it was beyond the powers of the counsel to insert them; (2) the ct. had power to settle the proper form of deed instead of referring it back.—EVERSHED v. EVERSHED (1882), 46 L. T. 690; 30 W. R. 732.

234. "All disputes are to be settled by," etc.]—A contract for the sale of locomotives provided for payment of the price upon the certificate of the engineer that the locomotives were in perfect working order at C., & by a subsequent clause, that "all disputes are to be settled by" arbn. The locomotives were delivered at C., but the engineer refused to certify or to give his reasons for not certifying. The vendors thereupon proceeded under the arbn. clause, the purchasers taking part under protest. An award having been given in favour of the vendors:—Held: a dispute had arisen within the arbn. clause, & whether the arbitrator was right or wrong, as he had not exceeded his jurisdiction, the ct. would enforce the award.—Re HOHENZOLLERN ACT. FÜR LOCOMOTIVBAN & CITY OF LONDON CONTRACT CORPN. (1886), 54 L. T. 596; 2 T. L. R. 470, C. A.

235. "All other questions"—Rule of ejusdem generis.]—In a suit by a wife for dissolution of marriage, the parties, at the hearing, agreed on certain terms of separation which were made an order of ct., & it was referred to the registrar to draft a deed of separation embodying these terms with the usual clauses, & with full power to determine "all questions as to the form of the deed, & all other questions arising out of the terms of the settlement." The parties, English subjects, had been married in Paris, & the marriage contract declared that they adopted the French law as ruling the civil conditions of their marriage. The contract stipulated that the parents of petitioner, as her dowry, should pay over to the husband & wife a sum of 200,000 francs, & that they should, further, pay an annuity of 30,000 francs for the benefit of the wife & her children, same to lapse if the donors died before the recipient & the children of the marriage, & in the case of the death of the wife without children before her parents, they contracted to pay the husband an annuity of 12,500 francs. The contract also contained various conditions as to the investment & devolution of property acquired by the wife at & after her marriage, the power of disposing of property, moveable & immoveable, by the husband & wife mutually in each other's favour, the mutual liability for debts contracted by either, etc. The deed of separation prepared by the registrar proposed that the income of 30,000 francs secured by the marriage contract should hereafter be deemed to be the sole property of the wife, & that all real & personal property, moveable or immoveable, now belonging or hereafter accruing to the wife, should be her separate property, independent of the control of her husband, & that all such property not disposed of by her by will or gift should go to such persons as would have been entitled to it if the husband had died in her lifetime. It also required the husband to relinquish all rights conferred on him by the marriage contract, as to the investment of property acquired by the wife after marriage, & as to the rights of inheritance of the survivor to the property of the party who died first, & finally, it stipulated that either of the parties should be at liberty to apply to the proper French tribunal for the ratification of the deed or of any of its provisions. The husband refused to execute the deed, on the ground that it was ultra vires as varying the conditions of the marriage contract:—Held: under the terms of the agreement, the registrar had power to determine the questions arising under the French law as to whether a separation of bodies effected a separation of goods, or whether a separation of goods was brought about by the agreement, even though a contrary effect might be inferred from its terms, & also, whether an intention that separation of goods should not take place could be gathered from the agreement, even if the words "all other questions" were to be taken ejusdem generis with the "form of the deed," which was doubtful.—DE RICCI v. DE RICCI, [1891] P. 378; 61 L. J. P. 17.

236. "Dispute."—By a berth note it was agreed between plffs., shipowners of Cardiff, & defts., grain merchants of London & Marioupol, that plffs.' steamship should proceed to the Sea of Azov, & there load from defts.' nominees a cargo of grain, & discharge same in the United Kingdom or on the Continent, defts. to do the stevedoring at rates as per margin, & (clause 10) "in case of any dispute arising at loading ports under this berth note, it is to be submitted to the Rostof-on-Don Bourse Ct. of Arbn., whose decision is to be final." The vessel loaded a cargo of wheat, barley & rye at Marioupol, & for stevedoring, defts. charged 40 roubles per thousand chetverts, in accordance with the tariff in the margin of the berth note, & deducted the amount from advance freight. On the accounts being received by their London agents, plffs. contended that defts. had overcharged them by not reckoning, in the customary way, the number of poods for barley & rye to the chetvert, & they commenced a ct. ct. action against defts. to recover the difference:—Held: (1) "dispute" meant, not "disputation," but "matter in dispute"; (2) clause 10 in the berth note applied, as the matter in dispute was, "What are the proper charges for stevedoring at Marioupol?" & the dispute arose where the stevedoring was done, & where the charges in dispute were made; (3) the proceedings in the action must be stayed.—THE DAWLISH, [1910] P. 339; 79 L. J. P. 111; 103 L. T. 315; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 496.

237. "If any dispute upon or in relation or in connection with contract."—Pltf., a contractor, entered into a written contract with defts. for the construction of certain sewerage works, the contract containing a clause that "if at any time any question, dispute or difference shall arise between the council or their engineer & the contractor upon, or in relation to, or in connection with, the contract, the matter shall be referred to & determined by the engineer. . . ." After he had done certain work under the contract, pltf. refused to complete the work, alleging that he had been induced to enter into the contract by fraudulent misrepresentations made in the specification as to the nature of the subsoil of the ground where the work was to be done, & he brought an action to recover damages for the alleged misrepresentations, & to have the contract declared void. Defts. having taken out a summons, under s. 4 of the Act of 1889, to stay the proceedings & refer the dispute to arbn. under the arbn. clause in the contract:—Held: the dispute was not a dispute "upon, or in relation to, or in connection with, the contract" within the above clause, & defts. were not entitled to have the proceedings stayed.—MONRO v. BOGNOR URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1915] 3 K. B. 167; 84 L. J. K. B. 1091; 112 L. T. 969; 79 J. P. 286, C. A.

238. Any differences as to "meaning & intentions of charter."—Pltf. let to defts. a tug under a charterparty, which provided that on default of payment of hire by defts. pltf. was to be at liberty to withdraw the tug, & that any differences between the parties as to the "meaning & intentions of the charter" should be referred to arbn. Disputes in which pltf. alleged (inter alia) default in payment of hire were referred to arbn., & in due course the arbitrators awarded that pltf. had a right to withdraw the tug from the service of defts. In their defence to an action by pltf. on the award for delivery up of the tug & damages for its detention, defts. contended that, under the agreement to refer, the jurisdiction of the arbitrators was limited to "the construction of the charter involving the rights of the parties under that document, & did not include any application of the conditions of the charter to the facts which had given rise to the dispute," that is to say, that the arbitrators had no jurisdiction to determine whether the hire was or was not in arrear & to make the award:—Held: this construction was too narrow, & the words gave the arbitrators power to apply the provisions of the charter to facts which had arisen, & to determine those facts.—RICHARDS v. PAYNE & Co. (1916), 86 L. J. K. B. 937; 115 L. T. 225; 13 Asp. M. L. C. 446.

v. May be admission of liability.]—A contract for sale of sheep provided that any deficiency in number should be allowed to the purchaser at 5s. per head, & also for the reference of matters in dispute to arbn. There was a very large deficiency. The arbitrator to whom the matter was referred allowed more than 5s. per head for the number deficient:—Held: by sending the case to arbn. the vendor admitted the deficiency to be such as entitled the purchaser to more than the 5s. per head.—RYAN v. 247. As regards liability for costs.—A. sold goods to B., who resold them to pltf., who resold them to defts., who resold them to the ultimate purchasers. All the contracts were in similar terms & contained similar arbn. clauses. The ultimate purchasers claimed the right to reject the goods as not being in accordance with their contract, & each purchaser in turn claimed the right to throw back the goods on his immediate vendor. Defts. agreed with pltf. that, as between themselves & pltf., they would be bound by the result of an arbn. between A. & B.:—Held: they had not thereby impliedly agreed to pay to pltf. any costs pltf. might be liable to pay to B.—JACKSON & Co., LTD. v. HENDERSON, CRAIG & Co., LTD. (1916), 115 L. T. 36.

249. Agreement to refer matters of action—Accord & satisfaction.—Several matters in difference existing between pltf. & defts., some of which were the subject of an action, it was agreed between them that, in consideration that defts. would consent to refer to arbn. the matters of the action, pltf. would accept such agreement in satisfaction of all damages sustained by him in respect of the other matters:—Held: the agreement & its performance was a good bar to an action in respect of the last-mentioned matters.—WILLIAMS v. LONDON COMMERCIAL EXCHANGE Co. (1854), 10 Exch. 569; 156 E. R. 565.

250. — Sufficient consideration for promise to pay.—Assumpsit lies on a promise that, if pltf. would submit his accounts to A., deft. would pay as much as should be found due from his wife as extrix. of her former husband, for the submission of the accounts to inspection of the arbitrator is sufficient consideration, being a trouble to pltf. & more than he needed to have done.—MARCH v. CULPEPPER (1627), Cro. Car. 70; 79 E. R. 662.

No award being made:—Semble: the peremptory undertaking was waived by the reference.—SPURR v. RAYSON

252. Agreement to refer salvage claim—No admission of services.—Unless all the parties negotiating are fully apprised of all the circumstances of the case, negotiation to refer a claim of salvage to arbn. is no conclusive admission of salvage services rendered, or negation of a defence on the ground of the salvors' misconduct.—THE MARTHA (1859), Sw. 489.

253. Not acknowledgment within Statute of Limitations.—An agreement in writing to refer disputed accounts to arbn. in order "to ascertain the amount due," the amount to be paid "at such times & in such portions as the arbitrator might appoint":—Held: not an unqualified acknowledgment that any amount was due, & not an acknowledgment in writing sufficient to bar the operation of Stat. If a reference be submitted to by an exor., & he does not protest in the first instance that he has no assets, he should not be afterwards allowed to say so, because in that case the opposite party will have been put to the expense of an arbn. to no purpose. 271. Unless dispute peculiarly adapted for arbitration.—Although an agreement to refer disputes to arbn. is, generally, no objection to a suit in a Ct. of Equity, yet upon the nature of the subject, the management of the Opera House, & the anxious provision of the parties for arbn., the ct. refused upon motion to interfere before they had taken that course. The ct., therefore, would not upon motion appoint a manager, etc., of the Opera House, except upon the principle, applicable to any other partnership, as necessary to the relief, a foreclosure, taking into consideration also the difficulties from the nature of the subject & the contract, an anxious provision for arbn., & that one party was by the express contract manager.—WATERS v. TAYLOR (1808), 15 Ves. 10; 33 E. R. 658.

272. Building contract dispute.—Pltf. entered into a contract with defts. to remove 10,000 cubic yards of the bed of the Mersey contiguous to Seacombe Ferry, for £5,000, & to finish completely the work, under the direction & to the satisfaction of defts.' engineer, by Oct. 1, 1878, rules as bye-laws:—Held: the provision of Friendly Societies Acts had ceased to apply to the society, & the jurisdiction of the ct. was not ousted by the arbn. clause.—IRVINE v. PRESBYTERIAN WIDOWS' FUND ASSOCN. (1855), 5 I. Ch. R. 1.—IR.

f. Suit in equity—Exception.—A suit in equity cannot be sustained after an agreement to refer to arbn. (naming the arbitrators, & containing a covenant not to sue, & power to examine witnesses, & to make the submission a rule of ct.), while the arbn. might be proceeded with.—DIMSDALE v. ROBERTSON (1844), 7 I. Eq. R. 536; 2 Jo. & Lat. 58.—IR.

Sect. 8.—Effect of agreement to refer on jurisdiction of the court—Ouster of jurisdiction.]

subject to such an extension of time as the engineer might think reasonable, in case a temporary staging then erected on the site of the work should not be removed within such a time as would enable pltf. to complete the work by Oct. 1, 1878. Defts. were to make monthly payments on the certificate of the engineer to the amount of 80 per cent. of the value of the work done during each month, & pay the balance of the sum of £5,000 on the completion of the work. There was also a clause in the contract providing that, if any difference should arise between defts. & pltf. concerning the work contracted for, or concerning anything in connection with the contract, such difference should be referred to the engineer, & his decision should be final & binding on defts. & pltf. The work was completed on Nov. 11, 1879, & then a correspondence took place between pltf. & the engineer with reference to pltf.'s claims against defts. The engineer admitted pltf. was entitled to compensation for the expense caused by delay in consequence of the non-removal of the staging, & agreed to allow £15 10s. per day for thirty-eight days, but they could not agree upon the amount due to pltf. for extra work & other expenses. In June, 1880, the engineer sent a certificate to the works committee of defts., stating the work was finished to his satisfaction, & that £1,065 19s. was due to pltf., & defts. sent pltf. a cheque for £962 6s. 2d., being the balance of the sum certified after making certain deductions. Pltf., after giving credit for this sum, brought an action against defts. for £2,489 13s. 11d.:—Held: the clause referring differences to the engineer could not be set up in answer to the action.—LAWSON v. 275. — Where covenant not to sue—Forum in which plea tenable.]—An agreement to submit the affairs of a partnership to arbn., & that the submission shall be made a rule of a ct. of common law, cannot be pleaded in bar to a suit in equity, seeking discovery, complaining of pltf. being sued in actions & praying for a receiver, although before the bill was filed arbitrators were appointed, & since bill filed the submission has been made a rule of the ct. The jurisdiction of the superior cts. in such a case is not ousted by C. L. P. Act, 1854.

Qu.: whether, if the agreement to submit also contains a covenant not to take proceedings at law or in equity, in that case the submission may be pleaded in bar of proceedings in any superior ct., except that before which the reference is pending.

Where, in a reference under the Act of 1698, an award has been made, the jurisdiction in the matters of the award of every superior ct., except that before which the reference is pending, is excluded.

276. Pendency of arbitration no defence.]—To a declaration for goods sold & delivered, & on an account stated, deft. pleaded that, before action brought, disputes had arisen between pltf. & deft. whether deft. was indebted to pltf. in any & what sum for the causes of action declared upon, which disputes they submitted themselves to refer, & did refer, to arbn., & mutually promised to fulfil the award; that the arbitrators, before action brought, took upon them the reference; that the matters in dispute were still under their consideration; & that a reasonable time had not elapsed for making the award:—Held: (1) the plea could not be considered as a plea in abatement informally pleaded; (2) as a plea in bar, it was bad, the pendency of an arbn. being no answer to an action for recovery of a debt.—HARRIS v. REYNOLDS (1845), 7 Q. B. 71; 14 L. J. Q. B. 241; 5 L. T. O. S. 53; 9 Jur. 808; 115 E. R. 414.

277. — .]—By an agreement under seal, reciting (inter alia) that pltf. had erected a factory, etc., for the purpose of carrying on the manufacture of patent fuel, etc., & that defts. had agreed to grant a lease of the land, etc., to pltf., & to enter into certain other arrangements “for the supply of coal for the manufactory,” & otherwise, on the terms therein mentioned, it was agreed (inter alia) that all the coals consumed by pltf. for the purpose of his manufacture during a certain term should be purchased of defts., & that defts. should not be compelled to supply more than 500 tons weekly. In an action against defts. for a breach of the implied contract to deliver 500 tons of coals weekly, defts. pleaded, for a defence on equitable grounds, that, before the accruing of the causes of action in the declaration mentioned, & before the passing of Copper Miners Act, 1851 (c. cv.), to wit, on Jan. 24, 1848, an action was brought by pltf. against defts. for certain alleged breaches of the contract, which action was depending at the time of the passing of that Act; that the cause & all matters in difference were referred to an arbitrator, who, by the order of Nisi Prius & a subsequent rule of ct., was empowered to make two several awards, raising by the first points of law for the opinion of the ct., & to assess damages upon the view the ct. might take, & who was also empowered “to order the determination of the contract, & the terms on which such determination should take place.” neither of the parties to enforce payment of anything which might be found by the arbitrator to be due to him or them under the award so to be first made until the arbitrator should have made & published his final award between the parties. The plea then went on to allege that the arbitrator made his first award, raising certain questions for the opinion of the ct.; that afterwards, & before the passing of the Act, the ct. ordered judgment to be entered for pltf.; that no final award was ever made by the arbitrator, & the reference was still pending; that, at & after the statement of the case by the arbitrator, & before the passing of the Act, the affairs of defts. were in a state of insolvency, & that certain creditors of defts., with their concurrence, introduced into Parliament a bill for settling their affairs, the passing of which bill was opposed by pltf.; that, whilst the bill was in committee, negotiations took place between pltf. & the promoters, which resulted in an agreement that pltf. should withdraw his opposition, that the contract between pltf. & defts. should be determined by the arbitrator, who should assess the sum to be paid by defts. as the value of the contract, that pltf. should bring no further actions against defts. upon the contract, & that a clause approved by pltf. should be introduced into the bill whereby it should be enacted that pltf. should be deemed & considered a creditor of defts. within the Act for such sum as should be assessed by the arbitrator, & that until the arbitrator should have made his final award pltf. should be deemed & considered a creditor of defts. for £2,272 2s.; that, in pursuance of the agreement, & in order to give effect to same, a clause approved of by pltf. was introduced into the bill; that defts. had always been ready & willing to give effect to the agreement, & everything had been done entitling them to the performance and fulfilment of same by pltf.; that the bill was thrown out, & that, before the commencement of the suit, a bill to a similar effect was introduced (which was afterwards passed); & that thereupon an agreement was entered into between pltf. & defts. & the other persons, with respect to the last-mentioned bill, & the contract, & the determination thereof by the arbitrator, & the assessment of the sum to be paid to pltf. as the value of the contract, & with respect to any actions being brought by pltf. upon the contract, & with respect to the clause to be inserted in the last-mentioned bill, to the like effect, as the agreement thereinbefore mentioned; & that a clause (s. 12) was inserted in the Act accordingly. The plea then went on to aver that defts. had always acted in good faith & upon the terms of the last-mentioned agreement, & had always been, & still were, ready & willing to abide by the final award of the arbitrator, & in all things to perform the agreement on their part, & that all things had been done & had happened entitling them to the performance & fulfilment of same by pltf., but that pltf. had refused to abide by the agreement, & had brought his action in violation of same; & that, after the passing of the Act, & before the commencement of the suit, the debts & claims in the Act in that behalf mentioned were duly converted into stock of the co., in pursuance of the provisions of the Act, & that pltf., as a creditor of defts. for the sum of £2,272 2s., in s. 12, applied for an allotment of stock in respect of the sum, & had same allotted to him by defts., & had had the full benefit, use, & advantage of such allotment, wherefore defts. said that in equity pltf. was barred from bringing his action:—Held: not a good equitable plea, inasmuch as it disclosed no ground upon which a ct. of equity would grant a perpetual unqualified injunction to restrain pltf. from suing upon the contract.—WOOD v. COPPER MINERS IN ENGLAND Co. (1856), 17 C. B. 561; 25 L. J. C. P. 166; 139 E. R. 1195.

278. Award after action commenced.]—Where an action has been commenced upon a contract containing a provision for reference to an arbitrator of any dispute arising under the contract, & is pending, no application to stay the action having been made under s. 4 of the Act of 1889, or such an application having been refused, an award made by the arbitrator under the provision for reference upon the subject matter of the action, subsequent to the commencement thereof, & without the consent of pltf., is invalid, & will not afford a defence to the action.

By a clause in a contract between pltf. & defts., a municipal corpn., for the execution by the former of certain sewerage works, it was provided that, in case of any dispute, doubt, or difference arising or happening, touching or concerning the works, or relating to quantities, qualities, description or manner of work done, executed, or to be done & executed by the contractors, or in any wise whatever relating to the interests of the corpn. or of the contractors, such doubts, disputes or differences should from time to time be referred to, & settled & decided by, defts.' engineer, who should be competent to enter upon the subject matter of such doubts, disputes or differences with or without formal reference or notice to the parties to the contract or either of them, & who should judge, decide, order & determine thereon. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for sums which they alleged to have become due to them from defts., under the contract, & for damages for wrongful termination of the contract by defts. Defts. did not apply for a stay of proceedings in the action under the above sect. Subsequent to the commencement of the action, defts.' engineer under the before mentioned clause, without giving notice to the parties, & without the knowledge or consent of pltf., made an award purporting to decide the matters which were the subject of the action, & defts. pleaded his award in bar to pltf.' claim in the action:—Held: it was not competent for the engineer to determine the matters in question, pending the action, & his award was no bar to pltf.' claim in the action.

The jurisdiction of the cts. is left untouched by an arbn. clause, or by the appointment of a specific arbitrator to decide the matter, or even by proceedings having been commenced under a submission (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—DOLEMAN & SONS v. OSSEY CORPN., [1912] 3 K. B. 257; 81 L. J. K. B. 1092; 107 L. T. 581; 76 J. P. 457; 10 L. G. R. 915, C. A.

279. — Disputed accounts—Arrest of ship.]—A foreign ship was driven by stress of weather into B., where W. undertook the management of the ship & her concerns, & subsequently sent in his accounts. These were disputed by the master, & an agreement was then made to refer them to arbn. The master signed the agreement on Mar. 17, 1848, W. on Mar. 5, & the ship was arrested in a cause of salvage on behalf of W. on Mar. 12:—Held: the agreement was no bar to the action.—THE PURISIMA CONCEPCION (1849), 7 Notes of Cases, 150; 13 Jur. 545.

280. — Partnership dissolution—Agreement no effect on costs.]—A deed of dissolution of partnership contained a provision for referring all disputes to arbn.:—Held: this was no bar to a suit, & the refusal of an offer to refer to arbn. was no reason for depriving pltf. of his costs.—LEES v. LAFOREST (1851), 14 Beav. 250; 51 E. R. 283.

281. — Partnership dispute.]—Articles of partnership between W. & C. provided that either partner might give written notice determining the partnership within one month of his becoming aware of a breach of the articles by the other partner, such partner giving notice having the option to purchase the share of the other as if he had died. In the event of dispute as to the presents in any matter affecting the partnership, such dispute was to be reduced to writing & submitted to arbn. C. served notice of dissolution on W., who filed a bill to have it declared void, & to restrain C. from advertising the dissolution. On the same day, C.

served W. with a notice to appoint an arbitrator. W. declined, & C. served a notice of his intention, in default, to appoint a second arbitrator. W. then moved to restrain C. from proceeding with the arbn.:—Held: nothing in the articles ousted the jurisdiction of the ct., & the arbn. must be restrained.—WITT v. CORCORAN (1871), L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 476, n.

283. — Arbitration clause in will.]—A testator by his will appointed arbitrators, & declared that if any dispute arose between his devisee it should be referred to them, & that if any devisee took proceedings at law or in equity, the estate devised to him should go over:—Held: (1) such a clause was repugnant & inconsistent with the gifts; (2) it could not oust the jurisdiction of the ct.—RHODES v. MUSWELL HILL LAND CO. (1861), 29 Beav. 560; 30 L. J. Ch. 509; 4 L. T. 229; 7 Jur. N. S. 178; 9 W. R. 472; 54 E. R. 745.

284. Agreement as to terms of separation—Court's power to settle deed.]—Pltf., wife of deft., claimed specific performance of an agreement for a separation deed entered into upon the compromise of a suit in the Divorce Ct., which was instituted by the husband against the wife for a divorce on the ground of adultery. The agreement was signed by both husband & wife, after the husband's evidence in support of his case had been heard, & before the wife's defence had been commenced, & contained (inter alia) these terms:—"Petition & answer dismissed. Deed of separation with usual covenants. In case of difference in working out these terms, matter to be referred to [the leading counsel on each side]":—Held: the agreement on the face of it being complete, the arbn. clause could only come into force in case of difference between the parties, & did not oust the jurisdiction of the ct. to settle the deed itself.—*HART v. 285. — Arbitration clause legal—Clause withdrawing question from courts invalid.]—Articles of partnership comprised an agreement to submit all disputes to arbn., & until such arbn. should have taken place, neither party was to be at liberty to sue the other with reference to the affairs of the partnership:—Held: although an arbn. clause was legal, there might not be a negative clause

282 i. — Not good as plea in bar.]—A fire policy contained an agreement to refer matters in difference to arbn., the performance of which agreement was not, according to the true construction of the policy, a condition precedent to defts.' liability. In an action on the policy defts. pleaded that a difference arose & that they were ready & willing to refer:—Held: these allegations constituted no defence to the action.—*GORMAN v. 286. Mutual insurance society rules—Decision of directors.]—By r. 39 of a mutual insurance society, incorporated in a policy, it was provided that the directors should have full power to determine all disputes arising between the society & its members concerning insurance, & that the decision of the directors should be final & conclusive, & that no member of the society should be allowed to bring any action, except as was provided, etc.; r. 84 prescribed the means by which a member dissatisfied with the decision of the directors might obtain a reconsideration of his claim. In an action on his policy, the directors having decided that pltf. had no claim:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover on the ground (inter alia) that the rules were intended to prevent the insured from maintaining any claim at all in the ordinary cts. in respect of any dispute arising on the policy, & were invalid & did not prevent pltf. from maintaining his action.—*EDWARDS v. 287. — Arbitration clause no ground for non-suit.]—Pltf. claimed damages from deft. for failing to deliver a dog bought by pltf. from deft. at a dog show. By r. 18 of the schedule of the show the Kennel Club Committee were to decide all disputes & their decision was final, & any person entering any dog for such show was deemed to have agreed with the Kennel Club Committee to refer all cases under the provisions of the Act of 1889 & any stat. modifying same. The ct. judge nonsuited pltf., holding that he must be deemed to have acquiesced in the regulations regulating the show:—Held: there was no ground for nonsuiting, as an application under the Act of 1889, s. 4, was the proper remedy.—*DICKENS v. 288. Statutory reference—Jurisdiction ousted.]—Under an agreement, legislatively confirmed, the parties were bound to settle by arbn. all differences that might arise between them as to the meaning & effect of the agreement, or as to the mode of carrying it out:—Held: the jurisdiction of the cts. was, by this agreement, excluded, & all disputes arising under it must be settled by arbn.

290 i. Provision making arbitration condition precedent is valid.—Agreements which exclude the jurisdiction of the cts. until an award is made, as in Scott v. Avery (1856), 5 H. L. C. 811, are not illegal.—CORINGA OIL Co. v. KOEGLER (1875), 1 L. R. 1 Calo. 466.—IND.

290 ii. — — — — Ascertainment of amount due on policy.—A. insured in a mutual insurance club, the rules of which contained a clause to the effect that if any difference should arise between the parties, such difference should be referred to arbn., & such arbn. was a condition precedent to the right of the insured to maintain an action. The insured insisted on prosecuting an action for his insurance, contending that the arbn. clause was illegal & void & ousted the ct. of its jurisdiction:—Held: no action could be brought until every dispute that might arise under the policy had been settled by arbn.—M.

v. GRIEVE (1888), 7 Nfld. L. R. 312.—NFLD.

290 iii. — — — —.]—It was provided in a policy that if any dispute arose touching the insurance, or any of the conditions or stipulations of the policy, "then all or any such matters in difference shall be referred, etc., etc., & this condition shall be deemed & taken to be a condition precedent to the issue of this policy." A dispute having arisen pursuer raised an action to recover the amount of the insurance:—Held: the dispute must go to arbn.

This case must be decided according to the law before the passing of Arbn. (Scotland) Act, 1894 (c. 13), but taking it on that footing it is clear, from the opinions delivered in the House of Lords in Caledonian Insurance Co. v. Gilmour, [1893] A. C. 85, that such an agreement to refer is legal. Here the agreement to refer is expressly declared to be a condition precedent to the policy being issued, that is to defenders

SECT. 9.—WHETHER SUBMISSION IS CONDITION PRECEDENT TO RIGHT TO SUE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—VALIDITY.

290. Provision making arbitration condition precedent is valid—Ascertainment of amount due on policy.—Any person may covenant that no right of action shall accrue till a third person has decided on any difference that may arise between himself & the other party to the covenant.

A. effected in a mutual insurance co. a policy of insurance on a ship, one of the conditions of which was that the sum to be paid to any insurer for loss should in the first instance be ascertained by the committee, but if a difference should arise between the insurer & the committee "relative to the settling of any loss, or to a claim for average, or any other matter relating to the insurance," the difference was to be referred to arbn. in a way pointed out in the conditions: "provided always that no insurer who refuses to accept the amount settled by the committee shall be entitled to maintain any action at law or suit in equity on his policy," until the matter has been decided by the arbitrators, & "then only for such sum as the arbitrators shall award," & the obtaining the decision of the arbitrators was declared a condition precedent to the maintaining of an action:—Held: these conditions were lawful, & (even should the difference relate to other matters than those of mere amount) till award made no action was maintainable.—

undertaking any obligation to pay under the policy, & therefore, the condition must be purified before the action can be allowed to proceed. An examination of the opinions in Scott v. Avery (1856), 5 H. L. C. 811 shows how narrow is the distinction between agreements to refer, which are held not to oust the cts. of law, & those which are held to do so. But the law is now settled that an agreement to refer to arbn. a dispute as to a term or condition of contract on which liability to pay depends, as a condition precedent to suing for payment, is legal (per Cur.).—BIDSON v. DOG, POULTRY, ETC. INSURANCE Co. (1895), 2 S. L. T. 588.—SCOT.

291. ———.]—A policy of insurance against accident contained a condition that, in case of a difference of opinion as to the amount of compensation payable in any case, the question should be referred to a person to be named by the secretary for the time being of the Master of the Rolls, & his award made in such arbn. was to be taken as a final settlement of the question & might be made a rule of ct.:—Held: a reference to arbn. in the manner prescribed was a condition precedent to bringing an action for an injury within the policy.—BRAUNSTEIN v. ACCIDENTAL DEATH INSURANCE CO. (1861), 1 B. & S. 782; 31 L. J. Q. B. 17; 5 L. T. 550; 8 Jur. N. S. 506; 121 E. R. 904.

292. ———.]—A marine policy of insurance was made in a mutual assurance assocn. (managed by a committee of members), subject to the following rule: "All average claims & claims of abandonment shall be adjusted & settled conformably to the custom of Lloyd's or the Royal Exchange by a professional average-stater, but should the committee or the assured be dissatisfied with such adjustment, they may refer same to two professional average-staters, or to two other competent persons, with power to such two persons to appoint an umpire, & the award of such three persons shall be final, & all other causes of dispute of whatever nature shall be referred in like manner, but the committee & assured, by mutual consent, may refer all such adjustments or disputes to one person only, whose award shall also be final, & no action at law shall be brought until the arbitrators have given their decision":—Held: this was a valid agreement, & the reference to arbn. or offer to refer was a condition precedent to a claim on the policy for a total loss, & an action could not be maintained on the mere refusal to pay the claim.—TREDWEN v. HOLMAN (1862), 1 H. & C. 72; 31 L. J. Ex. 398; 7 L. T. 127; 8 Jur. N. S. 1080; 10 W. R. 652; 1 Mar. L. C. 245; 158 E. R. 805.

293. Even though fraud charged.]—A policy of fire insurance contained a clause providing that, in case any difference should arise between the insured & the co. in respect of any claim for any loss or damage, such difference should be referred to arbn., & the co. should not be liable in respect of any claim for any loss or damage "unless & until the liability of the co., & the amount of its liability in respect of the claim, shall, if not admitted, have been referred to & determined by such arbitrators, whose award thereon shall be a condition precedent to any liability of the co. or any right of action against the co. in respect of such claim":—Held: (1) this condition in the policy was a good condition precedent, so that no cause of action arose, & no action could be maintained, until after the condition had been fulfilled by the liability of the co. & the amount of such liability being ascertained by the arbitrators; (2) it made no difference that a charge of fraud was made against the assured.—TRAINOR v. PHOENIX FIRE ASSURANCE CO. (1891), 65 L. T. 825; 8 T. L. R. 37.

294. Not applicable to set off.]—One of the rules of a mutual marine insurance assocn. provided that, if any difference arose between the committee & any subscriber relative to the settling of any loss or damage, or to a claim for average, or any other matter relating to his insurance, arbitrators should be appointed whose decision should be conclusive; & it was by the rule declared to be a part of the contract of insurance between the subscribers that no subscriber, who refused to accept the amount of any loss as settled by the committee in full satisfaction of such loss, should be entitled to maintain any action on his policy until the matter in dispute should have been referred to & decided by arbitrators, & then only for such sum as they might award, & the obtaining the decision of such arbitrators in the matter in dispute was thereby declared to be a condition precedent to the right of any subscriber to maintain any such action or suit. A ship insured by pltf., who was one of the subscribers of the assocn., having been lost, the committee settled the amount of such loss at £600, but they claimed to set off against this sum certain liabilities incurred in respect of losses upon other policies. This pltf. disputed their right to do, & sued deft., who was a member of the assocn., for his proportion of the £600:—Held: pltf. was entitled to maintain his action, as he had not refused to accept the amount of his loss as settled by the committee, & it was only the settlement of such amount which the rule made a condition precedent to the right to sue.—STOKOE v. HALL (1864), 3 New Rep. 566.

295 i. Waiver of condition by conduct—No request for arbitration.]—A policy not be sustainable until after an award fixing the amount, & defts. covenanted to pay the loss within sixty days after the loss had been ascertained & proved insurance society, incorporated in a policy, it was provided that the directors should have full power to determine all disputes arising between the society & its members concerning insurance, & that the decision of the directors should be final & conclusive, & that no member of the society should be allowed to bring any action, except as was provided, etc.; r. 84 prescribed the means by which a member dissatisfied with the decision of the directors might obtain a reconsideration of his claim. In an action on his policy, the directors having decided that pltf. had no claim:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover on the ground (inter alia) that, although the action could not have been maintained if the investigation had been properly concluded, yet, in the circumstances, the conduct of the directors in adjudicating against pltf.'s claim without hearing him or giving him an opportunity of being heard did not bind pltf., & the defts. could not take advantage of the wrong done by their agents by setting up the defence of condition precedent.—EDWARDS v. ABERAYRON MUTUAL in accordance with the terms of the policy. The assured furnished defts. with proof of the loss on Apr. 5, to which defts. made no objection until June 11, when they served a written request for an arbn. upon the assured, who refused to arbitrate, & pltf., to whom the claim was assigned, brought an action:—Held: even if the condition were available as a defence, it had not been broken, as in the absence of a request to arbitrate within the sixty days, the loss must be considered as "ascertained & proved," & pltf. had a right of action on the expiration of that period.—MCINTYRE v. NATIONAL INSURANCE CO. (1880), 5 A. R. 580.—CAN.

295 ii. ———.]—A policy provided that, in case of difference as to amount of loss, etc., such difference should at the request of either party be submitted to arbitrators, & that no action or suit for the recovery of any claim should be sustainable "until after an award . . . as above provided":—Held: in the absence of a request by the co. the submission to arbn. was not a condition precedent to pltf.'s right of action.—BISHOP v. NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY (1893), 25 N. S. L. R. 492.—CAN.

295 iii. ———.]—Failure to comply with conditions.—Pltfs. sued defts. on a policy, which provided that "if any difference shall arise with respect to any claim & no fraud be suspected, & the co. does not elect to replace same, such difference shall be submitted to arbitrators, & the co. shall not be liable in respect of any claim for loss or damage until the amount of its liability in respect of the claim shall, if not admitted, have been determined by arbitrators, whose award thereon shall be a condition precedent to any liability of the co. or any right of action against it in respect of such claim." Defts. without alleging that no fraud was suspected & that they did not elect to rebuild, set out the latter portion of the clause:—Held: the clause could not be divided into separate parts, but must be read together, & inasmuch as defts. had not brought themselves within its operation by alleging that no fraud was suspected, & that they did not elect to rebuild, etc., they could not rely upon the latter portion thereof as a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to sue.—RIORDAN v. GLASGOW & LONDON INSURANCE CO., LTD. (1890), 16 V. L. R. 320.—AUS.

295 iv. ———.]—Failure to plead in lower court.—An objection as to arbn. being a condition precedent to an action for damages, which has been waived or abandoned in the Ct. of Queen's Bench, cannot be invoked on an appeal to the Supreme Ct.—HAMELIN v. BANNERMAN (1901), 31 S. C. R. 534.—CAN.

296 i. Ascertainment of amount due on policy—No action maintainable till liability ascertained.—A policy provided that "if any difference shall arise in the adjustment of any claim, the amount shall . . . be submitted to arbn., etc., . . . & the assured shall not be entitled to commence or maintain any action at law . . . upon this policy until the amount of the loss shall have been determined as hereinbefore provided":—Held: an adjustment of the claim by arbn. was a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to bring an action on the policy.—BARNETT v. CITY MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE CO. (1882), 3 N. S. W. L. R. 285.—AUS.

296 iii. ———.]—A condition in a policy provided that no action should be maintainable for any claim thereunder, until after an award fixing the amount of the claim:—Held: the making of such award was a condition precedent to any right of action to recover for a loss under the policy.—GURRIN v. MANCHESTER FIRE ASSURANCE CO. (1898), 29 S. C. R. 139.—CAN.

296 iv. ———.]—In an action on a policy containing a condition that, in case any question should arise, every such difference should be referred to arbn., etc., & stipulating that the obtaining of an award should be a condition precedent to the liability or obligation of the corpn. to pay any claim under the policy, providing that compliance with the stipulations was a condition precedent to the right to recover:—Held: no action lay, nor did the amount payable under the policy become due, until the determination of the arbitrator, & the condition was not in contravention of R. S. O. (c. 203), s. 80.—NOLAN v. OCEAN ACCIDENT & GUARANTEE CORPN. (1902), 23 C. L. T. 187; 5 O. L. R. 544; 1 O. W. R. 77; 2 O. W. R. 98, 272.—CAN.

296. Ascertainment of amount due on policy—No action maintainable till liability ascertained.—In a policy of fire insurance entered into by pltf. with defts. the covenant for payment was made subject to certain articles, one of which provided that, on a loss occurring, the assured should within fifteen days send in particulars of his loss, "which loss or damage, after same shall be adjusted, shall immediately be paid in money by" defts., with an option to them to reinstate, & a proviso that "in case any difference shall arise touching any loss or damage, such difference shall be submitted" to arbitrators, "whose award in writing shall be conclusive & binding on all parties, but if there shall appear any fraud or false swearing, claimant shall forfeit all benefit of his claim." In an action brought on this policy to which defts. pleaded this article, & that pltf. had not submitted the matter claim was fraudulent, & all benefit under the policy was forfeited:—Held: an award respecting all differences under such a condition was a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action, & pltf. could not sue upon the policy.—*GAW v. l. Reference of all disputes under policy—No action till after arbitration.—In a policy it was provided that any dispute arising as to the insurance, or as to the conditions of the policy, or in connection therewith, should be referred to arbitrators & that this condition should be deemed a condition precedent to the issue of the policy:—Held: the effect of this provision was to make the reference to arbitrators a condition precedent to the co. undertaking any liability to pay under the policy.—BIDSTON v. DOG, POULTRY ETC. INSURANCE CO. (1895), 32 Sc. L. R. 516.—SCOT.

m. Provision for settling disputes by reference—No action till amount of damages ascertained.—In an agreement it was provided that all damages claimed by either party for non-compliance with the contract should be decided by arbitrators, whose award should be final. In an action for work done under the contract:—Held: it was a condition precedent to bringing the action that the amount of damages should be ascertained by arbn.—MYERS v. ST. ANDREWS RY. CO. (1863), 5 All. 577.—CAN.

n. Provision for ascertaining who liable for repairs.—Defts. had insured a vessel, sunk while being towed by pltf. for her owners. An agreement was entered into between pltf. & defts.; by which pltf. undertook to raise her for a sum named, & to submit to arbn. by whom the expenses of repairing the vessel should be borne. Defts. refused to arbitrate, & pltf. sued them for work & labour:—Held: they could not recover, as defts. had agreed only to pay in the event of the arbitrators deciding that they were liable.—*CALVIN v. To the above declaration deft. pleaded “that by the regulations annexed to the policy, it was declared that a committee ‘tenth’ should be appointed, who should meet quarterly, at the discretion of the managers, to audit the accounts, settle claims, & order payment of same by the managers’ draft, & that the managers should have full power to settle all claims on policies, & that the claim of pltf. had not been settled in manner provided, etc., nor had payment of same by the managers’ draft been ordered,” & “that by the regulations it was declared that all average claims should be adjusted by a professional average-stater, according to the usage of Lloyd’s, etc., & that the only claim of pltf. was an average claim within the regulations, & that same had never been adjusted as provided for, & pltf. had never been ready & willing to have same adjusted” :—Held: the pleas were good.—*WRIGHT v. decision shall be binding on both parties” :—Held: the ct. was not competent to determine a question of deft.’s set-off or other points raised by pleadings, which were matters to be decided by the Govt. surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to pltf.’s right to sue & upon which the ct. might give judgment.—*COVERJI LUDHA v. his tenant B. a sum as damages for coal lost through improper workings. The conclusions of the action were supported by averments that the sum sued for was due under a stipulation in the lease that in the event of damage being occasioned to the workings . . . by operations which might be carried on by B. then, B. should be bound to make payment thereof to the party suffering such damage, as same should be ascertained by arbiters :—Held: (1) the obligation to refer to the arbiters was a condition precedent to the obligation to pay damages; (2) as the landlord’s claim did not emerge until the amount by arbn. was a condition precedent to the right to recover on the policy.—VINEY v. BIGNOLD (1887), 20 Q. B. D. 172; 58 L. T. 26; 36 W. R. 479; 4 T. L. R. 128; sub nom. VINEY v. NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY, 57 L. J. Q. B. 82.

303. Provision for fixing contract price by reference to engineer—Until certificate made no enforceable right created.]—Where parties to an agreement provide for the settlement of disputes arising out of the contract by the arbn. of persons mentioned in the agreement, or to be determined when the disputes arise, this does not oust the ordinary tribunals of jurisdiction in such disputes. But where a contract provides for the determination of the contractor's claims & liabilities by the judgment of a particular person, everything depends on his decision, & until he has spoken no right arises which can be enforced either at law or in equity.

Pltfs. contracted with L. corpn. to perform certain works, & the corpn. agreed to pay for them in a specified manner, with a proviso that no sum should be considered due, nor should pltfs. make any claim on account of any work executed by them, unless the engineer of the corpn. should certify the amount thereof, & that pltfs. were reasonably entitled thereto. The corpn. also had the power of determining the contract if pltfs. should not in the opinion & according to the determination of the engineer exercise due diligence, & thereupon the engineer was to fix the amount earned by pltfs. There was a general clause for referring all disputes & differences to the final arbn. of the engineer. The contract having been determined by the corpn., pltfs. filed a bill for an account:—Held: the certificate of the engineer not having been given, & not being shown to have been fraudulently withheld, the bill must be dismissed with costs.—SCOTT v. LIVERPOOL CORPN. (1858), 3 De G. & J. 334; 28 L. J. Ch. 230; 32 L. T. O. S. 265; 5 Jur. N. S. 105; 7 W. R. 153; 44 E. R. 1297.

Provision for questions being settled by engineer—Action of damage for loss caused by delay.]—In an action by contractors for damages for losses incurred in performance of a contract, due to the delay of deft. in supplying material thereunder, deft. set up the following clause in the contract: "To prevent all disputes & litigation the engineer shall determine all questions in relation to the work & the construction thereof, & shall decide every question which may arise relative to the execution of the work, & his estimate & decision shall be a condition precedent to the commencement of any action to recover any moneys under the contract, or any damages on account of any illegal breach thereof." There was also a clause for the reference to the engineer of all differences relating (amongst other things) to extra works. In an action in respect of certain extra works:—Held: the ascertainment of the value of the extra works was a condition precedent to the right of pltfs. to sue in respect of them. Semble: in case of difference, the engineer was the person to ascertain this value under the arbn. clause (WIGHTMAN, J.).—*WESTWOOD v. 305. ———.]—The engineer of a railway co. prepared a specification of the works on a proposed railway, & certain contractors fixed prices to the several items in the specification, & offered to construct the railway for the sum total of prices affixed to the items. A contract under seal was thereupon made between the contractors & the co., by which the contractors agreed to construct & deliver the railway completed by a certain day at a sum equal to the sum total above mentioned. If the contractors failed to proceed with the works the co. might take possession & proceed with them, in which case a valuation should be made by the engineer or, if either party required it, by arbn. The contract contained provisions making the certificate of the engineer conclusive between the parties, & it was provided that all accounts relating to the contract should be submitted to & settled by the engineer, & that his certificate for the ultimate balance should be final & conclusive; it was further provided that all questions, except such as were to be determined by the engineer, were to be referred to arbn. The railway was completed, & the engineer gave his final certificate as to the balance due to the contractor. The contractors filed a bill against the co., making claims on several grounds & praying an account & payment:—Held: (1) in the absence of fraud on the part of the engineer, & where his certificate was made a condition precedent to payment, his certificate must be conclusive between the parties; (2) where a contract provided that the certificate of the engineer or of an arbitrator should be a condition precedent to payment, the ct. did not obtain jurisdiction because of the power to refer to arbn.—*SHARPE v. The contract was expressed to be in accordance with the rules & regulations of the Sugar Assocn. of London & subject to the regulations of the London Produce Clearing House, Ltd. By r. 491A of the rules of the Sugar Assocn. of London, in the event of Germany being involved in war with England the contract, unless previously closed, was to be deemed to be closed on certain terms. By r. 491B "For the purposes of the war clause a contract against which a tender has been made shall be deemed a closed contract. Should the state of war prevent shipment or warehousing &/or passing of documents, then any party to the contract shall be entitled to appeal to the council [of the Assocn.] for a decision which shall be binding on all concerned":—Held: the obtaining of an award under r. 491B was not a condition precedent to the right to sue in respect of a claim arising under a contract.—*JAGER v. L. was dismissed, as he alleged wrongfully, & sued for the retiring pension:—Held: (1) the stipulation for reference was not void as ousting the cts. of their jurisdiction; (2) the onus of proving the adequacy of the cause of dismissal was upon S., who, as a condition precedent to exercising the power of dismissal without incurring the liability for the pension, should have obtained the decision of the referee; (3) the decision not having been obtained L. could sue for the pension.—*LOWNDES v. 312. Cross claim.]—By an agreement in writing, a ship was chartered at a fixed sum per month. It was provided that, "should any difference of opinion arise between the parties to this contract, either in principle or detail, same" should be referred. The charterer claimed from the shipowner damages for an alleged breach of an implied warranty of seaworthiness, & desired to have this claim referred. The shipowner did not comply. Then the charterer commenced an action. The monthly hire having become due, the shipowner demanded it from the charterer, & on his refusal to pay, commenced an action against him. The ground of refusal was that the charterer desired to have all matters referred together, whereby he would have the benefit of a set-off. On a rule obtained by the charterer to stay proceedings in the shipowner's action:—Held: (1) though there was no dispute as to the subject-matter of the action itself, viz., the hire, which was admittedly due, the circumstances gave the ct. jurisdiction under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11; (2) the ct. being satisfied, notwithstanding the pendency of the cross-action, that the charterer had always been desirous to refer all matters, & that the application was bonâ fide, & that justice would be done by staying the action, would make the rule to stay proceedings absolute.—*RUSSELL v. 313. When not available to party seeking stay.]—In an action on a charterparty against a surety for freight, deft. was not allowed a reference

Ct. should be stayed:—Held: under Arbn. Act, s. 19, the High Ct. had power to stay proceedings in the Small Cause Ct. & the proceedings should in the circumstances be stayed.

The language of s. 19 of the Act is quite clear & it gives jurisdiction to the High Ct. to stay proceedings in any ct. subordinate to its jurisdiction. The sect. in the beginning refers to a party to a submission commencing any legal proceedings; then it goes on to refer to such legal proceedings, & then provides for staying the proceedings. Nowhere is there any indication in the sect. or the Act that the legal proceedings contemplated must be proceedings in that ct. (per CUR.)—RALLI v. NOOR MAHOMED (1906), 1 L. R. 31 Bom. 236.—IND.

316. Counterclaim.]—Pltf. brought an action for work done under a building contract, which contained a general submission to arbn. of all disputes arising out of the contract. Deft. counter-claimed for damages arising out of breaches of the contract. Subsequent to the delivery of the counterclaim pltf. took out a summons for particulars of the counterclaim, which was afterwards amended. Subsequently pltf. obtained leave to administer interrogatories to deft. Pltf. subsequently discontinued his action, & proposed to refer the whole matter to arbn., & upon deft. refusing to allow the counterclaim to be referred, took out a summons under s. 4 of the Act of 1889 to stay the proceedings on the counterclaim:—Held: the delivery of the counterclaim was "the commencement of a legal proceeding" within the sect., & the delivery of the amended counterclaim was a fresh commencement of legal proceedings.—CHAPPEL v. 317. Agreement to refer not forming part of original contract.]—If an action is brought for breach of an agreement in a deed or other instrument, which does not contain a clause to refer disputes to arbn., there is no power given by the above sect. to stay the action, though the parties may have agreed, subsequent to the breach arising, to refer the dispute.—BLYTH (BLYTHE) v. LAFONE (1859), 1 E. & E. 435; 28 L. J. Q. B. 164; 32 L. T. O. S. 255; 5 Jur. N. S. 364; 7 W. R. 189; 120 E. R. 973.

318. Mere executory memorandum — Formal document prepared but not signed.]—By a memorandum it was agreed that all matters in difference in relation to the W. Railway between A. & B. & between A. & W. Ry. Co., & also between C. & B. & between C. & the W. R. Co., whether retrospective or prospective, present or future, should be referred to an arbitrator. This memorandum was signed by B. for himself & also as agent for the co. A formal deed of reference was afterwards prepared & executed by B., but by none of the other parties:—Held: assuming the agreement to be within the above sect., at all events it was not one which the ct. ought in its discretion to enforce by staying the proceedings in an action brought by B. against A., in respect of a matter in difference included within it.—MASON v. HADDAN (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 526; 33 L. T. O. S. 163; 141 E. R. 562.

319. Letters from one party.]—Parties continued dealing under the terms of an expired agreement, which contained a clause for reference to arbn., by virtue only of a letter from one party, in which was the following expression: "This voyage to be on the same terms as the former one." The other party did not reply to the letter. On an application for a stay of proceedings under the above sect., it was objected that the Act required an instrument in writing, & there was no writing to which the other party was a party:—Held: as the parties had evidently gone on dealing on the terms of the original agreement, which contained a clause for referring disputes to arbn., the case was fairly within the Act.—HATTERSLEY v. HATTON (1862), 3 F. & F. 116.

320. Agreement to refer revoked.]—A dispute having arisen between pltf. & deft. as to the balance due to pltf. for work done for deft., they referred the matter, by an instrument in writing, to a specific arbitrator, W. No time was fixed for making the award, & there was no clause as to making the submission a rule of ct. W. proceeded in the matter at once, & held his last sitting within three months. Several months having afterwards elapsed, & no award having been made, pltf., having given notice to W. & deft. that they revoked the submission, brought an action against deft. for the alleged balance. Deft. having applied for a stay of proceedings in the action under the above sect.:—Held: (1) such an agreement of reference (although not contained in the original instrument under which the matters in dispute arose) was within the sect.; (2) in order to bring the case within the sect. there must be an existing reference capable of being carried into effect, & the submission having been validly revoked, there was no such existing reference. *Blyth v. ## PART I.—THE SUBMISSION.

321. .]—Pltf. bought a cargo of maize from defts. The contract contained a clause that if any dispute should arise, "the contract not to be void, it being agreed to leave same to be settled by two London corn-factors, whose decision should be final," & the stipulation might be made a rule of ct. Pltf., having paid £650 on account, afterwards rejected the maize, as not being of the crop & quality contracted for, & sued defts. to recover the £650. Defts. obtained an order for stay of proceedings under the above sect. :—Held : the order to stay was properly made.—MOFFAT v. CORNELIUS (1878), 39 L. T. 102, C. A.

322. .]—An arbn. clause in an agreement between pltf.s. & deft. provided that, if any dispute should arise between the parties touching that agreement, the dispute should be referred to two named arbitrators, or their umpire, the provisions of C. L. P. Act, 1854, to apply to the reference. A dispute having arisen in respect of moneys alleged to have become due & payable from deft. to pltf.s. under the agreement, deft. gave notice to proceed to arbn. Pltf.s. thereupon brought an action for the moneys & revoked their submission to the arbitrators :—Held : deft. was not entitled to have the proceedings in the action stayed under the above sect., because, after pltf.s.' revocation of the submission, there was, in respect of the particular dispute which had arisen, no subsisting agreement to refer capable of being carried into effect.—*DEUTSCHE SPRINGSTOFF ACT. v. By a supplemental deed of even date, which contained no arbn. clause, the lessor released the lessee from the observance of certain of the restrictive covenants in the lease. The assignees of the lessor having brought ejectment for alleged breaches of covenant, deft. moved for a stay of proceedings & that the matter might be referred :—Held : (1) the lease & supplemental deed must be read & construed as one instrument, &, although the alleged breaches arose under the supplemental deed, the matters in dispute came within the arbn. clause & would be left to the decision of the arbitrator.—WADE-GERY v. MORRISON (1877), 37 L. T. 270.

Agreement to refer to foreign court.]—An agreement between four British subjects for carrying on a business in partnership in Russia provided that all disputes should be referred to the St. Petersburg Commercial Ct., whose decision should be final. An action in respect of the partnership having been brought in England :—Held : (1) the agreement to refer all disputes to a foreign ct. was within the above sect. ; (2) defts. were entitled to a stay of proceedings & a reference to the St. Petersburg Commercial Ct. ; (3) any of the parties could apply as to continuing the action & generally on the result of the proceedings in the St. Petersburg Ct. being known.—*LAW v. 325. Agreement impugned—Each party to bear costs in any event.]—A fire insurance policy contained an arbn. clause, which provided that each party should bear his own costs in any event. The assured refused an offer in respect of a loss made by the co. & commenced an action, whereupon the co. moved for a stay of proceedings :—Held : (1) there was nothing at all unreasonable in the clause as to costs ; (2) there was "no sufficient reason" for not enforcing the reference to arbn., & a stay should be granted.—STEPHENS v. COMMERCIAL ASSURANCE CO. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 406.

PEARSON & SON, LTD.*, [1900] 2 Q. B. 606 ; 69 L. J. Q. B. 852 ; 83 L. T. 45 ; 48 W. R. 689, C. A.

327. Agreement by agent without authority.]—The masters of two steamships signed an agreement known as "Lloyd's salvage agreement," by clause 1 whereof they agreed to perform salvage services to another steamship for a fixed sum, & that in the event of any dispute arising as to the adequacy or otherwise of such sum, the remuneration should be fixed by the committee of Lloyd's. The owners of the salving steamers instituted salvage actions in the Admlty. Ct., whereupon defts. applied to have the actions stayed under the above sect. :—Held : in refusing to stay the actions Barnes, J. had rightly exercised the discretion given him by the sect., because there was great doubt whether the master of a vessel had authority to bind his owners to arbn.—THE CITY OF CALCUTTA (1898), 79 L. 328. Reference to named engineer or other the engineer for time being—Resignation.]—A clause in a contract for the construction of a railway was as follows : "Any disputes which may arise under this contract shall, on the completion of the work & not before, be referred to [C.], or other the engineer for the time being," of the railway co. C. began the hearing of a dispute, but resigned his post as engineer almost immediately & declined to go on. A new engineer was appointed. The contractor's solr. gave notice to the co. to concur in the appointment of an arbitrator & suggested three names. The co. replied saying that the new engineer would become the arbitrator. The contractor commenced an action for the balance due to him under the contract. On an application by the co. to stay the proceedings :—Held : (1) the clause was not applicable in the circumstances, & the new engineer was not substituted as arbitrator ; (2) by consent an order should be made referring all matters in dispute to an engineer as arbitrator.—STRACHAN v. CAMBRIAN RAILWAYS (1905), Hudson's Bldg. Contracts, 4th ed., Vol. II., p. 374.

329. Reference to foreign court.]—A policy effected on the life of a foreigner with an English co. contained a condition that the interested parties expressly agreed to submit all disputes which might arise out of the contract of insurance to the cts. having jurisdiction in such matters in Budapest:—Held: (1) this was a submission within ss. 4, 27 of the Act of 1889; (2) an action on the policy in England would be stayed.—AUSTRIAN LLOYD S.S. Co. v. GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD., [1903] 1 K. B. 249; 72 L. J. K. B. 211; 88 L. T. 6; 51 W. R. 402; 19 T. L. R. 155; 47 Sol. Jo. 222, C. A.

Pltfs., who carried on business at Leipsic, entered into a contract with deft. to engage him as their sole agent for England, Scotland, & Ireland. It was provided that disputes should be referred to the exclusive jurisdiction of the cts. at Leipsic. Deft. left pltfs.' service & entered that of a rival firm. Pltfs. thereupon commenced an action & applied for an injunction. Deft. applied for a stay of proceedings. The two applications came on together:—Held: as there was no case for an injunction, deft. was entitled to a stay of proceedings.—KIRCHNER & Co. v. GRUBAN, [1909] 1 Ch. 113; 78 L. J. 331. —.—Ten cases of gold coin were shipped at Hamburg by pltfs. on a German steamship to be carried to Montevideo or Buenos Ayres. The bill of lading on the terms of which the cases were carried gave the shipowner liberty to call at intermediate ports, & provided that any disputes as to its interpretation were "to be decided in Hamburg according to German law." The steamship called at Southampton & then went on to Montevideo, where only nine cases of gold coin were delivered. The steamship put into Southampton on her voyage back from Montevideo to Hamburg. The owners of the missing case arrested the steamship at Southampton, alleging that damage had been done to goods carried into a port in England by breach of duty or contract on the part of the owner, master, or crew of the steamship. There was no evidence as to where the case was lost. The owner of the ship, having entered an appearance under protest, took out a summons asking (inter alia) that the action should be stayed under the above sect.:—Held: the action should be stayed, as the clause in the bill of lading that disputes as to its interpretation were to be decided in Hamburg was a submission to arbn. within the sect.—THE CAP BLANCO, [1913] P. 130; 83 L. c. Arbitration clause in policy.]—By a condition indorsed on a policy of insurance the co. reserved the power of having the loss or damage submitted to arbitrators. An action having been brought on the policy, an application was made under C. L. P. Act, s. 167, to stay proceedings:—Held: the agreement between the parties was not void for want of mutuality, & the case came within scope of the stat., & proceedings must be stayed.—MCINNES v. e. Arbitration clause in English form.]—A firm in Glasgow agreed to erect for a London co. certain plant in Wales. The contract was executed in England, & contained an arbn. clause in English form providing (inter alia) for the appointment of an arbiter under the English Act of 1889. In an action at the instance of the Glasgow firm against the co., who had rejected the plant:—Held: the action must be sisted in hoc statu in order that the matters in dispute might be settled by arbn. in terms of the contract.—HOWDEN & Co., LTD. v. damages:—Held: the condition was not itself a submission within Arbn. Act, 1890, & the employer was, therefore, not entitled to an order under s. 6 of that Act staying proceedings.—CARMICHAEL v. JOHNSTON (1899), 17 N. Z. L. R. 565.—N.Z.

g. Submission extended informally so as to amount to new parol submission.]—A submission to arbn. was under seal, & bound the parties to abide by the award so as it was made on or before Oct. 30, 1904, or any subsequent day to which the arbitrators should in writing extend the time. The arbitrators continued the arbn., with the assent of the parties, for nearly two years, but did not by writing extend the time. Pltff. brought an action in respect of the matters referred, the arbn. being still uncompleted:—Held: (1) the assent of the parties to the arbn. being proceeded with after the time had expired was equivalent to a parol submission only; (2) Arbn. Act, s. 6, applied to submissions in writing only, & therefore, the arbn. proceedings afforded no answer.—RYAN v. PATRIARCHE (1906), 8 O. W. R. 811; 13 O. L. R. 94.—CAN.

Before anything was done under the reference F. & S. became bkpts., & the assignees brought a fresh action against W. for the price of the timber. Upon a motion under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, to stay the proceedings in the last-mentioned action:—Held: it was not a case in which the ct. would interfere, assuming they had the power so to do. Semble: (1) the above sect. did not apply to such a case; (2) the assignees were not “persons claiming through or under” bkpt. within the sect.—PENNELL v. WALKER (1856), 18 C. B. 651; 26 L. J. C. P. 9; 27 L. T. O. S. 237; 139 E. R. 1525.

336. — Mortgagees.]—A partnership deed between three partners contained a power for any two partners by notice to determine the partnership so far as the third partner was concerned, if he did not keep up his capital. It also contained a clause providing for arbn. in the usual way, “if any difference shall arise between the partners or between one or more of them & the exors. or administrators of the others or other of them or between their respective exors. or administrators.” Two of the partners had given notice to the third, & it was admitted that the partnership had been determined so far as he was concerned. Before this determination the outgoing partner had mtged. his share. Questions had arisen as to the right of the continuing partners to purchase the outgoing partner’s share, & the amount of his interest in the goodwill, which depended on the construction of the partnership deed. The continuing partners gave notice to the outgoing partner that they had appointed an arbitrator & requiring him to do the same. He did this, & the arbitrators agreed on an umpire, but nothing more was done in the arbn. The mtgees. brought an action against all three partners for an account of the outgoing partner’s share from the date of dissolution. The continuing partners moved for a stay of proceedings under s. 4 of the Act of 1889:—Held: (1) the right of the mtgees. to an account was an independent right, given by Partnership Act, 1890 (c. 39), & not depending upon the partnership deed; (2) the arbn. clause not including in terms persons claiming under the partners, the mtgees. were not bound by the clause & would not be bound by any account taken in the arbn., & their action for an account could not be stayed.—BONNIN v. NEAME, [1910] 1 Ch. 732; 79 L. J. Ch. 388; 102 L. T. 708.

SUB-SECT. 5.—POWERS OF THE COURT.

337. Agreement to refer not to be lightly set aside.]—An agreement to refer is not to be lightly set aside even in equity, where there is machinery to adjust accounts which does not exist at common law. But if fraud is alleged that is a different matter.

Pltf. & deft., on dissolving partnership in 1866, agreed to refer matters in dispute to arbn. Arbitrators were appointed in 1869, who held their first meeting in May, 1870. Pltf.’s arbitrator shortly afterwards died, & pltf. refused to appoint another, but filed his bill to have the partnership wound up in Ch. The time for making the award had been enlarged to Mar. 25, 1872. On motion by deft. to stay proceedings:—Held: proceedings should be stayed till further order, with liberty to both parties to apply if no award were made before Mar. 25, 1872.—KITCHEN v. TURNBULL (1871), 20 W. R. 253, L.C. & L.JJ.

338. Primâ facie duty to act on agreement to refer.]—Where parties have chosen to determine for themselves that they will have a domestic forum instead of resorting to the ordinary cts., then since C. L. P. Act, 1854, a primâ facie duty is cast upon the cts. to act upon the agreement.—WILLESFORD v. WATSON (1873), 8 Ch. App. 473; 42 L. J. Ch. 447; 28 L. T. 428; 37 J. P. 548; 21 W. 339. Onus on plaintiff.]—By Railway Passengers Assurance Co.’s Act, 1864, it was provided (s. 3) that any question arising under any policy should, if either the co. or the assured or the representatives of the assured required it, be referred to arbn. under the Act, & (s. 33) that if a policy-holder or his representatives commenced any action, a judge might, on the application of the co., “upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why the matter cannot be or ought not to be referred to arbn.,” stay the proceedings in the action. The co. disputed their liability on a policy, & an action was commenced by the representatives of the policy-holder to recover the sum assured. The co. obtained an order to stay proceedings in the action in order that the dispute might be referred to

PART I. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 4.

334 i. Application for stay of action brought by—Assignees in bankruptcy.]—By a contract it was agreed that all matters in dispute should be settled by arbn. C. became insolvent, & a suit was brought by the assignee. Upon the application of defts. under C. L. P. Act (C. S. U. C., c. 22), s. 167, an order was granted staying all proceedings in the suit.—JOHNSON v. MONTREAL & OTTAWA Ry. Co. (1875), 6 P. R. 230.—CAN.

334 ii. — Insured.]—By a policy of insurance, the co. reserved to itself the power of having the loss or damage submitted to arbitrators. An action having been brought on the policy, & an application made under C. L. P. Act, s. 167, to stay proceedings:—Held: pltf. was a party within that sect.—MCINNES v. WESTERN ASSURANCE CO. (1870), 5 P. R. 242; 30 U. C. R. 580.—CAN.

h. The Crown.]—There was a clause in a policy providing for submission to arbn. to ascertain the amounts to be paid thereunder, & that such submission was to be a condition precedent to any action. An application was made by the co. to stay proceedings. On appeal:—Held: there was no power to stay proceedings against the Crown under Arbn. Act, 1895, s. 6.—THE CROWN v. THE COLONIAL MUTUAL INSURANCE CO. (1903), 5 W. A. R. 46.—AUS.

PART I. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 5.

339 i. Onus on plaintiff.]—Where parties to a contract have bound themselves to refer all matters in dispute thereunder, the jurisdiction of the ct. to stay depends upon there being no sufficient reason for not referring.—

arbn., & pltf. appealed:—Held: the burden lay on pltf. to show that some sufficient reason existed why the dispute should not be referred to arbn., & not on the co. to show that no such reason existed, & as no such reason had been shown the order to stay proceedings was right.—HODGSON v. RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE Co. (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 188, C. A.

340. —.]—The ct. made an order under s. 4 of the Act of 1889, staying all further proceedings in an action for an account to recover commissions retained by an underwriter, upon the ground that members of Lloyd's were the most convenient tribunal to decide the fact whether the alleged custom to take commissions at Lloyd's existed.

341. Under Railway Passengers Assurance Company's Act, 1864, s. 16.]—The above Act provided (s. 16) that, if there was any question or difference as to the liability of the co., it should, if either the co. or the persons claiming required it, & as a condition precedent to the enforcing of any claim to which the question or difference related, be referred to arbn. By s. 33 it was provided that, if any policy-holder or his representatives began any action against the co. in respect of the matters to be referred to arbn. under the Act, the ct. or a judge, on application by the co., after appearance, "upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why the matters cannot be or ought not to be referred to arbn., & that the co. were, at the time of the bringing of the action or suit, & still are ready & willing to concur in all acts necessary & proper for causing the matters to be decided by arbn.," might make an order staying all proceedings in the action or suit. The representatives of a policy-holder in the co. made a claim against the co. The co. disputed it, but did not give notice that they required the question to be referred to arbn. Claimants then brought an action, whereupon the co. took out a summons to stay proceedings in the action:—Held: it was a question of discretion in each case whether the action ought or ought not to be stayed.—*FOX v. 342. Question better decided in High Court.]—Pltf. & deft., who were surgeons, agreed to carry on business together in partnership. By the articles of partnership it was provided that all salaries, remunerations, or other profits, & "all pecuniary presents & gratuities from patients, & all other professional emoluments whatever, which may be received by the partners, or either of them," should be treated as profits of the business, & accounted for accordingly, & that all differences with regard to the construction of the articles of partnership should be referred to arbn. In Nov., 1888, a patient who had been attended by pltf. died, having by her will dated in July, 1887, appointed him exor., & leaving him a legacy of £100 & the residue of her personal estate. Deft. claimed half of such legacies as pecuniary presents, & desired to refer the question arising thereon to arbn., & appointed an arbitrator. Pltf. thereupon issued a writ asking to have the matter determined by the High Ct. Deft. then moved to stay proceedings in the action:—Held: (1) the two questions whether testatrix was a patient, & whether the legacies were pecuniary presents or gratuities, were questions which would be better decided by the High Ct., although they were clearly within the agreement to refer disputes to arbn.; (2) prima facie it was the duty of the ct. to stay the action, but the ct. had a discretion, & in the exercise of that discretion it would decline to stay the proceedings.—LYON v. JOHNSON (1889), 40 Ch. D. 579; 58 L. J. Ch. 626; 60 L. T. 223; 37 W. R. 427.

343. —.]—Before the outbreak of war between England & Germany pltf. contracted to buy from defts. a quantity of sugar, which was in Hamburg & which was to be shipped by defts. The contracts provided that in the event of Germany being involved in war with England, they should be deemed to be closed, & that if war should prevent shipment, any party should be entitled to go to arbn. Owing to the outbreak of war defts. were unable to ship the sugar, & pltf. brought an action against defts., claiming a declaration that the contracts were suspended or dissolved & an injunction restraining defts. from proceeding

339 ii. —.]—A contract contained an arbn. clause. Pltf. alleged that they had acted in accordance with the contract, & sued for the amount payable under it. Before pleading, defts. moved, under Arbn. Act, 1911, s. 6, for a stay of proceedings, pending a reference, as provided for in the contract. Pltf. relied on the allegations in their statement of claim, but filed no affidavits to show that anything not arising directly under the contract would have to be considered, or that the city engineer might have to be a witness, or that anything he might have to say, or even that any views he might have formed, would be contradicted by testimony of any kind, or that he should, for any cause, be considered disqualified to act as an arbitrator:—Held: the proceedings should be stayed as asked for by defts. If there was any reason why the matters should not be referred to arbn., it was the duty of pltf. to bring it forward & present it to the judge.—NORTHERN ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING Co. v. WINNIPEG (1913), 24 W. L. R. 547; 4 W. W. R. 221; 10 D. L. R. 489.—CAN.

k. Onus on defendant.]—Jurisdiction under C. L. P. Act, 1865 (No. 274), s. 266, to stay proceedings where there has been an agreement to refer is discretionary; before exercising it the ct. must be satisfied (1) that no sufficient reason exists why the matters in dispute should not be referred, & (2) that deft. is willing to concur in all acts necessary for the arbn. The burden of satisfying the ct. upon these points rests upon deft.—THOMSON v. TASMANIAN FIRE INSURANCE Co. (1885), 11 V. L. R. 54.—AUS.

DENHOLM* (1859), 18 U. C. R. 203, 214.—CAN.

n. Where arbitration would involve indefinite delay.]—In Mar., 1914, pltf. had contracted with the agents in Hong Kong of the Norddeutscher Lloyd for a return passage to England. On payment of the fare he received a passage ticket to England, & also an order for a return passage. He was unable to procure a return passage from the co., owing to the outbreak of war, & eventually returned by another line, & sued defts. as liquidators of the co. under the Alien Enemies (Winding Up) Ordinance, 1914, for damages for breach of contract. Defts. took out a summons under s. 541 of the Code for a stay of proceedings, on the ground that the matter in dispute should be submitted to arbn., under a clause in the conditions on the ticket as follows: "This contract should be construed & the rights of the parties thereunder determined in Bremen according to the laws of Germany":—Held: the indefinite delay, owing to the existence of the war, which would attend any attempt to arbitrate was in itself sufficient reason for the ct. declining to grant stay.—BESWICK v. LOWE, BINGHAM & MATTHEWS (1916), 11 Hong Kong L. R. 97.—HONG KONG.

with arbn. On an application by defts. for an order that the action be stayed under s. 4 of the Act of 1889, the judge refused to make the order:—Held: as the question between the parties was whether the contracts were alive or dead, it was in the judge's discretion to say that it was not a proper question to be submitted to arbn.—GREY & Co. v. TOLME & RUNGE (1914), 31 T. L. R. 137; 59 Sol. Jo. 218, C. A.

344. Act of 1889, s. 4, permissive only.]—A contractor brought an action to recover the price of certain works constructed for a local authority under a contract, which provided for the reference of disputes thereunder to the engineer of the local authority, &, in answer to a summons to stay proceedings under the above sect., challenged the conduct of the engineer in relation to the works, the question in dispute being whether the engineer had not precluded himself by his own admissions from asserting that the works had not been completed to his satisfaction & that the period of maintenance had not expired:—Held: the ct., in the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon it by the above Act, would refuse to order the action to be stayed, because the above sect. was permissive only, & though the evidence failed to show that the engineer had unfitted himself to act as arbitrator, yet the fact that one judge of the Ct. of Appeal was not "satisfied that there was no sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred" was a ground upon which another judge of co-ordinate jurisdiction could concur in the view that an absence of a sufficient reason was not shown.—FREEMAN & SONS v. CHESTER RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1911] 1 K. B. 783; 80 L. J. K. B. 695; 104 L. T. 368; 75 J. P. 132, C. A.

345. Court will not overrule discretion.]—When a judge under s. 4 of the Act of 1889 has refused to stay proceedings in an action & has exercised his discretion judicially, his decision will not be overruled.

On an application to stay an action on a policy of insurance the judge refused an order on the grounds (1) the clause as to costs was unfair & oppressive, as pltf. had to pay half the costs in any event; (2) the case raised difficult questions of law:—Held: the first ground was not good, as pltf. had agreed to the terms of the policy & was not asking for a rectification, but the second ground was good & the ct. would not overrule the discretion of the county ct. judge.—CLOUGH v. COUNTY LIVE STOCK INSURANCE ASSOCN., LTD. (1916), 85 L. J. K. B. 1185; 32 T. L. R. 526; 60 Sol. Jo. 642; W. C. & Ins. Rep. 373.

346. Power of court on application—Appointment of receiver—Liberty to apply.]—An agreement, having reference to a ship, which S. & Co. had undertaken to build for a co., contained a clause providing that all matters in dispute should be settled by arbn. The co. alleged that the ship was not properly constructed in accordance with the agreement, it having been, in fact, refused any classification at Lloyd's. They commenced an action against S. & Co. & W. & Co., who were assignees of S. & Co., claiming a lien upon the ship for sums which they had paid, repayment of such sums, the appointment of a receiver, & an injunction. A motion was made on behalf of S. & Co. & W. & Co. that all proceedings in the action might be stayed, & the matters in dispute referred to arbn. There was a counter-motion of the co. for a receiver, & they contended that, as it was necessary to appoint a receiver, no order could be made on the other motion:—Held: the ct. had power to appoint a receiver & to send all the rest of the action to be determined by arbn., & to stay all further proceedings, except for the purpose of carrying out the order for a receiver, with general liberty to apply, so as to enable the parties to make any necessary application pending the arbn.—*COMPAGNIE DU SENEGAL ET DE LA CÔTE OCCIDENTALE D'AFRIQUE v. 347. Form of order—Liberty to apply.]—A stay of proceedings in order to send the matter to arbn. should, in a suitable case, reserve liberty to apply, & then if the arbitrator consider that something is being done which ought not to be done, an injunction can be granted.—BRIGHTON MARINE PALACE & PIER, LTD. v. WOODHOUSE, [1893] 2 Ch. 486; 62 L. J. Ch. 697; 68 L. T. 669; 41 W. R. 488; 37 Sol. Jo. 424; 3 R. 565.

348. — Costs — Receiver.]—By articles of partnership between pltf. & defts. it was provided that "all matters in difference in relation to the partnership affairs" should be referred to arbn. Disputes arose between the partners of such a character as to render the continuance of the partnership difficult, & an action was brought for the dissolution of the partnership. Defts. moved for a stay of proceedings & reference to arbn., & pltf. moved for the appointment of a receiver:—Held: (1) an order should be made for a stay of proceedings till further order, the costs of the application to be costs in the action, & the costs of the action to be in the discretion of, & dealt with by, the arbitrators, in the form in Vawdrey v. Simpson, No. 386, post; (2) the order would be expressed to be without prejudice to the motion for a receiver.—MACHIN v. BENNETT, [1900] W. N. 146.

349. Power to appoint receiver & stay.]—Articles of partnership provided that all difficulties that might arise between the partners or their representatives during the partnership or at its dissolution should be settled by arbn. Pltf. brought an action for dissolution, & moved for the appointment of a receiver & manager. Deft. moved for an order under s. 4 of the Act of 1889, staying all proceedings in the action, on the ground that the parties had agreed to refer all matters in dispute to arbn.:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, & could by the same order, with a view to a reference to arbn., stay all proceedings in the action except for the purpose of carrying out the order for a receiver.—PINI v.

345 i. Court will not overrule discretion.]—The ct. will not interfere with the discretion of the ct. of first instance in refusing to grant an order under C. L. P. (Ir.) Act, 1856, s. 14, staying proceedings in an action against an insurance co., on the ground that the matter should by an arbn. clause in the policy be referred & an award obtained as a condition precedent to liability, Act, 1854, & be subject to the provisions as to arbn. contained in the Act. In an action for a declaration that the partnership should be dissolved, for accounts, for a receiver & manager, for damages & for an injunction, pltf. moved for the appointment of a receiver & an injunction, & deft. moved for a stay of proceedings under the arbn. clause:—Held: (1) by consent, there would be judgment for a dissolution, with the usual reference to chambers for the appointment of a receiver & manager pending the winding-up; (2) an injunction should be granted & a stay ordered, so far as was necessary, of all proceedings in the action, so that all matters might be referred to arbn., with liberty to apply upon the completion of the arbn., the costs of the motions to be costs in the action & all to be reserved.—*HALSEY v. Pltf. moved for the appointment of a receiver & manager & for an injunction. Deft. had a cross-motion for a stay of the action pending a reference to arbn. The case alleged against deft. was that he had absented himself from the business & had generally misconducted himself as partner:—Held: (1) a receiver should be appointed; (2) a stay of proceedings should be refused, as it was not a convenient course in the present case that a receiver should be appointed & a reference to arbn. ordered at the same time.—JACK v. BELL (1892), 36 Sol. Jo. 760.

352. Provision for costs—Power to add.—An order was made at chambers under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, staying proceedings in an action brought on a contract containing an agreement to refer disputes arising thereunder. The order made no provision as to the costs of the action. The matter in dispute being afterwards referred to arbn., an award was made in favour of pltf.:—Held: there was jurisdiction under the above sect., after the award had been made, to make an order varying the terms of the original order by directing that deft. should pay the costs of the action.—BUSTROS v. LENDERS (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 259; 40 L. J. C. P. 193; 24 L. T. 472; 19 W. R. 757.

A. No Defence to Action.

353. Where party applying admits he has no defence to action.—By a charterparty, it was agreed that the charterers should insure the vessel, & that the policies should be delivered to & be the property of the owners; & the charterparty contained a stipulation that "any question or difficulty which might thereafter arise out of that charterparty should be decided by arbn.," in a manner pointed out. An action having been brought by the owners against the charterers for refusing to deliver them the policies, against which action it was admitted that there was no defence:—Held: not a case for the application of the C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11.—LURY v. PEARSON (1857), 1 C. B. N. S. 639; 140 E. R. 263.

B. Allegations of Fraud.

354. Discretion—Sale of goods—Bonâ fide allegation.—By a contract for the sale of a cargo of linseed cake (paid for on receipt of the shipping documents), it was provided that any dispute as to quality, or as regards any question arising out of the contract, should be settled by arbn. in the usual manner, & that the contract should not be void on that account. An action having been brought by the buyers to recover back the money paid, on the ground that the cargo was not of the description represented, but a mere spurious imitation of linseed cake, it was doubted whether the case was one in which the ct. had power to stay the proceedings under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, with a view to compel a reference:—Held: there being a bonâ fide suggestion of fraud, the case was not one in which the ct. would in the exercise of their discretion enforce the reference.—WALLIS v. HIRSCH (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 316; 26 L. J. C. P. 72; 28 L. T. O. S. 159; 140 E. R. 131.

355. — Charge made by applicant for stay.—Partnership articles between A. & B. provided that, if the business should not be conducted to the satisfaction of B., he should have power to give notice to A. to determine the partnership; the articles also contained an arbn. clause providing that any differences in relation to the partnership should be referred to arbn. B. having given notice to A. for the partnership to be determined, A. brought an action against B. alleging various charges of fraud, & claiming that the notice should be declared void, & that B. should be restrained from announcing the dissolution of the partnership, whereupon B. moved that the matters in question should be referred to arbn.:—Held: A. having failed to establish a primâ facie case of fraud, the matters in question should be referred to arbn. according to the articles.

In a case where fraud is charged, the ct. will in general refuse to send the dispute to arbn. if the party charged with the fraud desires a public inquiry. But where the objection to arbn. is by the party charging the fraud, the ct. will not necessarily accede to it, & will never do so unless a primâ facie case of fraud is proved.—*RUSSELL v. —Partnership articles provided that any might be expelled for breach of certain acts therein specified, & that, if any question should arise whether a case had happened to authorise the exercise of this power, such question should be referred to arbn. Defts. served a notice on pltf. to determine the partnership on the ground that he had committed a breach within the expulsion clause, but gave no details of the particular act complained of. Pltf. thereupon brought an action to restrain defts. from acting on this notice, & defts. moved to stay proceedings & refer all matters in dispute to arbn.:—Held: (1) the preliminary question, whether or not the notice of expulsion was valid, was one more suitable for decision by the ct. than by an arbitrator; (2) as there was a suggestion of a fraudulent exercise of the power of expulsion, the ct., in the exercise of its discretion, ought not to stay proceedings & enforce a reference.—*BARNES v. 357. — Allegations must be relevant & material.—Where the parties to a deed or instrument in writing agree to refer differences to arbn., & one of them brings an action against the other, the ct. will stay proceedings in the action & will not allow the action to proceed upon a mere suggestion of fraud against deft., but will require it to appear that pltf. means to rely upon some matter of fraud relevant & material to the issue.—HIRSCH v. IM THURN (THURN) (1858), 4 C. B. N. S. 569; 27 L. J. C. P. 254; 31 L. T. O. S. 201; 4 Jur. N. S. 587; 6 W. R. 605; 140 E. R. 1214.

358. ——Pltf. entered into a written contract with defts. for the purchase of a cargo of wheat. The contract contained a clause, "should any dispute arise, the contract not to be void, it being agreed by buyers & sellers to leave same to be settled by two London corn factors, respectively chosen with power to call an umpire, whose decision is to be final." Pltf. brought an action to recover his deposit on the ground of misdescription of the subject-matter of the contract, & applied to set aside the nomination of an arbitrator by defts. Some imputations of fraud in pltf.'s conduct were made by defts., but were denied by pltf.:—Held: the words of the contract were large enough to make these matters of difference, the settlement of which should be enforced by arbn. under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11.

The existence of a claim for relief in equity is a strong reason for sending a case to arbitrators, since they form a ct. of equity for the determination of all matters in difference, as well as a ct. of law for the interpretation & settlement of the contract.—ALEXANDER v. MENDEL (1870), 22 L. T. 609.

359. ——A policy of life insurance contained a condition to the effect that all disputes should, if the co., or the assured, or his legal representatives required it, be referred to arbn. in the manner specified in Railway Passengers Assurance Co.'s difference between the partners should be forthwith referred. Pltf. brought an action for dissolution of the partnership, alleging that deft. had misappropriated partnership moneys, & otherwise acted contrary to the partnership articles:—Held: a stay must be refused.—LATIMER v. DUMICAN (1910), 1 L. T. 150.—IR.

c. — Fire loss — Wilfully generated claim.—A policy was conditioned that the assured should furnish an account of the loss, & should, if required, prove the account, that, if any difference should arise, same should be submitted to arbn., & that, if a fraudulent claim were made, the policy should be void. Goods having been burned, the assured informed the assurers of the fire, & furnished his estimate of loss, but was not required to prove same. The premises were examined on behalf of the assurers twenty-three days after the fire. An action was threatened & further correspondence took place. After writ issued defts. offered a sum less than that claimed, & for the first time suggested arbn. Defts. having applied that the proceedings be stayed under C. L. P. Amendment Act (Ireland), 1856, s. 14:—Held: the motion should not be granted. If it were intended by appots. to raise a question of fraud by reason of a wilfully exaggerated claim, the action

In an action on the policy, in which it appeared that the only issue to be tried was whether the death of M. was caused by accident or by natural causes:—Held: defts., in the absence of any suggestion of fraud, were entitled to a stay of proceedings under s. 33, notwithstanding the fact that the issue & the evidence in support of it might bear upon the conduct of M. & of those who attended him, & so might involve a question similar to that of fraud or no fraud.—*MINIFIE v. 360. Clerk of one party.—A contractor brought an action on an agreement between a local board & himself which contained a clause that any dispute between them should be referred to the decision of the clerk of the board. The board applied for a stay of proceedings. The judge at chambers declined to stay proceedings, on the ground that the fact that the reference was to the clerk of one of the parties was a "sufficient cause" against a reference:—Held: a reference ought to take place, though not to the clerk, & the case must stand over until the parties could agree as to a referee or again applied to the ct.—PICKTHALL v. MERTHYR TYDVIL LOCAL BOARD (1886), 2 T. L. R. 805.

361. Surveyor of one party.—Contracts with the Manchester Corp'n. contained clauses referring disputes to the city surveyor, who had general charge of the work. The contractor brought an action for sums alleged to be due under the contracts & for extras, & the determination of the claims raised questions as to the correctness of the surveyor's directions. On an application by the corp'n. for a stay of the action:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the surveyor's professional capacity was to some extent at stake, & the temptation to decide in support of his own view would be great, he must be treated as an unsuitable person to decide the matter; (2) this was a sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred; (3) a stay should be refused.—*NUTTALL v. 362. Servant of one party.]—The rule which applies to a judge or other person holding judicial office, namely, that he ought not to hear cases in which he might be suspected of a bias in favour of one of the parties, does not apply to an arbitrator, named in a contract, to whom both the parties have agreed to refer disputes which may arise between them under it. In order to justify the ct. in saying that such an arbitrator is disqualified from acting, circumstances must be shown to exist which establish at least a probability that he will in fact be biassed in favour of one of the parties in giving his decision.

Where, however, in a contract for the execution of works, the arbitrator selected by the parties is the servant of one of them, he is not disqualified by the mere fact that under the terms of the submission he may have to decide disputes involving the question whether he has himself acted with due skill & competence in advising his employers in respect of the carrying out of the contract.—*ECKERSLEY v. The engineer wrote to plffs. saying their claims were outrageous, & plffs. alleged that he had incapacitated himself from acting as arbitrator by reason of bias, & brought an action:—Held: (1) there was no reason why the agreed arbitrator should not adjudicate in a fair manner between the parties merely because he had given the opinion above stated; (2) the action must be stayed.—*CROSS v. 1889, s. 4, why the matter should not be referred to him; but it is not sufficient that the arbitrator is the engineer of one party, since the contractor has made it a part of his contract that he shall not have an impartial arbitrator.—*BLACKWELL (R. 366. —.]—Plffs., contractors, sued defts. for large sums alleged to be due to them under a contract for the construction of sewers. The contract contained an arbn. clause in the widest possible terms, referring all disputes under the contract to the engineer. Defts. alleged that the works had not been completed to the satisfaction of the engineer, & he had not given a certificate to that effect as provided by the contract, & that they had called on plffs. to make good certain work which was defective. Plffs. alleged that the works were constructed under the supervision of the engineer, & had been passed by him as satisfactory, that in certain correspondence he had admitted that the period of maintenance had expired, & that he had expressed a concluded opinion that the work as to which the dispute arose was defective. The engineer denied these allegations. On a summons by defts. to stay the proceedings:—Held: the action ought to be allowed to proceed because, since the conduct of the engineer was challenged in the action, his cross-examination was essential to the determination of the question between the parties.—FREEMAN & SONS v. CHESTER RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1911] 1 K. B. 783; 80 L. J. K. B. 695; 104 L. T. 368; 75 J. P. 132, C. A.

The contract contained an agreement to refer to arbitrators "any question or dispute arising as to the meaning or carrying out of these presents." T. having determined his agency, D. appointed T.'s arbitrator to the vacancy with T.'s knowledge & assent. T. instituted proceedings to recover certain sums due on commission & for money paid. On motion by D. to stay proceedings & to compel T. to have resort to the arbitrators:—Held: in the altered relations of T.'s arbitrator to D., it would be inequitable to suspend T.'s right of action or to compel him to have resort to the referees named.—*THOMPSON v. 371. —.]—The exors. of A., a deceased partner, sued the surviving partners & the exors. of B., a partner who had survived A. but died afterwards, to recover payment of A.’s share in the partnership assets, according to the partnership deed. The deed contained an agreement to refer all disputes to arbn. A statement of claim had been delivered, but before delivering their defence defts., the exors. of B., took out a summons to stay proceedings in the action, pursuant to C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, on the ground of the agreement to refer to arbn. The only question was one of law as to the construction of the partnership deed:—Held: (1) under the Act of 1889, s. 4, the ct. had a discretion whether to stay proceedings or not, & it would not exercise that discretion by staying proceedings in a case where the only question was one of law which, if sent to the arbitrator, ought to be referred back by him to the ct. under s. 19 of the Act; (2) the summons should stand over until appets. had put in their statement of defence, in order that any party might then apply to have the question of law decided.—*Re CARLISLE, CLEGG v. 372. Questions of law depending on numerous facts.]—Pltf. ordered certain machinery from defts. under a contract which contained an arbn. clause, neither side to appear before the arbitrator by solr. or counsel. Pltf. brought an action (inter alia) for damages for negligence & breach of contract & for trespass in setting up & testing the machinery. Defts. moved to stay the proceedings:—Held: (1) since the decision of the points of law involved depended on numerous facts, the matter should go to the arbitrator, who, if necessary, could state the facts in a special case; (2) the action should be stayed as to the contract, but should go on as to the claim in trespass.—ROWE BROTHERS & CO., LTD. v. CROSSLEY BROTHERS, LTD. (1912), 108 L. T. 11; 57 Sol. Jo. 144, C. A.

373. Questions of law inter alia.]—A life insurance policy provided that it should not cover death by war, & the policy contained an arbn. clause. The assured lost his life by an explosion which caused the loss of a battleship, & his extrix. brought an action on the policy against the insurance co. Defts. applied to have the action stayed. Pltf. contended that as serious questions of law were involved, the case ought not to be sent to arbn.:—Held: the ct. was not justified in refusing the application merely because there were important questions of law to be considered, & as no sufficient reason had been shown why the contract to submit to arbn. should not be observed, the action must be stayed.—*LOCK v. This memorandum was signed by B. for himself, & also as agent for the co. A formal deed of reference was afterwards prepared & executed by B., but by none of the other parties:—Held: assuming the agreement to be within C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, at all events it was not one which the ct. ought in its discretion to enforce by staying the proceedings in an action brought by B. against A., in respect of a matter in difference included within it.—*MASON v. 376. Matters in dispute not within submission.]—Articles of partnership between pltf. & other persons for performing a contract contained an agreement that any dispute between the partners should be settled by arbn., but there was no agreement that the submission to arbn. might be made a rule of ct. One of the partners became a liquidating debtor & deft. was appointed his trustee, & he elected to carry on the contract. Deft. claimed to have purchased the shares of pltf. & other partners in the undertaking. Pltf. brought an action against deft. asking for an account of the partnership dealings. The main questions at issue were whether the shares of the other partners were purchased on behalf of pltf. & deft. or of deft. alone, & whether deft. had purchased the share of pltf.

After the work had been commenced he sought a rescission of the contract & brought an action claiming (inter alia) a declaration that the contract was void. Defts. took out a summons to stay the action on the ground that "any question, dispute, or difference" was to be settled by arbn.:—Held: the issue raised by the action being with reference to a matter wholly outside the powers of the arbitrator to deal with was not within the submission to arbn. in the contract, & pltf. was entitled to proceed to trial to have that issue decided by the ct.—*MONRO (MUNRO) v. 383. Matter within scope of arbitration.]—A mining lease contained a clause providing that if any dispute, question or difference should arise between the parties, "touching these presents, or any clause, matter or thing herein contained, or the construction hereof, or the working of the mines, or any compensation or satisfaction to be paid or made, or any other thing to be done under the covenants by the lessees herein contained, or touching the rights, duties & liabilities of either party in connection with the premises," the matter in difference should be referred to two arbitrators, or their umpire, pursuant to, & so as in all respects to conform to the provisions in that behalf contained in C. L. P. Act, 1854. The lessors having filed a bill to restrain the lessees from working adjoining mines by means of a shaft sunk on the lessors' land, some of defts. applied to stay proceedings in the suit, & to refer the matter in difference to arbn. under the above-mentioned clause:—Held: (1) the subject-matter of the suit was within the arbn. clause; (2) it was not necessary for all defts. to join in the application to stay proceedings in the suit.—WILLESFORD v. WATSON (1873), 8 Ch. App. 473; 42 L. J. Ch. 447; 28 L. T. 428; 37 J. P. 548; 21 W. R. 350, L.C. & L.JJ.

384. Claim for extras.]—A sewerage contract provided that no claim for extras should be allowed unless submitted to the engineers within a given time; that the engineers should be sole judges as to the method of carrying out the works & the materials to be used in the construction thereof, & that in case of any dispute arising at any time, whether during the progress of the works or after completion, as to certain specified matters not including extras, & as to all other matters therein left to the decision of the engineers, their decision should be final & binding on all parties to the contract:—Held: a claim for extras was not within the scope of the arbn. clause, & an action by the contractor for the amount of the claim ought to be allowed to proceed.—TAYLOR v. WESTERN VALLEYS (MONMOUTHSHIRE) SEWERAGE BOARD (1911), 75 J. P. 409, C. A.

385. Claim for rectification.]—By a deed dated in 1901, pltf. co. leased its undertaking, business & goodwill to M. Co. for a term of twenty-one years, subject to certain powers of determination & renewal therein mentioned. The deed contained a proviso giving an option to M. Co. & L. Co., or either of them, of purchasing the undertaking of pltf. co. The deed also contained an arbn. clause. In 1903 deft. co. was formed to take over the undertakings & assets of M. Co. & L. Co. Questions having arisen with reference to the option to purchase given by the deed of 1901, pltf. co. brought an action claiming the decision of questions as to the construction of the option to purchase & also rectification of the lease. On a motion by deft. co., under the Act of 1889, that the proceedings in the action might be stayed:—Held: (1) the question as to rectification of the lease of 1901 was not one which fell within the arbn. clause; (2) the question as to the construction of the option to purchase & rectification were so intimately connected that it was convenient that they should be dealt with together by the ct.; (3) the application to stay the proceedings in the action must be refused.—*PRINTING MACHINERY CO., LTD. v. On the completion of the contract, defts. admitted their obligations except as to $512, & in an action brought by pltf. to recover the balance, successfully contended before the referee in chambers that the action should be stayed under Arbn. Act, s. 6. On appeal:—

Held: the parties had by the contract provided a tribunal to decide disputes arising from the decisions or rulings of the architect, & the order of the referee staying the action was right.—GUNN v. HUDSON'S BAY CO. (1915), 28 W. L. R. 575.—CAN.

—A mining lease contained a clause for referring to arbn. all questions to arise between lessors & lessees "relative to or concerning the indenture, or any covenant, clause, matter or thing therein contained." After bill filed by the lessors, to compel the lessees to work the mine in a particular manner, notices to refer were served by the lessees. Upon motion to stay proceedings:—Held: (1) the case came within C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, but the sect. gave the ct. a discretion; (2) the ct. in its discretion refused to stay proceedings, on the ground that the notices to refer related to other matters besides those the subject of the suit, & that questions arose in the suit which did not come within the clause in the lease.—*WHEATLEY v. 388. Isolated point—Main dispute incapable of reference.]—A partnership deed between P. & B. contained a clause providing for reference of all disputes & questions arising during or after the determination of the partnership, so that every such dispute or question should be so referred within forty days next after the same should arise. After the death of P. various questions arose between B. & the representatives of P. One only of these questions arose within forty days before the first demand for reference was made. An action for account having been brought by the representatives of P. against B., they moved for the appointment of an interim receiver & manager, on the ground that B. had set up another shop on his own account, & induced the customers of the old shop to go to the new one, & had otherwise acted contrary to the interests of the partnership business. B. made a cross-motion for stay of proceedings & reference of all questions to arbn.:—Held: the ct. would not, in the exercise of its discretion, order the reference to arbn. of an isolated question when the main points in dispute were incapable of arbn.—YOUNG v. BUCKETT (1882), 51 L. J. Ch. 504; 46 L. T. 266; 30 W. R. 511.

389. Disputes under lease & agreement—Former only containing arbitration clause.]—By a lease the lessor covenanted to supply the lessee with a certain quantity of water per day. The lease contained a clause providing that if any difference should arise between the parties touching the lease or anything therein contained, or the construction thereof, or in any way connected with the lease or the operation thereof, it should be referred to arbn. Some years afterwards, disputes having arisen between the parties as to the water supply, a written agreement was entered into binding the lessor to take certain steps with a view to securing a better supply, & in some points varying the rights of the lessee as to the supply. Afterwards the lessee commenced an action alleging that the steps mentioned in the agreement had not been taken, & also alleging that the lessor had not supplied the stipulated quantity of water, & claiming an inquiry as to the damages sustained by pltf. "by reason of the matters aforesaid." Deft. moved to stay proceedings in the action & refer the dispute to arbn.:—Held: (1) pltf. could in the action claim damages for breaches of the agreement as well as for breaches of the covenant in the lease, & as the arbn. clause only applied to matters arising under the lease, it did not cover the whole subject-matter of the action; (2) it would not be right to split up the action by referring to arbn. the matters arising under the lease, leaving the action to proceed as to the other matters; (3) the application must be refused.—*TURNOCK v. 390. —Qu.: whether, where an action embraces several items, all within the reference clause, as to some of which the arbitrator is disqualified from acting, the ct. should allow the action to proceed as to these items & allow the remaining items to be referred.

It is the practice of the Ch. 387 i. Matters in dispute only partly within clause.]—A contract between pltf. & defts. contained a clause providing for the reference of disputes to an arbitrator. While the works were in progress, defts. directed certain work to be suspended & additional work to be executed. Pltf. commenced an action to recover damages for the work suspended & for payment for the additional work. Defts. applied for a stay under Judicature Act, s. 27, & for a compulsory order of reference:—Held: the claim for damages was clearly outside the submission, & the remaining items not being satisfactorily shown to be within it & all the items being so far connected as to make it doubtful whether complete justice would be done to the parties, unless all were disposed of by the same tribunal, the application must be refused.—*MOYERS v. templated by the policy, P. charged that the co. had been guilty of negligence in the conduct of the defence, & refusing arbn., sought in an action to recover from the co. the full sum, together with costs. The co. was willing to pay the amount of the policy with the costs, if accepted in final settlement, otherwise they reserved the right to defend as to the entire amount. Upon a motion by the co. under C. L. P. Amendment Act (Ireland), 1856, s. 14:—Held: as the substantial portion of the action was founded upon negligence, the ct. should not stay the proceedings.—*PATTERSON v. contained, or the construction hereof, or anything to be done under the covenants or agreements herein contained, or any matter in any way connected with these presents, or the operation hereof, or the rights, duties, or liabilities of either party in connection with the premises." By a supplemental deed of even date, which contained no arbn. clause, the lessor released the lessee from the observance of certain of the restrictive covenants in the lease. The assignees of the lessor having brought ejectment for alleged breaches of covenant, deft. moved for a stay of proceedings & that the matter might be referred:—Held: it was no objection to the application that an arbitrator could not award ejectment, for the ct. could give effect, if necessary, to the finding of the arbitrator in that respect.—*WADE-GERY v. "by reason of the matters aforesaid." Deft. moved to stay proceedings in the action, & refer the disputes to arbn.:—Held: even if the arbn. clause could be construed so widely as to cover all the matters in respect of which damages were claimed, it would not be proper to refer them to an arbitrator, as he would have no power to determine the construction of the agreement & its effect upon the provision of the lease, & the application must be refused.—*TURNOCK v. Pltf. then obtained leave to deliver interrogatories, & afterwards gave notice that he discontinued the action. 400. Acquiescence in order.]—Attendance by deft. before the master on a summons for directions taken out by pltf., & acquiescence, without protest, in a common form order for delivery of pleadings, is taking a step in the proceedings within the Act of 1889, s. 4, & deft. is thereby precluded from moving to stay proceedings under that sect.—*RICHARDSON v. 401. —.]—Attendance by defts., before a master on the usual summons for directions taken out by pltf., which the master proposed to treat as a summons for an account under R. S. C., Ord. 15, & giving an undertaking to furnish an account as a term of the summons standing over, is taking a step in the proceedings within the Act of 1889, s. 4, & defts. are thereby precluded from obtaining a stay of proceedings under that sect. It is not necessary in such a case that an order shall actually have been made.—OCHS v. OCHS BROTHERS, [1909] 2 Ch. 121; 78 L. J. Ch. 555; 100 L. T. 880; 53 Sol. Jo. 542.

ARTHUR*, COHEN v. COHEN (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 344.

403. Notice to defend.]—A sum of money being alleged to be due to pltf. for goods supplied to defts., proceedings were taken in the ct. for its recovery, & a default summons was served upon defts., who filled up the slip attached to the summons giving notice of their intention to defend the action. Defts. subsequently applied for a stay of the action under the Act of 1889, s. 4:—Held: the giving notice of an intention to defend by filling up the slip attached to the default summons was merely the equivalent of entering appearance in the High Ct., & defts. had not taken any step in the proceedings after appearance which disentitled them to apply for a stay.—AUSTIN & WHITELEY, LTD. v. BOWLEY & SONS (1913), 108 L. T. 921.

404. Extension of time—Short notice of trial.]—An action will not be stayed upon the ground that there is an agreement to refer, if the party applying has obtained time to plead & is under terms to take short notice of trial.—*SMITH & CO. v. 405. — Arranged out of court.]—In an action by pltf. against a contractor under an agreement, which provided that all disputes should be referred to arbn., deft. had delivered no pleadings, but when the original time for putting in a defence was about to expire, he wrote to pltf. asking for fourteen days further time to put in his defence, which was granted, & subsequently wrote asking for ten days' further time, which was also granted. On motion by deft. to stay proceedings under the Act of 1889, s. 4:—Held: obtaining by consent an enlargement of time wherein to plead was not taking a step in the proceedings within the above sect., & there must be an order to stay proceedings.—*BRIGHTON MARINE PALACE & PIER LTD. v. 407. Filing affidavit in opposition.]—The mere filing of affidavits in answer to affidavits filed in support of a motion for the appointment of a receiver, in an action for dissolution of partnership, is not taking a step in the proceedings within the Act of 1889, s. 4, so as to preclude the ct. from referring all matters in dispute to arbn.—ZALINOFF v. HAMMOND, [1898] 2 Ch. 92; 67 L. J. Ch. 370; 78 L. T. 456.

408. Defence—Plea & answer.]—Where, after statement of defence delivered, deft. applied to the ct. under C. L. P. Act, 1854, c. 11, to stay proceedings:—Held: (1) the above sect. was imperative in requiring an application to the ct., to send to arbn. matters which the parties had agreed should be decided by arbn., to be "after appearance & before plea or answer" in the action in which it was sought to stay proceedings; (2) it being clear that since Jud. Acts the statement of defence had taken the place of "plea & answer," the application was made too late.—WEST LONDON DAIRY SOCIETY, LTD. v. ABBOTT (1881), 44 L. T. 376; 29 W. R. 584.

SUB-SECT. 8.—APPLICANT MUST BE READY AND WILLING TO REFER.

409. Not ready when action brought.]—Deft. agreed to employ pltf. as his agent for carrying on his business in a specified district for fifteen years, the agreement containing a clause for referring to arbn. any disputes as to the construction of the agreement, or any payment, act, or thing relating to or arising out of the agreement. Before the term expired deft. dismissed pltf. from his employment for alleged misconduct, & gave notice to refer the matters in dispute between them to arbn., but among the matters in dispute he did not specify his dismissal of the agent. Both parties appointed arbitrators, but before anything more was done pltf. brought an action against deft. to restrain him from dismissing him & from appointing another agent. Deft. moved to stay proceedings in the action on the ground of the agreement to refer all matters to arbn.:—Held: (1) since deft. was not ready at the time when the action was brought to refer to arbn. all matters in dispute, including the question whether pltf. ought to be reinstated in his employment, the ct. ought not to exercise their power of staying proceedings in the action.—DAVIS v. STARR (1889), 41 Ch. D. 242; 58 L. J. Ch. 808; 60 L. T. 797; 37 W. R. 481, C. A.

410. Two out of three parties ready & willing.]—The lease of a mine contained an agreement to refer disputes between the lessors & three lessees to arbitrators or their umpire, pursuant to C. L. P. Act, 1854. The lessees sank a shaft, & through the shaft drew minerals from an adjoining mine. The lessors filed a bill to restrain the lessees from so doing. Two of the three lessees applied for an order to stay proceedings in the suit, & that the matter might be referred to arbn.:—Held: it was no objection to the application that two only of three defts. were, at the commencement of the suit & at the date of the application, ready & willing to concur, & the dissent of deft., if persisted in, would not necessarily be a ground for refusing the order.—*WILKESFORD v. ## PART I. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 8.

h. Date at which willingness should be shown.]—Persons who are desirous of taking advantage of an arbn. clause in a contract should so intimate at the earliest possible moment in the ordinary course of business. The party applying for a stay is bound to show that at the time the writ was issued he was willing to refer the matter in dispute.—DOOLEY v. LONDON ASSURANCE (1872), 6 L. L. T. 31.—IR.

k. —.]—The period at which appets. willingness to arbitrate should be shown to have existed was when they first became aware of the action being brought.—DOOLEY v. LONDON ASSURANCE, supra.—IR.

l. Evidence of lack of willingness—Rescission of principal contract.]—Deft. & pltf. agreed to submit to arbn. any dispute which should arise between them & to rescind the agreement in certain circumstances. Deft. rescinded the agreement & pltf. brought an action to establish his rights. Deft. moved to stay proceedings in the action upon the ground that the arbn. clause was paramount:—Held: deft. was not at the commencement of the proceedings ready & willing to submit the difference to arbn.—FERNAN v. MONITOR (1906), 3 W. L. R. 426.—CAN.

m. Onus of proof.]—Pltf. sued defts. as liquidators of an enemy co., under the Alien Enemies (Winding-up) Ordinance, 1914, for damages for breach of contract. Defts. took out a summons under s. 541 of the Code for a stay of proceedings, on the ground that the matter in dispute should be submitted to arbn., under a clause in the contract

SECT. 11.—RESTRAINT OF ARBITRATION BY INJUNCTION.

412. Restraining parties—Dispute not within submission—Proceedings futile—Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18).]—The High Ct. has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction to restrain a party from proceeding with an arbn. in a matter beyond the agreement to refer, although such arbn. proceeding may be futile & vexatious.—NORTH LONDON RY. CO. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 30; 52 L. J. Q. B. 380; 48 L. T. 695; 31 W. R. 490, C. A.

The case must not be understood as going further than deciding that there is no right or jurisdiction in the Ch. Div. of the High Ct. to restrain a person from proceeding for compensation under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), on the ground that he is not entitled to compensation. The case does not decide that in no case is it right to restrain persons from proceeding to arbn.; there are cases in which it is quite right so to do (LINDLEY, L.J.). Appld. Hanly & Fisher v. Mallet (1886), 3 T. L. R. 71. Distd. Birmingham & District Land Co. v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 650. Folld. Wood v. Lillies (1892), 61 L. J. Ch. 158. Consd. Richardson v. 413.—Notwithstanding the enlarged powers of granting injunctions conferred by Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), the High Ct. has not since that Act, any more than the Ct. of Ch. had before it, jurisdiction to restrain by injunction a person from proceeding before an arbitrator on a claim for compensation under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, notwithstanding that his claim may be futile or vexatious.

Nor does the fact that claimant is, in the proceedings before the arbitrator, using the name of a third party without authority make any difference.—LONDON & BLACKWALL RY. CO. v. CROSS (1886), 31 Ch. D. 354; 55 L. J. Ch. 313;

as follows: "This contract should be construed & the rights of the parties thereunder determined in Bremen according to the laws of Germany." Arbn. was impossible owing to war:—Held: appets. were not able to satisfy the ct. that they were then ready & willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbn., & application refused.—*BESWICK v. 414. — — — — —.]—The ct. has no jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain a person from proceeding with an arbn. in a matter beyond or outside an arbn. agreement, although such arbn. proceedings may be futile & vexatious; & the mere circumstance that the arbn. will be futile & vexatious affords no sufficient ground, under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), for granting an injunction. Therefore, where W. & L. entered into a partnership for carrying on a theatre under an agreement containing a usual arbn. clause, & L. served W. with a notice referring to arbn. the question whether the theatre should be sold or not, the ct. declined to grant an injunction restraining L. from taking any further step in the arbn., although it was of opinion that the question was not one which fell within the arbn. clause.—WOOD v. LILLIES (1892), 61 L. J. Ch. 158; 8 T. L. R. 281.

416. — — — — —.]—The ct. has jurisdiction to interfere by injunction on equitable grounds to restrain deft. from proceeding to arbn., where an action has been brought impeaching the instrument containing the agreement for reference. Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), has not enlarged the jurisdiction of the ct. so as to enable it to grant an injunction where, before the Act, it could not have done so.—KITTS v. MOORE, [1895] 1 Q. B. 253; 64 L. J. Ch. 152; 71 L. T. 676; 43 W. R. 84; 39 Sol. Jo. 96; 12 R. 43, C. A.

417. — — — Where injury to one party will result—But not where proceedings merely futile.]—The ct. has jurisdiction to restrain a party from proceeding to arbn., & will exercise that jurisdiction at the instance of one of the parties to the agreement for reference in a proper case, such as where it is satisfied that injury will result to the party complaining if the arbn. is allowed to proceed; but the ct. will not exercise its jurisdiction where it sees the result of the arbn. will be merely futile & productive of no injury to the party complaining.

Articles of partnership between three partners A., B. & C., provided that, as to any question in

417 i. — — — Not when arbitration merely futile.]—In an action by three partners against the fourth partner, & against the arbiter named under a clause of arbn. in the contract of copartnery, pursuers sought to prevent defenders proceeding with a reference under the clause, on the ground that many of the questions submitted to the arbiter were not such as he would have power to decide. The objection had been taken before the arbiter, who repelled it:—Held: at that stage of the arbn. it must be assumed that the arbiter would keep within his powers, & it was inexpedient to say what would look like instructing the arbiter in his duties & to separate the questions into two categories & direct that he might entertain some & not entertain others.—BENNET v. relation to the partnership, the decision of the majority should prevail, & further that, in case of any dispute between the partners, they should appoint three arbitrators, one to be appointed by each partner, & that the partners should abide by the award. Subsequently A. & B. gave C. notice of their appointment of two arbitrators, & requested him to appoint a third to decide disputes which they alleged had arisen between themselves & C. C. denied the existence of any dispute requiring arbn. & requested A. & B. to furnish him with particulars of the alleged disputes, which, however they declined to do until C. had appointed his arbitrator, & they threatened that if he did not appoint his arbitrator, they would proceed to arbn. before their own arbitrators. On a motion by C. to restrain A. & B. from proceeding to arbn.:—Held: as in C.'s absence any arbn. proceedings would be futile & in no way binding upon him, the ct. ought not to grant an injunction.—FARRAR v. COOPER (1890), 44 Ch. D. 323; 59 L. J. Ch. 506; 62 L. T. 528; 38 W. R. 410; 6 T. L. R. 241.

418. — — — Submission ultra vires.]—Where an agreement made between two railway cos. under their common seals contains clauses which are beyond the powers of the directors of one of the cos., & clauses for referring to arbn. all disputes arising under the agreement, the ct. will, at the suit of a shareholder of that co., restrain both cos. from proceeding to arbn. in respect of alleged breaches of those clauses. But no such injunction will be granted at the suit of a shareholder of the other co., on the ground that the stipulations of any such clause are beyond the powers of the directors of the co. in which pltf. is not a shareholder.—MAUNSELL v. On June 10 a cargo of about 6,000 tons was loaded, & bills of lading made out to the order of M. & Co. or their assigns were signed by the master & handed to M. & Co.'s representative. M. & Co. had, by a contract dated Apr. 27, 1911, sold the cargo to defts., the B. Co., on the terms of a "basis delivered" contract, by clause 10 of which the contract was to be void as regarded any portion shipped which might not arrive. On June 12 defts. M. & Co., under the contract of Apr. 27, declared to the B. Co. that the beans had been shipped by steamship D. On arrival of the vessel at Liverpool, the port of discharge, M. & Co. handed to the B. Co. the bills of lading indorsed against a payment. was alleged that there was a shortage of 171 bags, & the B. Co. having paid only in respect of the quantity actually delivered, M. & Co. instructed them to make a corresponding deduction from the freight, but plffs. refused to acknowledge the claim for short delivery. A dispute having thus arisen, M. & Co. gave notice that they demanded an arbn. under a clause in the charterparty, which provided for arbn. "by arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties to this agreement, if necessary the arbitrators to appoint a third," & formally required plffs. within seven clear days to appoint their arbitrator. Plffs. did not appoint an arbitrator, & defts., after the expiry of the seven days, gave notice of the appointment of a gentleman to act as sole arbitrator. Plffs. thereupon took out a summons for further directions asking (inter alia) for an injunction to restrain first defts. from proceeding with the arbn.:—Held: there was no jurisdiction in the ct. to grant the injunction asked for.—*DEN OF AIRLIE S.S. Hamburg, in Aug. On July 31 the German Govt. placed an embargo on the export of beetroot sugar. On Aug. 1 plffs. gave orders to defts. to sell the sugar, & on the same day defts. contracted in London to buy the sugar from plffs. All the contracts contained an arbn. clause. War broke out between Great Britain & Germany on Aug. 4, & proclamations dealing with trading with the enemy were then issued. Disputes having arisen between plffs. & defts. with regard to the contracts, defts. desired to submit the disputes to arbn.:—Held: though the performance of the contracts in specie was illegal after Aug. 4, yet as they were valid & binding at the time when they were made, plffs. were not entitled to an injunction restraining defts. from proceeding with the arbn.—*SMITH, CONEY & BARNETT v. 421. — Waiver of right to arbitrate.—A suit was instituted by a contractor praying for a declaration of his rights upon the construction of certain contracts between him & defts., & for inquiries & accounts on the footing of such declaration. Defts. claimed the right to proceed by arbitration "on most if not all" of the matters in dispute. On a motion to restrain the arbitrator from making an award:—Held: (1) whether defts.' seizure of the works was a waiver of their right to proceed by arbitration could not be determined until the cause was heard; (2) as some matters seemed to be excluded from the arbn., but some remained, the order would be for the reference to go on, defts. undertaking not to take any proceedings upon any award without the leave of the ct.—PICKERING v. CAPE TOWN RY. Co. (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 84; 13 L. T. 357, 570, L.C.

424. — Bias—Expressions of opinion previous to acting.—A contract, by which plff. undertook to construct a dock for deft. co., provided that any dispute between the co. & the contractor as to the meaning of any part of the contract, or as to the quality or description of the materials to be used in the works, should be referred to the co.'s engineer as arbitrator. A dispute arose whether the contract required the interior of a certain embankment to be made of stone, or whether rocky marl was allowable, so that, if the contractor by the direction of the engineer used stone, he would be entitled to be paid for it as an extra. A correspondence took place between the contractor & the engineer, in which the engineer stated his view to be that the contract bound the contractor to use stone, & that it was not an extra. The co. then referred the dispute to the arbn. of the engineer. After this reference, & on the day for which the first appointment had been made, the engineer wrote to the contractor a letter in which he repeated his former view. Plff. brought his action

424 i. Restraining arbitrators — Bias.—Contractors with a co. referred all disputes to the co.'s engineer as arbiter, & sought to have him interdicted from acting as such, or issuing any decree-arbitral, on the ground that he had been to blame for delay in the execution of the work, that it was incompetent for him to adjudicate on the questions thence arising, & that previous to the contract he had made an estimate of the probable expense of the works:—Held: the allegations were not relevant or sufficient, & action dismissed.—TROWSDALE & SON v. JOFF & NORTH BRITISH RY. Co. (1865), 38 Sc. Jur. 25.—SCOT.

424 ii. — — ——The High Ct. has power to prevent a non-indifferent arbitrator from acting without waiting until the award is made, though perhaps the better course is to apply for leave to revoke the submission if another arbitrator be not substituted.—BURFORD TOWNSHIP v. CHAMBERS (1894), 25 O. R. 663.—CAN.

424 iii. — — ——By Act of Parliament questions arising between plffs.

& defts. were "referred to the arbn. of C." Later defts. obtained an Act of Parliament authorising certain works. Thereafter, but before any of the latter works had been commenced, plffs. brought an action to have C. interdicted from acting as arbiter under the first Act, averring that the works under the two Acts were so related that questions in which the interests of defts. & plffs. would mutually conflict "must arise from time to time in the ordinary course of execution of the respective undertakings":—Held: C. had disqualified himself from determining any question between defts. & plffs. under the first Act arising out of the execution of works by defts. under the second Act, & if such a question actually occurred for decision C. would be disqualified not merely from determining that question, but also from acting as arbiter between the parties under the first Act quoad omnia, but as no such question had actually occurred, or might ever occur, it was premature to interdict C. from acting as arbiter under the first Act, & therefore, interdict must be refused.—CALEDONIAN RY. Co. v. GLASGOW CORPN. (1897), 25 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 74.—SCOT.

424 v. — Lack of authority to refer.—An insurance co. brought a note of suspension & interdict to stop proceedings in an arbn. under a policy issued by them. The grounds of suspension were (1) that law agents who had made the claim & nominated an arbiter, & who professed to act on behalf of the insured, had in fact acted on behalf of his creditors (who had no right to claim under the policy), & (2) that the agents had no authority from the insured:—Held: the objections did not disclose sufficient grounds for stopping proceedings in the arbn., & the note must be refused.—LICENCES INSURANCE CORPN. & GUARANTEE FUND, LTD. v. SHEARER, [1907] S. C. 10.—SCOT.

424 vi. — Misconduct.—A party in a submission regarding a complicated accounting having raised a declarator to have arbiters discerned incapable of pronouncing decree, in respect of their having required the parties to sign an obligation for their remuneration, at to restrain the co. from proceeding further with the arbn.:—Held: (1) considering the position of the engineer, who, as engineer of the co., must necessarily have already expressed an opinion on the point in dispute, his writing after the commencement of the arbn. a letter repeating the same opinion would not disqualify him from acting as arbitrator unless, on the fair construction of the letter, it appeared that he had made up his mind so as not to be open to change it upon argument; (2) the letter did not, upon its fair construction, show that the engineer had precluded himself from keeping his mind open, & the injunction granted by the ct. below ought to be dissolved. Qu.: whether there was jurisdiction to grant it.—JACKSON v. BARRY RY. CO., [1893] 1 Ch. 238; 68 L. T. 472; 9 T. L. R. 90; 2 R. 207, C. A.

425. — — — — —.]—Under a contract independent engineers gave their opinion that the original scheme was unworkable, & pltf. estimated the cost of putting the matters right at £21,000, but the borough engineer who was one of defts. thought £7,000 enough. The corp. having given notice to refer the matter to the arbn. of the borough engineer:—Held: (1) the borough engineer had not precluded himself from being arbitrator by unfair statements or by prejudging the dispute, & he was the real arbitrator within same time presented a bill of suspension & interdict to have the arbiters prohibited from in the meanwhile taking any further steps in the submission. The ct. refused the bill, reserving all competent pleas in the declarator as in a reduction.—FRASER v. GORDON (1834), 12 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 887.—SCOT.

424 vii. — Unfitness of arbitrator subject of action of declarator.—A party to a submission brought a declarator to have it found that the arbiter had disqualified himself from acting in that capacity; thereafter he presented a note of suspension for the purpose of having the arbiter interdicted from proceeding with the submission, on the ground that he ought not to do so while the question whether he was not disqualified was pending. The ct. refused the note.—DREW v. LEBURN (1850), 12 D. (Ct. of Sess.) 983.—SCOT.

424 viii. — Illegality of subject-matter.—Held: It was not a good ground for interdicting an arbiter from proceeding with a submission that he was about to consider & dispose of a claim alleged to be illegal, as founded on a pactum de quota litis. Semble: it was not to be assumed that the arbiter would not rightly dispose of such a claim.—BELLOR YOUNG OR FARRELL v. ARNOTT (1857), 19 D. (Ct. of Sess.) 1000.—SCOT.

424 ix. — Matters outside submission.—A contract contained a clause providing that disputes should be referred to an engineer named. The contractor abandoned the work, & raised a reduction of the contract, on the ground of misrepresentation. Thereafter, the co. having called on the party named as the arbiter to act, the contractor maintained that the clause of reference in the contract did not apply to such a case as had arisen & brought a note of suspension, but the ct. refused to interdict the arbiter from proceeding the terms of the contract; (2) pltf.'s application to restrain the arbn. must be refused.—McKEE v. DUBLIN CORPN. & O'SULLIVAN (1912), Hudson, Bldg. Contracts, 4th ed., Vol. II., p. 466.

Bias generally.—See Nos. 515—517, Part II., Sect. 2, Sub-sect. 3, Part IV., Sects. 16, Sub-sect. 2, B., 19, Sub-sects. 2, B. (b), 3, B., 5, E., post.

426. — Matter unsuited for arbitration.—O. offered pltf. a sample of barley. Pltf. wrote offering 33s. 6d. a quarter for 56 quarters. O. on Jan. 22 telegraphed, "Brokers will not divide under 34s."—i.e., will not divide the quantity offered at a less price than 34s. Pltf. telegraphed back, "Will take 56 quarters at 34s." Next day O. sent a "sold note," by which the contract was made subject to the rules of the Liverpool Corn Trade Assocn. On Jan. 23 the contract note was received. Pltf. was advised of the arrival of the barley, inspected it & found it not according to sample, & at once advised O. of it. It was admitted that this was the fact, & endeavours were made to induce pltf. to take the barley at a reduction, which he refused. O. wrote demanding payment, which was refused, & then claimed to go to arbn. under the Liverpool rules, which provided that all disputes should be referred to arbn. Pltf. refused to appoint an arbitrator, & O. claimed to do so under the rules. Pltf. having issued a writ in an action for an injunction to restrain O. from proceeding to arbn.:—Held: such a case ought not to be sent to arbn. under the rules, & the order made by the judge in chambers for an injunction to restrain the seller from proceeding to arbn. was right.—SISSONS v. OATES (1894), 10 T. L. R. 392, D. C. Annotation:—Mentd. Munro v. Bognor U. D. C. (1915), 13 L. G. R. 431.

427. Agreement impugned—Not representing real contract—Injunction refused.—A contract contained the terms of business in accordance with which defts. were to deal in stocks & shares on under the reference in the contract, the contractor having the ordinary remedies against an arbiter acting ultra vires.—WILSON v. CALEDONIAN RY. CO. & GRAHAM (1860), 22 D. (Ct. of Sess.) 697.—SCOT.

424 x. — — — — —.]—A claim having been lodged in an arbn., resp., before the arbiter had considered the claim or pronounced any decision thereon, presented a note for interdict against the arbiter proceeding with the reference, on the ground that the form of the claim was such that the arbiter was asked to pronounce an order which would be ultra vires:—Held: (1) although it might be the claim as stated could not be competently sustained, yet, as the matters in question fell prima facie under the clause of reference, & the claim might be amended so as to be competent, the objections resolved into a question of pleading which fell primarily to be dealt with by the arbiter; (2) it could not be assumed that the arbiter would pronounce incompetent orders; (3) complainant was not entitled to have the arbn. interdicted.—MOORE v. M'COSH (1903), 5 F. 946; 40 Sc. L. R. 691.—SCOT.

424 xi. — Most expedient course in interests of both parties.—A contract contained a clause referring any dispute or difference as to the intent of the contract to the decision of the architect as sole arbiter. The contractors for a considerable time, without objection on the part of the employers, made use of "shivers" sand. On the employers subsequently objecting to its use the contractors maintained their right to continue to use it on various grounds, & the employers referred the matter to the arbiter, who issued what the employers contended was an award, but what the contractors averred was only an ex p. opinion. The latter thereafter called on the arbiter to reconsider his award, & hear the parties:—Held: the employers had mistaken their remedy in applying to the arbiter, but to prevent further proceedings before him interdict was granted as the most expedient course in the interest of both parties.—GREENOCK P. B. v. COGHILL & SON (1878), 5 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 732.—SCOT.

424 xii. — Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery.—Before a submission has been made a rule of ct., a ct. of equity has jurisdiction to restrain an arbitrator improperly appointed from entering upon the duties of such arbn.—DIRECTOR-CABLE CO. v. DOMINION TELEGRAPH CO. (1883), 28 Gr. 648; 8 A. R. 416.—CAN.

424 xiii. — Unwillingness or inability of one party to attend.—The arbiter under a reference having taken part of the evidence adjourned the proof, & at an adjourned diet counsel for A., one of the parties, stated that he appeared merely to protest against the arbn. going on, & the arbiter declared the proof for A. closed. After hearing the remaining proof for the other party the arbiter issued a note of his proposed findings. Before any further proceedings had taken place, A. brought an action for reduction of the interim orders & of the note of proposed findings, & for interdict against the arbiter going on with the reference. Pursuer averred that he had been obliged to go abroad owing to ill-health, that in his absence his agent was unable to proceed with the reference, & that the arbiter had pronounced the orders under reduction notwithstanding that the agent had intimated his desire to have proceedings delayed until his client's return:—Held: the action was irrelevant, on the ground that it was still open to pursuer to appeal to the arbiter.—WEMYSS v. ARDROSSAN HARBOUR CO. (1893), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 500.—SCOT.

pltf.'s account. Defts., having a claim against pltf. for differences, instituted arbn. proceedings under an arbn. clause in the contract, which provided that any dispute between the parties should be referred to arbn. Pltf. brought an action for an injunction to restrain defts. from proceeding with the arbn. proceedings, on the ground that the written agreement did not rightly represent the real contract entered into between the parties. Pltf. contended that the real intention was not to deal in transactions for the actual purchase & sale of stocks, but to deal in differences only, & the transactions were gambling transactions & should be submitted to a jury. The ct. refused to grant an injunction. — McHARG v. UNIVERSAL STOCK EXCHANGE, LTD., [1895] 2 Q. B. 81; 64 L. J. Q. B. 498; 72 L. T. 602; 43 W. R. 464; 11 T. L. R. 409; 15 R. 459, C. A.

Averment that deft. entered & preserved the game, which did damage to the tenants, & that deft. was requested by pltf. to appoint a valuer. Breach, that, although within a reasonable time a valuer was appointed by pltf. & notice thereof given to deft., & pltf. requested him to give the name of a referee on his part & fix a time, etc., of meeting to ascertain the damage, etc., in default of which pltf.'s valuer would alone ascertain the damage done, yet deft. did not give notice to pltf. of any valuer chosen by him, nor had ever made satisfaction, etc.:—Held: (1) after verdict, it must be taken that the declaration alleged a refusal by deft. to appoint a valuer; (2) the jury having found that pltf. did not give notice in a reasonable time of his appointment of a valuer, this was an immaterial allegation, inasmuch as deft. had refused to appoint altogether.

The rule ought to be made absolute for judgment for pltf., notwithstanding the verdict for deft., finding that pltf. did not notify to deft. his choice of an arbitrator within a reasonable time. It appears by the record that deft. was requested to appoint an arbitrator on his part, & refused to do so within a reasonable time. In effect he refused to proceed by arbn. It is immaterial whether pltf. chose an arbitrator, or notified his choice at any time; & the verdict on this issue is consequently on an immaterial fact, & does not prevent pltf. from having judgment (LORD DENMAN, C.J.). — *THOMAS v. Matter of disputes arising, defts. refused to appoint an arbitrator. Previous to the making of the award pltf., under the provisions of C. L. P. Act, 1854, had the submission to arbn. made a rule of the Ct. of Common Pleas. In a suit in which pltf.'s claim was for damages incurred by pltf. in respect of b. By action of declarator.]—A lease provided that, in the event of coal becoming exhausted or not workable to profit, & upon the fact being ascertained by persons of skill, the lease should be at an end. The tenant having

The party is only bound to appoint a valuer on his part, & if the person appointed does not act, the other party is remitted to his original cause of action & may revoke his submission, or may possibly, if the valuer has undertaken to act & failed in his duty, have a right of action against him, but has no right of action against the party who appointed him.—*COOPER v. 441. Powers & duty of court.]—In an action upon a contract whereby the parties have provided for arbn. as a means of ascertaining the amount due relative to others, & made payments in terms of the agreement & acted on the submission:—Held: although the submission failed from ambiguity, he was not entitled to insist in an action of repetition of the payments & otherwise, on the assumption that the agreement was not binding, action being reserved under the contract, if arbn. proceedings have proved abortive it is the duty of the ct. to supply the defect by itself ascertaining the amount due.

When an arbn. for any reason becomes abortive it is the duty of a ct. of law, in working out a contract of which such an arbn. is part of the practical machinery, to supply the defect which has occurred. It is the privilege of a ct. in such circumstances, & it is its duty, to come to the assistance of parties by the removal of the impasse & the extrication of their rights. This rule is in truth founded upon the soundest principle, it is practical in its character, & it furnishes by an appeal to a ct. of justice the means of working out & of preventing the defeat of bargains between parties (LORD SHAW OF DUNFERMLINE).—CAMERON v. CUDDY, [1914] A. C. 651; 83 L. J. P. C. 70; 110 L. T. 89, P. C.

A. & the co.'s engineer met & discussed the necessary works, & a memorandum was made specifying certain works. Certain discussions as to these works were protracted beyond the month, A. supposing that the condition as to time was waived. Two months after the one month had expired, A. made his award. The award provided for a cattle arch which had not been previously mentioned. The solrs. of the co., not being fully informed as to the exact date of the award, took it up & paid the arbitrator's charges:—Held: as the parties had agreed to leave matters to the discretion of A., the ct. had no power to substitute its own discretion for that of A. so as to order the construction of works, though such might appear to be necessary & proper.—DARNLEY (EARL) v. 443. No agreement signed—No reference taking place.—Where a cause was ready to be tried, but was withdrawn at the time of trial upon an agreement of reference, which was never signed, & no reference ever took place, the ct. refused to give judgment as in case of a nonsuit, on the ground that pltf., having taken the cause down for trial once, was not in default, & that deft.'s course was to take down the record by proviso.—HANSBY v. 444. Failure of party to take up order of reference.—A verdict was taken for pltf. at the assizes

Mar. 31, subject to a reference, the award to be made on or before the first day of Easter term, Apr. 16. The attorney for pltf. left the assize town for his own residence, having first directed his agent at the assize town to obtain the order of reference & send it him. On Apr. 4, having again written to his agent respecting the order, he left home on business & returned on the 14th, when he found that the order of reference had not been sent, & in consequence, he was not able to obtain it till the time for making the award had expired. Deft. having declined submitting to a new order of reference on the former terms, the ct. refused to grant a rule enabling pltf. to proceed upon his verdict in default of such submission.

It was pltf.'s fault that the arbn. did not proceed; the attorney went away & deserted the cause. The rule must be discharged, & pltf. may take the cause down again for trial (per Cur.).—DOE d. FISHER v. SAUNDERS (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 783; 1 L. J. K. B. 273; 110 E. R. 236.

Pltfs., trustees for F., having, in violation of their consent, frustrated the endeavour to obtain such a decree from the Ct. of Ch., & having applied for a new trial in the cause, the ct. granted the application for a new trial, but only on condition of pltfs. paying the costs of the day & of the motion for a new trial, & of a motion for an attachment for not obeying the order of Nisi Prius.—MORGAN v. MILLER (1839), 6 Bing. N. C. 168; 8 Scott, 266; 133 E. R. 66.

f. Arbitrators refusing to act.—Where parties had agreed to refer all matters in dispute to the arbn. of three persons, & one of the arbitrators refused to continue to act, & the other two consequently refused to proceed with the reference, the ct. refused to order the 445 i. Reference by order—Failure to enlarge.—A cause was referred, the award to be made by July 1, with leave to the arbitrator to enlarge, but no verdict was taken. He enlarged the time, & after hearing evidence, adjourned to enable defts. to procure their witnesses. Neither party attended again, nor took any steps to procure a further enlargement, & pltf. gave notice of trial. Defts. notified him that they would move against the proceedings, as the order of reference was yet in force, but pltf. took a verdict, defts. not appearing:—Held: defts., if they desired the reference to continue, should have applied for an enlargement before the verdict, & by omitting so to do they had waived their right.—MILLER v. HOGG (1858), 2 P. R. 299.—CAN.

Pltf. moved the ct. for liberty to proceed with the action, notwithstanding the lapse of time & notwithstanding the consent whereby the cause was referred to arbn. He accounted for the delay by his anxiety not to press deft.:—Held: if the motion was granted the case would still stand referred to arbn. as before, & the motion should be refused.—O'CALLAGHAN v. 451. —.]—A cause was referred at the assizes, & by consent, a verdict was entered for pltf., damages £50, costs 40s., subject to the award of an arbitrator. The time for making the award expired without an award being made; the time was further enlarged by consent, & the enlarged time having also expired without an award being made, pltf. gave notice of trial, & proceeded to the trial of the cause, & obtained a verdict. A judge's order having been previously obtained for altering the record in the disringas, the clerk of assize at the trial erased the indorsement of the previous verdict, & entered the new verdict in the usual way. The ct. set aside the latter verdict for irregularity.

The distinction is where a verdict is given absolutely for the pltf. & the amount only is referred, in which case the death of the arbitrator or other intervening accident does not entirely open the cause, but where the verdict itself is referred to an arbitrator, such event opens the cause & the ct. has no power over deft. 453. Waiver.]—Where, by an order of Nisi Prius, a verdict was taken, subject to the award of an arbitrator, & the time for making the award expired before the order of reference was delivered to the arbitrator:—Held: (1) it was irregular to take the cause down again for trial without setting aside the previous verdict; (2) such irregularity was not waived by deft.'s attorney attending & cross-examining a witness, under an order for the examination of the witness on interrogatories.—HALL v. ROUSE (1838), 4 M. & W. 24; 1 Horn & H. 245; 7 L. J. Ex. 214.

454. — Award set aside—Discretion as to execution.]—Where a verdict was taken for pltf. in an action of debt, for the amount in the declaration & nominal damages, subject to the award of an arbitrator, to whom the cause & all matters in difference between the parties were referred, the costs of the cause to abide the event, & the arbitrator having made an award in favour of pltf. as to the action, but against them as to the other matters in difference, which was afterwards set aside by deft. for defects in it, the ct. refused to allow pltf. to issue execution for a nominal amount of debt & the costs, unless deft. would consent to refer the matter back to the same arbitrator.—*PORCH v. After the race was over the stewards met, but were unable to agree, two being in favour of pltf.'s horse, & two in favour of another horse. In an action by pltf. to recover the stakes:—Held: (1) it was a condition precedent that there should be a decision of the stewards, if practicable; (2) pltf. could not submit the question to the jury. Semble: if he could not get a decision from the stewards, & it became impossible finally to determine to whom the stakes belonged, each party might recover back his contribution.—*BROWN v. 458. Reference of estimate to A. for approval—Death of A.]—An agreement was made between a landowner & a railway co., whereby it was agreed that an estimate should be made by the co.'s engineer of the cost of completing a road, & submitted to A., the landowner's agent, "for approval, in case of difference the amount to be determined by B.," the amount, "when agreed or determined," to be paid to the landowner, "in discharge of all obligations" as to the road, & "the purchase to be completed forthwith." In Dec., 1871, A. died, & in May, 1872, the co., for the first time, sent in an estimate for the cost of completing the road. The purchase had not been completed, & neither the purchase-money nor any interest had been paid. B. was living :—Held : (1) the submission of the estimate to A. for approval was of the essence of the agreement, & inasmuch as by his death the agreement was incapable of being performed in the manner & form therein specified, the ct. could not enforce performance of it ; (2) the co. should pay interest on the purchase-money from the date of their taking possession, but no inquiry should be directed as to damages.—FIRTH v. ### SECT. 13.—REVOCATION OF AN AGREEMENT TO SUBMIT.

Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 1. A submission, unless a contrary intention is expressed therein, shall be irrevocable, except by leave of the ct. or a judge, & shall have the same effect in all respects as if it had been made an order of ct.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN WHAT CASES PARTY MAY REVOKE AGREEMENT TO SUBMIT.

A. At Common Law and in Cases not within Statutory Restrictions.

472. Distinction between general agreement to refer & submission to particular arbitrator.]—There may be an agreement to refer generally without naming the arbitrators; such an agreement was always irrevocable, & an action would always lie for its breach, although the ct. could not compel either of the parties to proceed under it. There may be an agreement to clothe a particular arbitrator with authority, & if one of the parties revoked that particular arbitrator's authority & refused to submit to him, he could not be compelled to proceed. In such a case, though not with exactitude, one might probably talk of revocation of the submission & of the submission as revocable although it was in truth a revocation of the authority of that arbitrator. In fact an agreement to refer was never revocable, for an action might have been brought upon it in respect of a breach (BOWEN, L.J.).—Re SMITH & SERVICE & NELSON & SONS (1890), 25 Q. B. 473. General agreement to refer not revocable.]—Where a contract contains an agreement to refer, one party cannot revoke such agreement & bring an action. If he does so the ct. will stay the proceedings under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11.—MOFFAT v. CORNELIUS (1878), 39 L. T. 102; 26 W. R. 914, C. A.

Before the award pltf. executed a deed revoking the arbitrator's authority & moved for an injunction to restrain a sale under the power:—Held: the injunction must be refused.—HARCOURT v. 475. ———.]—Articles of partnership between pltf. & other persons for performing a contract contained an agreement that any dispute between the partners should be settled by arbn., but there was no agreement that the submission to arbn. might be made a rule of ct. One of the partners became a liquidating debtor, & deft. was appointed his trustee, & he elected to carry on the contract. Deft. claimed to have purchased the shares of pltf. & the other partners in the undertaking. Pltf. brought an action against deft. asking for account of the partnership dealings. The main questions at issue were whether the shares of the other partners were purchased on behalf of pltf. & deft. or of deft. alone, & whether deft. had purchased the share of pltf. as well as of the other partners. Deft. moved for an order under C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 11, staying all proceedings in the action, & referring the matters in question to arbn., but before the motion was heard pltf. revoked the agreement for arbn.:—Held: although a particular submission to arbn. might be revoked, a general agreement to refer to arbn. could not be revoked by one of the parties.—PIERCY v. YOUNG (1879), 14 Ch. D. 200; 42 L. T. 710; 28 W. R. 845, C. A.

477. Submission to particular arbitrator revocable.]—Held: although deft. was bound in a bond to stand to, abide, observe, etc., the rule, etc., arbitrament, etc., yet he might countermand it, for a man cannot by his act make such authority, power or warrant not countermandable which is by the law & of its own nature countermandable; as if I submit myself to an arbitrament, although this be made by express words irrevocable, or that I grant or am bound that this shall stand irrevocably, yet it may be revoked.—VYNIOR'S CASE (1609), 8 Co. 478. —.]—It has been properly admitted that deft. could not destroy his agreement to submit to the arbn., & therefore, a remedy lies upon the bond given to secure such agreement. But it is equally clear that before the Act of 1698 a submission to arbn. might be revoked before it was executed, & there is nothing in that stat. to make it irrevocable while it continues executory. The stat. says that it shall & may be lawful for the parties to agree that their submission should be made a rule of ct., which agreement (that is, so long as it subsists as an agreement unrescinded) shall or may be entered of record, etc. After it is made a rule of ct. the party cannot indeed rescind it without incurring a breach of that rule; but till then it has its binding force as an agreement only, to submit to the award of the arbitrator, whose authority is in its nature revocable; & for the breach of which agreement the party has a remedy of another sort (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—MILNE v. It then stated that the arbitrators made their award, & thereby directed deft. to pay a certain sum therein mentioned, & alleged as a breach of the covenant that deft. did not pay the sum awarded. Plea, that before the award deft., by deed, revoked the authority of the arbitrators, of which revocation they had notice:—Held: deft. was entitled to judgment, although it appeared by the plea that he had been guilty of a breach of the covenant to abide by the award by revoking the authority of the arbitrators, pltf. being entitled to recover damages only in respect of the cause of action stated in his declaration, & not in respect of a cause of action disclosed in the plea.

The second count of the declaration stated the deed of reference, & then averred that deft. did, before the making of the award, hinder & prevent the arbitrators from making their award in this, that deft., by a certain deed in writing, signed & sealed by him, after reciting as was therein recited, did revoke the authority:—Held: this was an allegation, not of the mere legal effect of the deed, but of the fact of revocation, & it was unnecessary to state that the arbitrators had notice of the revocation, that being necessarily implied in the averment that deft. had revoked the authority.—MARSH v. 496. — Reference by order not made in action.] —On the trial of two indictments, one for perjury & the other for conspiracy between the same parties, it was arranged by the counsel on each side that verdicts of not guilty should be taken, & an order of Nisi Prius was drawn up by consent, whereby the indictments & all matters in difference between the prosecutor & deft. (including suits in Ch.) were referred to arbn., the costs of the indictments to be in the discretion of the arbitrator, but no power was given to him to alter the verdict. After various attendances before the arbitrator deft. revoked the submission & proceeded with the suits in Ch. On a rule for an attachment for contempt:—Held: (1) the instrument of reference could not be treated as a submission under the Act of 1838 so as to make it irrevocable under C. P. Act, 1833 ; (2) assuming it to be valid as an order of Nisi Prius, deft. was entitled at common law to revoke the submission, & not being made in an action, that power was not taken away by C. P. Act, 1833.—R. v. HARDEY (HARDY) (1850), 14 Q. B. 529 ; 19 L. J. Q. B. 196 ; 15 L. T. O. S. 130 ; 14 J. P. 432 ; 14 Jur. 649 ; 117 E. R. 205.

497. — Agreement for making submission rule of court—Incorporation of Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, sufficient.]—By a contract in writing it was provided that disputes between the contracting parties should be referred to arbn. The contract did not contain an express stipulation that the submission should be made a rule of ct., but by one of its clauses it was agreed that the provisions of C. L. P. Act, 1854, with regard to arbn. as far as they were applicable, should apply to the arbn. therein agreed to. A dispute arising out of the contract having been referred, one of the parties revoked the submission. The arbitrator proceeded ex p. & made his award:—Held: (1) the incorporation in the submission of the above Act was equivalent to an agreement that the submission should be made a rule of ct. ; (2) the case was within C. P. Act, 1833, s. 39, & the submission was not revocable without leave of the ct.—Re MITCHELL & IZARD & GOVERNOR OF CEYLON (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 408 ; 57 L. J. Q. B. 524 ; 59 L. T. 812 ; 36 W. 498. — Effect of Act of 1889.]—Let us consider whether s. 1 [of the Act of 1889] has made any alteration [in the state of the law at the passing of the Act]. “A submission, unless a contrary intention is expressed therein, shall be irrevocable, except by leave of the ct. or a judge.” The phrase is used which had always been used, “a submission shall be irrevocable” ; that is to say, the power of the arbitrator cannot be revoked when he has once been appointed. It does not mean that the agreement to refer is irrevocable, because that always was in the true sense of the word irrevocable. The sect. proceeds: “& shall have the same effect in all respects as if it had been made an order of the ct.,” which can only mean, “as if it had been made an order of ct. before this Act was passed.” That is the obvious meaning of the phrase, & therefore, the only effect of the sect. is that a submission is to be irrevocable in the sense in which that phrase was used before the Act, & that it is to have the same effect in all respects as if before the Act it had been made a rule of ct. What was that effect? It enabled the ct. to assist the parties to carry on their dispute before the arbitrators, when arbitrators were appointed, & to enforce the award after it had been made in the same way as if it had been a judgment of the ct. (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—Re SMITH & SERVICE & NELSON & SONS (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 545 ; 59 L. J. Q. B. 533 ; 63 L. T. 475 ; 39 W. R. 117 ; 6 T. L. R. 434 ; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 555, C. A.

501. On what grounds granted—Generally.]—To induce the ct. to permit a party to rescind his submission under C. P. Act, 1833, s. 39, strong grounds must be laid before them.

It was sought to rescind a submission on the grounds (1) that the choice of the umpire was decided by lot ; (2) that the umpire had for a pupil the son or the nephew of one of the parties concerned in the reference:—Held: the grounds were insufficient.—JAMES v. ATTWOOD (1839), 7 Scott, 841.

500 ii. — All parties should join in petition.]—Held: the fact that a petition by nineteen different cos. was not signed by all the nineteen cos., & that the appeal from the order of the judge dismissing the petition was by but one of the nineteen cos. & the other cos. were not parties to it, would have required serious consideration if the ct. had to revoke the submission to arbn.—ATLAS ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. AHMEDBOY HABIBBOY (1908), 1 L. R. 34 Bom. 1.—IND.

501 ii. — Improper allowance for expenses.]—Upon a reference to determine the damage sustained by pltf. the arbitrators awarded $2,200.65, & among other items, $40 for travelling & law expenses. Upon motion to set aside the award, the ct. refused to interfere, it being the duty of the party objecting to apply to the judge upon affidavit to revoke the submission, & not to content himself with merely objecting to the allowance of the item by the arbitrator.—CARVETH v. FORTUNE (1862), 12 C. P. 504.—CAN.

501 iii. — Claim admitted bad in other proceedings.]—Held: under the declaration in the case, pltf. clearly could not recover for damages of any kind, & pltf.'s counsel having admitted this on the application for leave to revoke, the ct. would not revoke the submission on the ground, amongst others, that such a claim was being entertained by the arbitrators.—*ROSS v. #### 504. Intention to admit doubtful evidence.]

—By order of Nisi Prius, all matters in difference in a cause were submitted to arbn., with liberty to the arbitrator to reserve questions for the opinion of the ct. on certain points of law which had been raised at the trial. Evidence was offered before him to which deft. objected. The arbitrator thought the objections weighty, but refused to decide upon them, & declared his intention to receive the evidence, stating that he should raise in his award such objections to it as appeared to him on consideration to be important, but he declined pledging himself to raise any objection in particular. Deft. thereupon moved the ct. for leave to revoke his submission, stating that the admission of the evidence would make many additional meetings necessary & cause great expense:—Held: no sufficient ground for giving leave under C. P. Act, 1833, s. 39, to revoke the submission, though the objections to evidence might be well founded.

The discretion of the ct. to which this appeal is made ought to be exercised in the most sparing & cautious manner, lest an agreement to refer, from which all might reasonably hope for a speedy end of strife, should only open the floodgates for multiplied expenses & interminable delays (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—SCOTT v. 505. — Wrongful rejection of evidence.—Mistake in law.—If an arbitrator refuse to allow a party to a reference to put in evidence certain documents which by law he is entitled to have read on his behalf, the party aggrieved may, pending the reference, apply for leave to revoke the submission. If, however, it be shown that the arbitrator has acted wrongly in law, the ct. will not necessarily make the rule absolute: but, on the contrary, will discharge it, provided it be satisfied that the arbitrator, on hearing the decision of the ct., will comply with its directions & receive the evidence.—Re HART v. DUKE (1862), 32 L. J. Q. B. 55; 9 Jur. N. S. 119; 11 W. R. 75.

506. — — ——Under a commission to take evidence abroad in an action copies of certain documents, & answers of witnesses with regard to the contents of such documents, were received by the comrs. in evidence on behalf of pltf. without objection on the part of deft., who joined in the commission. The copy documents were appended to the depositions & returned by the comrs. On an application to be allowed to revoke the submission of the action to an arbitrator:—Held: the secondary evidence of the documents having been taken under the commission, without objection on the part of deft., was receivable before an arbitrator to whom the action was referred, & who had rejected the evidence, & it was too late then to take objection on the ground that the original documents were not produced.—ROBINSON & Co. v. The arbitrator received certain evidence, which was objected to as tending to vary a contract in writing, & other evidence which was inadmissible in one view of the contract & admissible in another. The party who objected to the evidence applied for leave to revoke the submission:—Held: (1) the ct. had power to give leave to revoke the submission where it appeared that the arbitrator was going wrong in point of law even in a matter within his jurisdiction; (2) this power would be exercised unless the parties agreed to the arbitrator raising the questions in a special case for opinion of the ct.—EAST & WEST INDIA DOCK CO. v. Act, 1890, s. 141, the arbitrator's authority was not revocable without leave of ct.; (2) in view of the bkpcy. of the party appointing such leave should be given.—Re FREEMAN & KEMPSTER (1909), V. 514. — — — Mistake in law within jurisdiction.]—Where parties have agreed to refer questions in dispute between them to arbn., the mere fact that the arbitrator in the course of the proceedings is making a mistake of law in a matter within his jurisdiction does not entitle the party dissatisfied with the arbitrator's view to come to the ct. & claim as of right leave to revoke the submission. There is power to give leave to revoke the submission in such a case which may be exercised under exceptional circumstances, but it is a matter of discretion depending on the circumstances of the particular case.

An arbitrator had power by the terms of the reference to decide the question of liability before dealing with the question of damages, & the parties agreed that he should exercise such power. He accordingly did decide the question of liability before dealing with the damages:—Held: the ct. would not afterwards give the party, against whom he had decided, leave to revoke the submission on the ground that he had decided wrongly in point of law.—JAMES v. JAMES & BENDALL (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 12; 58 L. J. Q. B. 424; 61 L. T. 310; 37 W. R. 600, C. A.

518. — — — Arbitrator interested—Party's engineer.]—A contract for the construction of work for a co. provided that the parties should refer any question or dispute to the engineer of the co., whose decision was to be final & binding. The contractor moved to revoke the submission on the ground that the engineer would have to decide matters relating to his own conduct, the allegations being that he had ordered a large number of unnecessary extras & been guilty of delays:—Held: the application should be dismissed, as the question of the engineer's alleged misconduct formed no substantial part of the claim to be tried in the arbn.—Re DONKIN & LEEDS, ETC., CANAL CO. OF PROPRIETORS (1893), 9 T. L. R. 192.

519. — Party's manager.—A co. issued policies of insurance against losses by burglaries, & stipulated that claims should be settled by arbn. Pltf. had one of these policies & made a claim, & the co. claimed to appoint their manager as the arbitrator:—Held: the co. must appoint another arbitrator within a week, or the submission to arbn. must be rescinded.—Re FRANKENBERG & SECURITY Co. (1894), 10 T. L. R. 393.

520. — Evidence—Refusal of party to allow commission.—One of the parties to an arbn. applied for a rule to compel the other parties to consent to a commission to take evidence abroad, otherwise the submission to arbn. to be revoked. The application was refused.—Re DREYFUS & SONS & PAUL (1893), 9 T. L. R. 358; 37 Sol. Jo. 357.

521. — Arbitrator's jurisdiction questioned—Construction of agreement.—Pltfs., the owners of s.s. D., chartered her by charterparty, dated Apr. 26, 1911, to defts., M. & Co., to load a cargo of beans at Vladivostock, & to proceed to a port in the United Kingdom, & there deliver the cargo "agreeably to bills of lading." On June 10 a cargo of about 6,000 tons was loaded, & bills of lading made out to the order of M. & Co., or their assigns, were signed by the master & handed to M. & Co.'s representative. M. & Co. had, by a contract dated Apr. 27, 1911, sold the cargo to defts., B. Co., on the terms of a "basis delivered" contract, by clause 10 of which the contract was to be void as regarded any portion shipped which might not arrive. On June 12 defts., M. & Co., under the contract of Apr. 27, declared to B. Co. that the beans had been shipped by s.s. D. On arrival of the vessel at Liverpool, the port of discharge, M. & Co. handed to B. Co. the bills of lading indorsed against a payment. When the discharge had been completed it was alleged that there was a shortage of one hundred & seventy-one bags, & B. Co. having paid only in respect of the quantity actually delivered, M. & Co. instructed them to make a corresponding deduction from the freight, but pltfs. refused to acknowledge the claim for short delivery. A dispute having thus arisen, M. & Co. gave notice that they demanded an arbn. under a clause in the charterparty, which provided for arbn. "by arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties to this agreement, if necessary the arbitrators to appoint a third," & formally required pltfs. within seven days to appoint their arbitrator. Pltfs. did not appoint an arbitrator, & defts., after the expiry of the seven days, gave notice of the appointment of a gentleman to act as sole arbitrator. Pltfs. thereupon took out a summons for further directions, asking (inter alia) that leave be given to pltfs. to revoke the submission to arbn.:—Held: in exercise of its discretion the ct. ought not to give leave to revoke the submission to arbn.—DEN OF AIRLIE S.S. Co., LTD. v. MITSUI & Co., LTD., & BRITISH OIL & CAKE MILLS, LTD. (1912), 106 L. T. 451; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 169; 17 Com. Cas. 116, C. A.

522. Grounds for refusing to grant—Submission not by consent.—An arbitrator was appointed under Wakefield Corp'n. Waterworks Act, 1880, s. 51, by the Local Govt. Board. It was contended, on behalf of the corp'n., that the ct. had no jurisdiction to give leave to revoke the submission, for the reason that there had been no submission or consent to arbn.:—Held: leave should be refused.—Re WAKEFIELD CORPN. & WAKEFIELD UNION GUARDIANS (1888), 4 T. L. R. 561.

523. Appeal from order granting leave.—An appeal from a judge at chambers granting leave to revoke a submission to arbn. lies to the Ct. of Appeal & not to a Divisional Ct.—Re PORTLAND URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL & TILLEY & Co., [1896] 2 Q. ## SUB-SECT. 2.—BY OPERATION OF LAW.

A. By Death.

(a) Where no proviso for event of death.

524. Party dying before appointment of arbitrator.—By the terms of an agreement, if any dispute thereon should arise between the parties, it was to be referred to arbn., & each party was to appoint an arbitrator if called on by the other so to do. Disputes arose, & one of the parties died before the arbitrators were appointed:—Held: his exors. were not bound by the agreement to appoint an arbitrator.—Re PERCIVAL (1885), 2 T. L. R. 150.

525. Party dying before order of reference drawn up.—Where a reference is directed at Nisi Prius, but deft. dies before the order is drawn up, the proper course is to move for leave to enter nominal damages.—WYATT v. HOSTE (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. C. P. 98.

526. Party dying before award—Award to be delivered during life of parties—Personal representatives of deceased not bound.—An agreement was entered into for sale of land at a price to be fixed by arbitration within a limited time, & if they should not agree within that time, by an umpire, also within a limited time. The arbitrators made their award within the time limited for them, but one of the parties had previously died:—Held: (1) the award was to be delivered to the parties during their life; (2) the condition of the agreement not having been performed in this respect, specific performance interest in submission.—Held: a mutual submission fell by the death of one of the parties, notwithstanding that he had assigned his interest to a third party, who was a consenter to the submission, & who was willing to go on with it as if he were the principal, having in himself the substantial interest.—*ROBERTSON v. contract provided that, in the event of dispute in reference to the quantities or prices of additions, variations, or omissions, the items should be referred to arbn. A submission under the clause was made a rule of ct., & an award was made which was sent back in consequence of the inclusion of matters not submitted. Before any further award one party died:—Held: the proceedings should be continued in the name of the personal representative of deceased.—Re DONOVAN & BURKE, [1908] 2 I. R. 143; 42 I. L. 528. — Reference by order—How far revocation.]—Where a cause is referred to arbn., the death of one of the parties, at any time before the award made, is a revocation of the arbitrator's authority, & the ct. will set aside an award made subsequent to such death.—POTTS v. 531. — — — After verdict—How far revocation.]—If on a reference by order of Nisi Prius the submission is confined to what the verdict & judgment embrace, the death of either of the parties before award will not revoke the submission; but it is a revocation if the verdict & judgment do not embrace all matters in difference which are submitted, for if the arbitrator cannot proceed upon all matters submitted, he cannot proceed upon any.—BOWER v. of an arbitrator, such reference being authorised by an order of Nisi Prius, & deft. died after the verdict, but before the award, & the arbitrator, after such death, made his award, ordering a verdict to be entered for deft.:—Held: such award was bad, as the death of deft. was a revocation of the arbitrator's authority.

HAIGH (1823), 2 B. & C. 345; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 608; 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 40; 107 E. R. 413.

535. — — — — —.]—A verdict was taken for pltf. in Hilary Term, 1832, by consent, subject to a reference. The arbitrator made an award in favour of pltf. after the expiration of Trinity Term, deft. having died in the meantime. On motion made in the following Michaelmas Term, the ct. allowed judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc as of Trinity Term, notwithstanding more than two terms had elapsed since the verdict was taken.—MILLER v. 527 i. Party dying before award — Proviso binding personal representatives—Implied.]—Partners in a minute providing for the dissolution of the firm, with the view of dividing the assets, nominated an accountant as referee. After certain proceedings before the arbiter, one of the partners died, & his trustee & exor. appeared in the reference, in which all parties continued to plead until the accountant pronounced his award:—Held: the reference did not expire by the death of one of the parties, on the grounds that such a reference was binding on heirs, & that it had been so interpreted by the parties themselves in their actings before the arbiter.—ORRELL v. ORRELL (1859), 31 Sc. Jur. 295.—SCOT.

536 i. — — — Party one of several joint claimants—Effect on survivors—Trustees.]—Trustees entered into a reference with the representatives of a firm with whom the truster had had cash transactions. The reference contained a provision, by which the parties bound themselves & their respective heirs, exors. & successors to implement & fulfil whatever award should be issued. Before an award was issued the trustees who had entered into the reference died. Thereafter the new trustees maintained that the reference had fallen by the death of one of the contracting parties:

—Held: the contracting party being the trust, which as represented by the new trustees continued to exist notwithstanding the death of the original trustees, the submission had not fallen.—ALEXANDER'S TRUSTEES v. DYMCK'S TRUSTEES (1883), 20 Sc. L. R. 806.—SCOT.

538. Party being infant tenant for life—Effect on trustees.]—On showing cause against a rule for setting aside an award made concerning the repair of a weir upon a mill stream, it appeared that two of plffs. were trustees & guardians under a will for an infant, who was tenant for life of the property on which the weir was erected. Before the award was made, the infant died, & the award was made against two of plffs. in their character of trustees:—Held: the award was not binding, & should be set aside as far as related to the trustees.—BRISTOW v. BINNS (1823), 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 184.

539. — Arbitrator in position of valuer.]—Even at common law, the death of a party does not operate as a revocation of a submission where the arbitrator is in the situation of a person appointed by the vendor & purchaser to fix the value & price of an estate sold. In such a case the surviving party & the representative of deceased would be compellable respectively to fulfil the contract.—CALEDONIAN RY. CO. v. LOCKHART (1860), 3 Macq. 808; 3 L. T. 65; 6 Jur. One of defts., B., died before the award, & the award directed payment by his exor.:—Held: the authority to the arbitrator was not revoked by the death of B. 548. —.]—By an order of reference, a cause was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties at law & in equity, etc., so that he should publish his award by a certain day (with power to enlarge the time), ready to be delivered to the parties, or if either of them should be dead, to their personal representatives, & the arbitrator was to be at liberty to make one or more awards at his discretion. At the time of the submission two suits in equity were pending, in which the parties to the action were interested, & in which certain infants were also concerned. Before an award was made, L., one of the parties to the equity suits, died. The arbitrator made his award, whereby he ordered that a verdict should be entered for plff., damages £500, & that defts. should pay the further sum of £350, for grievances not included in the declaration:—Held: the arbitrator's authority was not revoked by the death of L.—*WRIGHTSON v. The order expressly provided that the death of any of the parties should not operate as a revocation of the arbitrator's authority, but that his award should be delivered to the personal representatives of the deceased party or parties. During the reference one of the relators, being a party thereto, died, & afterwards the arbitrator made his award, & thereby directed that the costs of the reference should be borne & paid by the parties by whom they were incurred. Pltf., one of the relators, paid the solr., who had been retained for them in the conduct of the reference, his bill of costs & brought an action for money paid against the exors. of the deceased relator, for his proportion of the costs incurred after his death, including the costs of the award:—Held: the exors. were liable in such action for their testator's proportion of the costs of the reference incurred after his death, & also of the costs of the award.—*PRIOR v. 551. Refusal of arbitrator to proceed or executor to attend—Jurisdiction of court.]—A cause & all matters in difference were referred by an order of reference to the decision of an arbitrator, the arbitrator to make & publish his award, ready to be delivered to the parties, or either of them, "or if they or either of them should be dead before the making of the award, to their respective personal representatives who should require same," on or before a certain day. Several meetings were from time to time held, but one of the parties died before the reference was concluded. After his death the arbitrator was requested to proceed with the reference, but he declined doing so, the extrix.

of the deceased party having refused to attend & protested against his proceeding:—Held: the ct. had no power to direct the arbitrator to proceed or to compel the extrix. to attend before him.—LEWIN v. HOLBROOK (1843), 11 M. & W. 110; 12 L. J. Ex. 267; 152 E. R. 736.

552. — Unless cause of action in tort.]—The parties to an action for a tort agreed before trial to refer the matter in dispute to an arbitrator. The order of reference contained a clause that the arbitrator should publish his award "ready to be delivered to the parties in difference, or such of them as require same (or their respective personal representatives, if either of the parties die before the making of the award)." After the hearing of the reference had been concluded, but before the award was made, pltf. died. The arbitrator afterwards published the award, & the exors. of pltf. having proved his will, took up the award:—Held: the cause of action being in tort died with pltf. & did not pass to his personal representatives by force of the clause above mentioned, which in an action of tort was inoperative, & the exors. were not entitled to be substituted as pltf. in place of their testator.

It was an agreement as to procedure & as to the mode of procedure. If the subject-matter of dispute is gone the agreement as to the mode of deciding it becomes invalid. The cause of action being gone, it is futile to consider what might have been the rights of the parties (BRETT, M.R.).—BOWKER v. EVANS (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 565; 54 L. J. Q. B. 421; 53 L. 553. — Other party wrongly revoking—Liability for costs.]—By order of Nisi Prius, a cause was referred to arbn., with liberty for the arbitrator to examine the parties, but the death of either was not to operate as a revocation of the reference. Pltf. died before he was examined & before the arbitrator had made his award, whereupon deft. revoked his submission on the ground, as he alleged, of his having lost the opportunity of examining pltf., but it appeared, on the evidence, that this was not the true cause:—Held: since there was no reasonable ground for the revocation, deft. must pay the costs of a trial occasioned by the termination of the reference.—SMITH v. FIELDER (1833), 10 Bing. 306; 2 Dowl. 764; 3 Moo. & S. 853; 3 L. J. C. P. 62; 131 E. R. 922.

Jan., 1885, the trustee in bkpcy. wrote to the arbitrator as follows: "I give you notice that I as trustee deny any agreement of reference or that any award therein is or will be binding on me, & so far as I have the power I revoke your authority." In the following Feb. the arbitrator made his award, & awarded to pltf. in the action a certain sum & ordered that all costs should be paid by deft. A proof for the costs having been rejected by the trustee in bkpcy. & also by the county ct. judge:—Held: (1) the bkpcy. did not operate as a revocation of the submission, & the trustee had no power to revoke the authority; (2) the creditor was entitled to prove for the costs in question.—*Re SMITH, Ex p. 562. — Arbitrator's authority coupled with interest.]—In a submission to arbn. by an order of Nisi Prius, in an action between A. & B., it was stipulated that a sum of money should be placed by B. in the hands of C., the arbitrator, to abide the event of the award. B., after placing the sum in the hands of C., became bkpt.:—Held: the submission was not revoked, nor were the assignees of B. entitled to demand back the money.—*TAYLER v. 578 i. One of parties.]—Under a co.'s charter the Govt. were required to find a right of way through private property. The charter provided for arbn. An owner of land through which the line passed acted as his own arbitrator. The Govt. arbitrators made an award to which the owner refused to subscribe. The co. entered on the land. In an action for trespass the co. pleaded as title the award. Reply, that, the owner having acted as arbitrator & being interested, the award was void :—Held : the objection of interest was one which the other side had waived, & might waive, & the owner could not take advantage of his own wrong & repudiate his own deliberate act. The objection to interest only applies to a concealed interest : here it was open & known before the submission was made.—BYRNE v. NEFD. RY. Co. (1885), 7 NEFD. L. R. 50.—NEFD.

578 ii. —.—Where, in a contract entered into between M. & B., M. was the employer & B. the employee, & all disputes were to be referred to M. as sole arbitrator :—Held : while such reference might be extremely inconvenient, there was not sufficient ground for refusing to allow the arbn. to proceed according to the terms of the arbn. clause.—*BRYCHAN v. 579 x. — Preliminary estimate of cost.]—Pltfs. sought from defts. payment of money under a contract for the erection of a dam across a river. Some extensions were decided upon, & a further agreement was entered into. Provision was made for payments according to progress estimates of defts. engineers. Completion to the satisfaction of the engineers was a condition precedent to the right to final payments. Payments according to some progress estimates were made, but further payment was withheld, on the ground that the work had not been completed according to contract. Pltfs. contended that the engineers were disqualified from acting as quasi-arbitrators between pltfs. & defts., & that pltfs. were, therefore, relieved from the necessity of satisfying the engineers as to the completion of the contract :—Held : they were not disqualified by having made a preliminary estimate of what the work should cost, the estimate not having been the basis of any action of defts.—*MERRIAM v. 579 xii. — — — — — Examination as witness.]—A contract contained a clause referring any disputes to the decision of the architect as arbiter. In the course of an action raised by the contractor, concluding for reduction of the clause of reference, & for payment, the architect was examined as a witness for defenders in regard to certain of the matters in dispute :—Held : the architect was thereby disqualified from acting as arbiter.—*DICKSON v. 579 xiv. — Person acting professionally for party on occasions.]—An award was made by a majority of arbitrators. The principal defence to an action on the award was that C., being agent of resps., was disqualified to act as their arbitrator :—Held : the evidence showed that C. was not in the continuous employ of resps., but acted for them from time to time only, in his professional capacity as a notary public, & not in any other capacity, & he was not disqualified.—*NORTH SHORE RY. 584. Members of named associations—Non-members appointed—Attendance of parties no waiver.]—A contract, headed "London Corn Trade Assocn.," for the sale by deft. to pltf. of a quantity of wheat contained a clause that all disputes from time to time arising out of the contract should be referred to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party, the two arbitrators having power to appoint a third, & "the arbitrators appointed shall be in all cases principals engaged in the corn trade as merchants, millers, factors, or brokers, & shall also be members of the London Corn Exchange, the Baltic, or the London Corn Trade Assocn., & residing in the United Kingdom." The clause also provided that either party, if dissatisfied with the award, might appeal to the committee of appeal elected for the purpose, who were to confirm the award unless four members of the committee decided otherwise. The committee of appeal consisted of five members. A dispute under the contract was referred to arbn. in accordance with the above clause, the parties attended the arbn. proceedings, the three arbitrators made an award in favour of deft., & the award was confirmed by the committee of appeal. Neither of the arbitrators appointed by the parties was a member of one or other of the three bodies above mentioned, but this fact was not known to pltf. until after the award had been confirmed on appeal. The two arbitrators had, however, on many occasions acted as arbitrators under similar contracts containing a similar arbn. clause. Pltf. having brought an action for a declaration that the award was null & void:—Held: (1) as the arbitrators were not qualified to act as arbitrators under the contract, they had no jurisdiction to determine the dispute, & the award was null & void; (2) pltf. were not estopped from relying upon the defect in the qualifications of the arbitrators appointed by deft.

Arbitrators were duly appointed. S., the arbitrator of deft., required D., the arbitrator of pltf., to join in the naming an umpire, but D. could not at that time intelligently take action. Next day D., expressing his readiness to act, confirmed a nomination by his partner of an umpire :—Held: the facts did not establish any refusal or neglect on the part of D. to act as arbitrator, such as would justify S. in naming an arbitrator in his stead.—*DIRECT U. Dft. failed to appoint an arbitrator. Thereupon pltf. purporting to act under s. 8 (b) of the above Act, appointed B. sole arbitrator. There was no notification to B. of the specific disputes which he was to decide nor any formal acceptance of the office by him, but he sat & made an award :—Held: B. was properly appointed.—*COX v. Pltfs. proceeded to arbn. before their own arbitrator after serving defts. a general agent in Melbourne with a notice to appoint an arbitrator under the above Act. Defts. moved to set aside the appointment of the arbitrator :—Held: the appointment must be set aside, on the ground that the notice required by the above Act must be served upon some person in New South Wales.—*NEW PINNACLE GROUP S. a. ——— Reference to three arbitrators.]—An agreement provided for a reference to three arbitrators, appointed by each party choosing an arbitrator & they two a third in case of dispute, or a majority of them :—Held: the agreement imported that the three arbitrators should act from the outset, & therefore, the above Act providing that a party who has appointed an arbitrator may, if the other party makes default, appoint that arbitrator as sole arbitrator did not apply.—Re STURGEON FALLS ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER CO. & STURGEON FALLS (1901), 21 C. 590. — Validity of request to nominate—Necessity for particularising matters to be arbitrated on.]—An agreement between A. & B. contained the following clauses: "In every case of any difference between the parties hereto or their representatives, whether touching the true intent or construction of this agreement or of anything therein expressed, or touching anything to be done or omitted in pursuance of this agreement, or as to any of the incidents or consequences thereof or otherwise relating to the premises, the matter in question shall be referred to arbn." "Every such reference shall be made to two persons, one to be named by each party." "If either party for fourteen days after being requested by the other party to name an arbitrator fail so to do, then both arbitrators may be named by the party making such request." Differences having arisen, A. appointed an arbitrator, but B. declined to do so on request, whereupon A. appointed a second arbitrator, & the two proceeded to hear & dispose of the matter. The appointment of the arbitrators purported to be made by A. & C. (who was said to be an incumbrancer on A.'s presumed interest under the agreement) severally, & the notice was also given by A. & C.:—Held: (1) the appointments by A., since they were several, were not vitiated by the simultaneous appointments by C.; (2) it was not necessary in the appointment of the arbitrators to particularise the matters to be arbitrated upon; (3) the request to B. to appoint an arbitrator was not rendered invalid by its requiring him to notify the appointment to the solrs. who had been acting for A. throughout the matter, instead of to A. himself.—Re HADDAN & ROUPELL (1861), 9 C. 592. — Act of 1889, s. 6 (b)—Appointment of sole arbitrator—Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1893 (c. 39).]—J., a member of an industrial society, nominated his daughter to receive his interest in the society, & died on May 19, 1898, without having revoked the nomination. Both his widow & the daughter claimed the amount standing to his credit in the books of the society. On Sept. 20 the daughter wrote a letter to the society nominating an arbitrator & asking the society to name an arbitrator to act on their behalf in accordance with one of their rules. The society took no notice of this application, & on Oct. 19 the daughter gave notice that the arbitrator named in her former letter had been appointed by her as sole arbitrator under the above sub-sect. The society replied that they would refuse to be bound by the decision of an arbitrator so appointed. On Nov. 1 the sole arbitrator gave an ex p. award in favour of the daughter. On Nov. 17 a plaint was taken out by the daughter in the ct. ct. under the above Act of 1893, s. 49, & the judge enforced the award in favour of the daughter:—Held: it was not necessary to decide whether the Act of 1889 was or was not applicable, since the plaint in the ct. ct., as the forty days mentioned in the Act of 1893, s. 49 (5), had elapsed, might be regarded as an application under that sub-sect.—*JESSOP v. #### PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

c. By whom appointed—By parties or arbitrators.]—Under a submission by four persons to two arbitrators, " & should they not agree, to choose an umpire ":—Held: the umpire should have been appointed by the parties, not by the arbitrators.—O'DOUGHERTY v. FRETWELL (1853), 11 U. C. R. 65.—CAN.

f. — Arbitrators must have authority.]—An agreement was entered into for the sale of sheep, bearing that the stock was to be taken over on valuation by two men mutually chosen, who were named; the two referees differed, & without the consent of the parties, made a devolution on an oversman:—Held: the devolution by the referees on the oversman was invalid.—MATHE- SON v. M'KENZIE (1842), 4 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1472.—SCOT.

g. — — — What constitutes authority.]—A reference in terms of a lease to "two persons of skill to be chosen mutually by the parties" means the nomination of one man of skill on each side, & does not imply in them the nomination of an umpire.—COCHRANE v. GUTHRIE (1861), 23 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 865.—SCOT.

h. — — — Where arbitrators have no express power.]—Where a reference does not fairly prohibit the appointment of an umpire, arbitrators may appoint one, though the reference provides that the award of the named arbitrators should be final.—Re BAILEY & HART (1883), 9 V. L. R. 311.—AUS.

k. How appointment made — Judicial act—Free judgment necessary.]—A reference was to two arbitrators with power to appoint an umpire, who was to make an award if the two disagreed:—Held: the parties were entitled to the free judgment of the two arbitrators in the appointment of the umpire.—Re LAWSON v. HUTCHINSON (1872), 19 84.—CAN.

l. — — — Cannot be delegated.]—The naming by arbitrators of an umpire is a judicial act which cannot legally be performed by the partners of one of the arbitrators, & his subsequent confirmation thereof is ineffectual.—*DIRECT CABLE CO. v. m. — — — — —.]—A contract provided that disputes were to be referred to the arbn. of two merchants, & that, should they be unable to agree, they should appoint an umpire. The arbitrators disagreed, & referred the case to the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, who appointed an umpire:—Held: the appointment was invalid, as the arbitrators could not delegate the power of appointment conferred on them.—SMITH v. LUDHA GHELLA DAMO- DAR (1892), L. L. R. 17 Bom. 129.—IND.

n. — — — Whether writing necessary.]—The appointment of an umpire need not be in writing, if the reference does not in terms require it.—RAY v. DURAND (1850), 1 P. R. 27.—CAN.

594. — Arbitrators signing at different times not in each other's presence.]—By deed all matters in difference were submitted to the award of A. & B., or such third person as they should appoint as umpire, by writing under their hands, to be indorsed on the submission. The submission, with a memorandum signed by A. & B. on it, appointing C. umpire, was made a rule of ct., & a rule nisi for an attachment for not fulfilling an award of C., which was regular on the face of it, was obtained. By affidavits it was made to appear that A. & B. did not sign the memorandum appointing C. at the same time, or in each other's presence. On these affidavits the ct. discharged the rule.—LORD v. 595. — One arbitrator acquiescing with reluctance in appointment by other arbitrator.]—The ct. refused to set aside an award, on the ground that the umpire, by whom it was made, had been nominated by one of two arbitrators, under a claim of right to appoint him, where it appeared that the other had, though with some reluctance & for the sake of peace, acquiesced in such nomination.—Re VINICOMBE & MORGAN (1841), 10 L. J. Q. B. 128.

596. — Judicial act — Meeting necessary — Separate signatures permissible.]—The appointment of an umpire by the arbitrators is a judicial act, & they must meet for this purpose ; but the signing of the appointment is not a judicial act & can be done separately. It is merely the record of that which they have already done in the judicial exercise of their functions.—Re HOPPER (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 367 ; 8 B. & S. 100 ; 36 L. J. Q. B. 97 ; 15 W. 597. Objection of party after appointment of umpire.]—After the time was out for moving to set aside an award made a rule of ct., the ct. granted an attachment for non-performance of it & would not drive pltf. to his action on the submission-bond on an affidavit disclosing that the arbitrators, after having appointed one umpire who refused to act, appointed another who accepted the authority, but that deft. afterwards, & before the umpire had proceeded, having objected to his appointment, because of partiality, the arbitrators acceded to the objection, & each proposed another, but could not agree on the person to be substituted, & did not in fact substitute any other, though the respective attornies agreed on a third person, in consequence of which the umpire objected to was called on by pltf.'s attorney to proceed, & made his award within time.

Here the arbitrators had executed their authority by an effectual appointment of an umpire, who accepted & acted upon the authority so conferred on him : the consent or dissent of the parties themselves afterwards to such appointment signifies nothing (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—OLIVER v. COLLINGS (1809), 11 East, 367 ; 103 E. R. 1045.

603 i. Two arbitrators were to choose a third, & the award was to be made by the three or any two of them, & each of the arbitrators proposed to the other a third, who was admitted to be a fit person. The award was made by one of the arbitrators originally named, & the person so appointed by the two:—Held: the appointment of the third arbitrator was bad, inasmuch as the choice of the third ought to have been the act of the will & judgment of the two, & matter of choice, not of chance.

The contractors objected to S. acting, & he declined to act without a judge's order, which was granted, not to take effect if M. should return by a certain day. Clause 39 provided for arbn. in certain events pursuant to C. L. P. Act, 1854. A dispute having arisen, the contractor served the corpn. with a notice to concur in the appointment of a sole arbitrator, but they declined so to do:—Held: (1) the words arbitrator & umpire as thus used were synonymous & the reference was to a single arbitrator; (2) a notice to "concur in the appointment" of an arbitrator was a good notice to appoint an arbitrator under the Act of 1889, s. 5; (3) as a general rule, in a case falling within the sect., where the conditions required by the sect. were being fulfilled, the ct. had no discretion

The contract, which provided that the parties expressly agreed to submit all disputes arising thereout to arbn., was signed by the vendors' brokers "by the authority of our principals as agents." The purchasers called upon the brokers to appoint an arbitrator. The brokers refused so to do on the ground that they as mere agents were not parties to the submission to arbn. On the application of the purchasers an order was made by a district registrar for the appointment of an arbitrator. On appeal to a judge at chambers that order was discharged. The purchasers appealed to a Divisional Ct.:—Held: (1) as there was no cause or matter pending in the High Ct., the appeal was not in a matter of practice & procedure within R. S. C., Ord. 54, r. 23, & the appeal lay to a Divisional Ct. & not to the Ct. of Appeal; (2) there being a dispute as to whether the agents were liable at all on the contract, the registrar was wrong in making an order, the effect of which would be to force them to arbitrate on the footing that they were liable.—MILLER, GIBB & CO. v. SMITH & TYRER, LTD., [1916] 1 K. B. 419; 85 L. J. K. B. 627; 114 L. T. 562; 60 Sol. Jo. 514.

631. Appointment of umpire—Parties to application—Power to require attendance of arbitrators.]—Under the special jurisdiction conferred upon the ct. by the Act of 1889, s. 5, to appoint an umpire in references falling within the sect., it is competent to the ct., where two arbitrators having liberty to appoint an umpire fail to comply with a notice under that sect. requiring them to concur in an appointment, to bring the arbitrators before it in order to ascertain their views before making an appointment, due provision being made for their costs.

A dispute having arisen upon a contract for sale the respective parties, under a submission to arbn., appointed arbitrators with power to appoint an umpire. The arbitrators having failed to comply with a notice served upon them by the purchasers under the above sect., requiring them to appoint an umpire, the purchasers issued an originating summons, to which the arbitrators were made resps., asking the ct. to appoint an umpire. The vendors were not made resps. to the summons, as they were not within the jurisdiction. The arbitrator appointed by the vendors objected that he was not a proper party to the summons & that the vendors ought to be made parties thereto. The judge in chambers made an order appointing an umpire, with liberty to the vendors to discharge the order within a given time after receiving notice thereof, the costs to be costs in the arbn., & his order was affirmed on appeal:—Held: the objection as to the form of the summons failed, & the arbitrators were the proper parties to bring before the ct. rather than the other party to the contract.—*TAYLOR v. v. ——— Under Civil Procedure Code ss. 509-523.]—In an agreement to refer certain matters no provision was made for difference of opinion between the arbitrators, by appointing an umpire. The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred, the ct., on the application of one of them, appointed an umpire. An award was made by the umpire & one arbitrator, without the concurrence of the other arbitrator:—Held: inasmuch as the agreement to refer gave the ct. no power to appoint an umpire, & required that the award should be made by the arbitrators named by the parties, s. 509 & the other sects. preceding s. 523 of Civil Procedure Code were only made applicable to cases coming under s. 523, so far as their provisions were consistent with the agreement.—MUHAMMAD ABID v. MUHAMMAD ASHGAR (1885), 1 L. R. 8 All. 64.—IND.

w. ——— Where umpire resigns after award set aside.]—An award having been set aside on the ground of the umpire's misconduct during the arbn., the umpire sent a letter resigning his position. On a summons being taken out to have a new umpire appointed by the judge:—Held: the powers & duties of the arbitrators having ceased when they made their award they were functi officio, & consequently the resignation of the umpire was meaningless, as he had no position to resign.—RE JOSEPH (1884), 1 B. C. R. 11, 38.—CAN.

r. ——— Manner of making application — Notice — Lack of authority.]—Plff. & defts. each appointed an arbitrator. The two arbitrators not being able to agree upon a third, the judge of the county ct. upon their application appointed a third. No notice was given of the intention to make such application, but it appeared that the arbitrator appointed by them was their general agent, & that on three other occasions the judge had made similar appointments. The arbitrator, however, in this case, swore that he had no authority to apply, & that on the other occasions his proceedings were sanctioned by the co.:—Held: the third arbitrator was properly appointed.—*DALY v. t. ——— Not where no submission but only mere promise to compromise.]—A covenant by which it is provided that "in the event of any dispute arising out of the construction or meaning of this agreement, the subject of the dispute shall be referred to the award & determination of three arbitrators," is not an agreement to compromise but simply a promise to compromise. The ct. is without jurisdiction to appoint the third arbitrator, & the party aggrieved can only sue for damages.—SHEDDEN FORWARDING CO. v. GRAND TRUNK RY. CO. (1913), 15 Q. P. R. 229.—CAN.

u. Appointment of umpire — Under Civil Procedure Code, s. 319 — Umpire to be selected from persons named.]—B. submitted matters in dispute on terms that an umpire should be selected from seven persons named. Arbitrators were agreed upon, & R., one of the seven persons named, was appointed umpire. R. & some of the arbitrators declined to act. Fresh arbitrators were chosen, but no umpire, & the arbitrators being equally divided in their opinion on the case, the ct. of its own motion appointed as umpire L., who was not one of the seven persons named in the submission. B. objected to L.'s appointment:—

646 v. —.—Becoming employee of one party.]—In a contract it was stipulated that all disputes should be referred to the co.'s engineer. The co.'s engineer became manager of the co.:—Held: this circumstance per se was not sufficient to disqualify him from acting as arbitrator.—PHIPPS v. EDINBURGH & GLASGOW RY. CO. (1843), 5 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1025.—SCOT.

646 vi. —.—Advising in different action between same parties.]—A. & H. entered into an agreement whereby (inter alia) H. was allowed to work minerals within a certain area, subject always to the opinion of G., a civil engineer, as arbirer. Subsequently G. (who acted as standing engineer to A.) advised him in an action against H. in regard to coal workings in a distinct but neighbouring area. H. objected to G. acting as arbirer under the agreement:—Held: G. was not disqualified.—ADDIE & SONS v. HENDERSON & DIMMACK (1879), 17 Sc. L. R. 15.—SCOT.

646 vii. —.—Arbitrator's firm becoming involved in action with one party.]—A purchaser at a sale lodged with the auctioneers £30, as security that he would fulfil his obligations. In an action by the purchaser against the auctioneers for repetition of the deposit, the auctioneers pleaded that the action was excluded by a clause in the conditions by which all disputes were referred to the determination of one of the partners of defenders' firm:—Held: as defenders' firm had taken upon themselves the defence of the action, the partner was disqualified by interest from acting as arbirer.—McDOUGALL v. LAIRD & SONS (1894), 22 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 71.—SCOT.

646 viii. —.—Arbitrator accepting official position under one party.]—By a clause of reference in a contract entered into by the town council of a burgh, the parties agreed to refer disputes which might arise under the contract to an arbirer named. The arbirer named was afterwards appointed Dean of Guild, & became ex officio a member of the town council:—Held: he was thereby disqualified from acting as arbirer.—*EDINBURGH MAGISTRATE v. By a memorandum, not under seal, indorsed on the deed after its execution, & signed by the arbitrators but not by the parties, the arbitrators agreed that the award should be delivered on or before Nov. 3:—Held: the arbitrators could not, in the absence of any power to that effect in the deed, limit the time for making their award so as to render an award made after Nov. 3 invalid.—Re MORPHETT (1845), 2 Dow. & L. 967; 14 L. The arbitrators not agreeing, the umpire before that time made an award. Deft. pleaded in bar that after that, & before Jan. 22, the arbitrators made an award, to which pltf. demurred:—Held: where the parties named the umpire & arbitrators & gave one day to both, the arbitrators' award at the time before the day was good.—*TWISLETON v. 656. Where umpire to be appointed before entering reference—Appointment after enlargement of time—What constitutes "disagreement."]—An appointment of an umpire by two arbitrators, under a power to appoint before "entering on the cause of the matters in difference," is good, though the arbitrators have, before such appointment, enlarged the time, because the enlargement of the time, being a mere arrangement for the common convenience of the arbitrators themselves, as well as of the parties concerned, cannot be said to be an entering upon the cause of the matters in difference. If one of the arbitrators insist upon producing further evidence, & the other refuse to allow it to be done, this is a sufficient "disagreement" between the arbitrators to authorise the interference of the umpire.—CUDLIFF v. WALTERS (1839), 2 Mood. & R. 232.

Annotation:—Consd. Shepherd v. Norwich Corpn. (1885), 30 Ch. D. 553.

657. ——— Death of first nominee—Second umpire appointed.]—A cause was referred to two arbitrators, who were empowered to appoint an umpire before they entered upon the reference, who should be called in in case they disagreed. The two arbitrators accordingly appointed S. as umpire, & proceeded in the reference. S. having died, the two arbitrators appointed H., who ultimately made an award:—Held: the award must be set aside, as the arbitrators had no authority to appoint H., their power to appoint being restricted to their doing so before they had entered upon the arbn.—MACNAMARA v. GINGER (1844), 2 L. T. O. S. 128; 3 L. T. O. S. 208.

658. Where umpire to decide in event of disagreement of arbitrators—Appointment made before entering on reference.]—Arbitrators having power to choose an umpire may choose one the instant they begin to take the matter into consideration, & this is the fairest way of choosing an umpire.—ROE d. WOOD v. DOE (1788), 2 Term Rep. 644; 100 E. R. 347.

660. ———.]—On a submission to the arbn. of two persons, with power to them, if they should not agree, to appoint a third person "to be umpire in or to concur & join with them in considering & determining all or any of the matters referred," there is a power to appoint such third person before any difference has arisen & before any proceedings have been taken on the reference; & that is, indeed, the proper course to pursue, & such third person when so appointed is not a third arbitrator, but an umpire. The effect of his appointment is that he is to sit with the arbitrators & hear & consider the matters referred, & if they do not agree in an award, to make an award upon all matters referred, & not merely those on which they do not agree; & it is sufficient to enable him so to act that at the conclusion of the evidence they arrive at different opinions on some of the matters referred; nor need he, if the time for making the award had expired, wait to see if they ever could agree; & on the other hand, their sitting with him till the time has expired & not then repudiating his authority is a tacit exercise of their power to enlarge the time for making the award, so as to enable him to make it.—WINTERINGHAM v. ROBERTSON (1858), 27 L. J. Ex. 301.

PART II. SECT. 3.

656 i. Where umpire to be appointed before entering reference—Appointment after disagreement.]—A stat. directed that each party should choose an arbitrator, & that the two arbitrators so chosen should select an umpire, & that the three so selected should determine the matter in controversy, the decision agreed on by two of them to be binding. The two arbitrators attempted, without appointing an umpire, to make the appraisement; but, disagreeing, finally appointed an umpire. An appraisement agreed upon by this umpire & one of the others was sustained.—Re KENNY (1856), 1 Thom. 14.—CAN.

656 ii. ——— Reference cannot start till after appointment.]—Where the terms of a reference provide for the appointment of an umpire before the arbitrators enter upon the reference, until the umpire is appointed, the reference cannot proceed.—*CHOONI LAL v. 658 iii. ———.]—What constitutes "disagreement."—An outgoing & incoming tenant executed a reference to two persons as joint arbiters for fixing the price of certain subjects which the former had sold to the latter, with power to the arbiters, "in the case of their differing in opinion," to appoint an oversman. The arbiters selected an oversman, & came to an agreement as to all but one of the items, as to which one of the arbiters desired to have evidence from skilled persons:—Held: the arbiters had differed within the meaning of the reference, & were bound to execute a minute of devolution on the oversman.—SINCLAIR v. FRASER, ETC. (1884), 11 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1139.—SCOT.

658 iv. ——— Appointment before disagreement.]—A matter was referred to two arbitrators, with power to select an umpire to act with them in case they could not agree. The arbitrators appointed A., who sat with them & joined in the award though they did not disagree:—Held: the arbitrators had no right to appoint A.—TURNER v. BURT (1885), 24 N. B. R. 547.—CAN.

658 v. ——— Award before time limit imposed on arbitrators.]—An award of umpirage is valid, though made before the time limited for the award of the arbitrators, if they disagree & do not make an award afterwards.—RAY v. DURAND (1850), 1 P. R. 27.—CAN.

658 vi. ——— Effect of appointment.]—Where under a submission it was provided that arbitrators should appoint an umpire in case of disagreement:—Held: their appointing such an umpire was sufficient evidence of their having disagreed, without any allegation of that fact on affidavit.—WHITE v. KIRBY (1869), 2 Ch. Ch. 452.—CAN.

Sect. 3.—Time for appointment & commencement of umpire's authority. Sect. 4: Sub-sect. 1.]

661. Umpire named in submission—Time limit for award.]—If a submission be made to the award of certain arbitrators, & if they disagree, then to the umpirage of S., so that the award or the umpirage be made before May 1, the umpire cannot make any award until the disagreement of the arbitrators, & the arbitrators can make their award at any time before such day, & no time is limited for the umpire & his power is simply void. —BARBER v. GILES (1618), 1 Roll. Abr. 261, pl. 2.

662. — Time for award & umpirage limited to same day.]—If a submission be to arbitrators, & if they disagree, then to an umpire, & the award & umpirage are limited to the same day, the power of the umpire is void, unless the arbitrators disagreed & declared they would not intermeddle any more; & pltf., in such case, must show, in his declaration, the cause why the arbitrators could not make their award. —COPPIN (COPPING) v. HURNARD (HARRIARD, HERNALTY, HERNALL) (1669), 2 Wms. Saund. 127; 1 Lev. 285; T. Raym. 187; 1 Sid. 455; 2 Keb. 619; 1 Mod. Rep. 15; 85 E. R. 849.

663. — No express admission of disagreement.]—By a reference all matters in dispute between the parties were submitted to the determination of two arbitrators, & in case of their not agreeing, to an umpire, the award or umpirage to be delivered on or before a stated date. The umpire made an award without the express admission of the arbitrators that they could not agree. The ct. refused to set it aside. —HILL v. MARSHALL (1827), 5 L. J. O. S. C. P. 161.

664. — Necessity for formal notice of disagreement.]—By the terms of a submission it was agreed between the parties that each should appoint his own arbitrator, who in the event of disagreement should appoint an umpire, & the award was to be given not later than July 1, whether by the two arbitrators or the umpire. An umpire having been appointed, the arbitrators subsequently requested the umpire verbally to make his award, as they themselves would be unable to agree, which award was duly delivered on June 10. On a motion to set aside the award, on the ground that the umpire had delivered his award before the expiry of the time limit under the submission, without a written notice from the arbitrators:—Held: as the agreement contemplated two sets of judges, the agreement contemplated that the umpire would have to act before July 1 if it became evident that the arbitrators could not agree, & the motion must be dismissed. Qu.: whether, in a case where the Act of 1889, Sched. I. (d) applied, it would be necessary to have a formal written notice. —BIGLIN v. CLARK (1905), 19 Sol. Jo. 204, D. C.

665. — Umpire allowed additional time—Whether necessary to state disagreement.]—Submission to the arbitrament of two, & in case they disagree to the umpirage of a third, so that the arbitrators make their award on or before a day certain, & the umpire, if they should differ, before a subsequent day. The umpire made his award before the time given to the arbitrators expired:—Held: the umpirage need not state that the arbitrators had disagreed. —SPRIGENS v. NASH (1816), 5 M. & S. 193; 105 E. R. 1021.

666. — Appointment before time limit fixed for arbitrators' award.]—Two arbitrators were to make an award by Aug. 20, or such other day as they should appoint, & in case they disagreed an umpire was to decide by Sept. 20 or such other day as he should appoint. The arbitrators appointed an umpire before Sept. 20 & enlarged their time to Nov. 1, & in Oct. gave the umpire notice of their being unable to agree. In Sept. the umpire enlarged his time till Dec., in which month he made his award:—Held: the umpire was properly appointed before Sept. 20, in order that he might extend the time for his award & so keep his power alive in case of disagreement between the arbitrators. —Re DODINGTON & BAILWARD (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 591; 7 Dowl. 640; 7 Scott, 733; 8 L. J. C. P. 331; 132 E. R. 1227.

667. Where umpire to decide if arbitrators fail to do so within time limit—Same time limit for umpire—Appointment before expiry to time limit.]—A. promised to stand to the arbitrament of S. & D. if they made their arbitrament & award within ten days, & if they did not make their award within ten days, that if they nominated an umpire, & he made an award within the ten days, that then, etc. S. & D. did not make any award within ten days, but the fourth day after the submission they nominated N. to be umpire, who made an award within the ten days. Dft. would not perform the award, wherefore pltf. brought an action upon an assumpsit:—Held: the action would lie, the agreement being that if an arbitrament & award be made within ten days by the first arbitrators or by the umpire, for the first arbitrators might examine the matter for two or three days, & if they could not make any award, then the umpire should have the rest of the ten days to make the award. —FIAL (FYALL) v. VARIER (1613), Godb. 241; 1 Roll. Abr. 261, pl. 3; 78 E. R. 140.

668. — Additional time given for appointment of umpire—Appointment made before time limit for award.]—On a submission to arbn., so as the arbitrators make their award on July 20, or choose an umpire before July 25, the appointment of an umpire before July 20 is void if the arbitrators make an award before their time expires, for the appointment should not be made till after the award; but it is good if they make no award at all. —*JENNINGS v. 669. — No time limit for umpire—Award made before expiry of arbitrators' time limit bad.]—Where a submission provides that, if the arbitrators shall not make their award to-morrow, then the umpire shall make it, the arbitrators have the whole of the named day to make their award, & the umpire has no power to make his award till the day is ended; hence his award, if made on the same day, is bad. —*BARNARD v. 670. — Appointment good.]—On a submission to arbn. on condition that, if the arbitrator do not make an award on or before Feb. 19, he may choose an umpire, the arbitrator may choose an umpire before that day; but an award made by the umpire on that day is void, unless it appear that the arbitrator had made no award. —*DONAVAN (DELLOVAN, DENOVAN) v. The arbitrators met, but did not make an award, nor choose an umpire, before or on June 21; but they appointed an umpire before June 28, & the umpire & arbitrators made a joint award before June 28:—Held: the award was good, for the power to appoint an umpire did not begin till the arbitrators failed to make an award on June 21.—BECK v. The arbitrators made no award by Mar. 1, & chose an umpire on Mar. 14, who made his umpirage on Mar. 24:—Held: while it was very convenient for arbitrators to begin by appointing an umpire, yet if not expressly restrained they might choose an umpire at any time within the period limited for his umpirage, whether before or after the time limited for making their own award.—HARDING v. On Aug. 25

the arbitrators further extended the time for making the award by the arbitrators to Sept. 10 & for the umpire to Sept. 20. On Sept. 20 the umpire extended the time for making his award to Sept. 30 & on that date he again extended the time to Oct. 10. On Oct. 7 he made & published the award on which plff.’s action was brought:—Held: under Arbn. award to be made within a limited time. The declaration, after setting out the condition, stated that before that time expired the parties to the bond, by deed, agreed to give the arbitrators further time for making the award, & that an award was made within the extended time, & alleged non-performance:—Held: the action was maintainable upon the bond.—*GREIG v. 684. ———.]—On a compulsory reference under C. L. P. Act, 1854, it is no objection to entering up judgment on the award, under s. 3, that the award was made more than three months after the arbitrator entered on the reference, though the order of reference names no time, & no written consent for enlarging the time has been given by the parties, if it appear that the parties have, within a month before the making of the award, acted upon the reference as still subsisting, such acting estopping them from saying that the circumstances necessary to give jurisdiction to the arbitrator did not exist.—*TYERMAN v. 682 ii. ——— After previous enlargement by rule—New submission.]—A verdict was taken subject to reference, the time was enlarged by rule before the period limited for the award expired, & afterwards by consent again enlarged:—Held: the award was good under the last submission, although it would have been invalid if made under the rule.—CHARLES v. HICKSON (1840), 1 Ont. Dig. 100, 101.—CAN.

682 iii. ——— Parol.]—A deed of submission limited the time within which the arbitrator should make his award, but gave no power to enlarge that time. The parties verbally agreed to enlarge the time:—Held: an award made within the enlarged time was good.—GILLANDERS v. ROSSMORE (LORD) (1835), 1 Jo. Ex. Ir. 504.—IR.

682 iv. ———.]—Held: a verbal consent to an enlargement of the time for making an award is sufficient.—JONES v. PRENTICE (1866), 2 C. L. J. O. S. 205.—CAN.

682 v. ——— Consent by attorneys — Whether new parol submission.]—Differences were submitted to arbn. The award was to be made on or before May 1, 1877, or such further day as the arbitrators might indorse from time to time on the order. The time for making the award was extended by the arbitrators till Sept. 1, 1877. On Aug. 31, 1877, the attorneys for pltf. & defts., by consent indorsed on the rule, extended the time till Sept. 8. On Sept. 7 the arbitrators made their award:—Held: where the parties, through their attorneys, consent to extend the time for making an award under a rule of reference, such consent does not operate as a new submission, but is an enlargement of the time & a continuation to the extended period of the authority of the arbitrators, & therefore, an award made within the extended period is an award valid & binding on the parties.—OAKES v. HALIFAX CITY (1879), 4 S. C. R. 640.—CAN.

686 i. By waiver or acquiescence—Attendance before arbitrator after expiry of time.]—A submission was entered into requiring decision within three months. The three months expired. No decision having been pronounced, the parties indorsed on the deed a minute of renewal. Three months again expired without a decision, & the parties continued the discussion before the arbiters. Thereafter A. insisted in a wakening of the action, which, prior to the submission, he had brought:—Held: under the terms of the minute of renewal, & the conduct of parties, the submission subsisted to the effect of barring any further procedure.—HILL v. DUNDEE, PERTH & ABERDEEN RY. JUNCTION CO. (1852), 24 Sc. Jur. 642.—SCOT.

686 ii. ———.]—One of the parties to a submission brought a reduction of the decree-arbitral on the ground that the submission had lapsed in consequence of the arbiter having neglected to prorogate it:—Held: pursuer was barred from pleading want of prorogation, because the parties had proceeded to plead before the arbiter long after the date of the alleged lapse of the submission.—PAUL v. HENDERSON (1867), 5 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 613.—SCOT.

685. Assent to adjournment—Whether new parol submission.]—Semble: (1) neither s. 9 nor s. 15 of C. L. P. Act, 1854 (as to enlargement of time for making the award) applied to orders of reference made by consent; (2) even where s. 15 did apply, the attendance of the parties before the arbitrator after the time mentioned therein had expired, & their assent to an indefinite adjournment, for the purpose of his making an award, might amount to evidence of a new parol submission for an award to be made in any reasonable time.—WATSON v. BENNETT (1860), 5 H. & N. 831; 157 E. R. 1412; sub nom. BENNETT v. WATSON, 29 L. J. Ex. 357.

Attendance before arbitrator after expiry of time—Taking up award made out of time.]—Semble: if parties attend before an arbitrator, after the time for making his award has expired, & one take up an award so made, he does not thereby admit that the arbitrator had authority to make the award (LORD CHELMSFORD, C.).—DARNLEY (EARL) v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. CO. (1867), 1 L. R. 2 H. L. 43; 36 L. J. Ch. 404; 16 L. T. 217; 15 W. R. 817, H. L.

687. ——— Whether new parol submission.]—An award bad, as being made out of time, is not cured by the party impeaching it having attended the first of several meetings after the expiration of the period limited in the order of reference. Such attendances are only good pro tanto, & do not justify the arbitrator in going on when the parties are absent. Nor do they constitute a parol submission to a fresh arbn. The later meetings take place on the terms of the original submission.—DUNSTAN v. NORTON (1866), 13 L. T. 722.

688. ——— Under protest.]—Where an umpire appointed under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), without enlarging his time under the Act, proceeded in the reference after the time for making his award had expired, & a party attended before him under protest, but nevertheless cross-examined his adversary's witnesses & called wit-

On the last day the arbitrators were ready to make the award, but at deft.'s request put it off—all parties, however supposed that the time fixed by the submission would not expire till the next day. The next day the arbitrators heard both parties on oath & made an award about an hour after midnight:—Held: assumpsit on a parol submission was maintainable to recover the sum awarded, & the extension of the time operated as a parol submission.—HULL v. ALWAY (1835), 4 O. S. 375.—CAN.

687 ii. ———.]—Where the time for making an award has expired, & the parties afterwards meet by consent, such meetings operate as a mere parol submission, which is revocable; & if revoked, the time for making an award cannot afterwards be enlarged by the ct.—RUTHVEN v. Davies v. Price (1864), 11 L. T. 203.

689. — Implied consent to extension of time.] Defts. in an extent in aid agreed to submit to arbn. the question of the amount of what was due to the prosecutor, provided the award was made by a given time. The arbitrator did not make his award till after the expiration of a further period, which it had been agreed to extend the time, a consequence of defts. having delayed to furnish him with the name of a trustee, which was required as part of the award, & defts. solr. afterwards wrote a letter requiring that the arbitrator would take into consideration matters not before him during the reference, which was refused, as the reference was considered to be closed:—Held: in the circumstances the delay in making the award had not invalidated it, as being made after the expiration of the arbitrator's authority, for the act of defts. & the solr.'s letter were equivalent to consent to extend the time.—R. v. HILL (1819), 10 B. & C. 636; 146 E. R. 1085.

690. — Consent to enlarge.]—If the parties to an arbn. by the act of ct., which gives no power to enlarge the authority of the arbitrator, consent to the enlargement of that authority, such consent will constitute a sufficient agreement to maintain an action for the non-performance of an award made pursuant to the enlarged authority.—ANON. (1827), 5 L. #### PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.

692 i. Arbitrator with power to enlarge—Enlargement by other arbitrators substituted under provisions of submission.]

—A reference provided for the appointment by A. & B. of two arbitrators, who were, before proceeding with the reference, to appoint a third, & that the "last" award should be made before July, 1843, or such other time as any two arbitrators should appoint, & that any two should have power to extend the time for making the "last" award, whether the time had previously expired or not; a master of Q. B. was, "as soon as conveniently might be" after the reference, to appoint an umpire, who was to act if no two of the arbitrators should agree; if A.'s or B.'s arbitrator should be unwilling, etc., to act, the third arbitrator or the umpire was to appoint a proper person to be arbitrator in his stead. The arbn. expired in July, no award whatever having been made under it. A's arbitrator declined to act. Neither third arbitrator nor umpire had been appointed. Some time after, the master of Q. B. being applied to by B., appointed an umpire who nominated an arbitrator for A., who, in conjunction with B.'s arbitrator, nominated a third, & extended the time:—Held: the time for the reference was duly extended.—DIMSDALE v. ROBERTSON (1844), 7 L. Eq. R. 536; 2 Jo. & Lat. 58.—IR.

692 ii. — Enlargement must be made within time limit of submission.]—Where an order of reference to an arbitrator fixed three months' time for the award, & also empowered the arbitrator to extend the time for such submission from time to time by endorsement of the office copy of the order:—Held: the arbitrator could only extend the time before the time originally fixed for making the award had expired.—Co-OPERATIVE HINDUSTAN BANK, LTD. v. BHOLA NATH BOROOAH (1914), 19 C. W. N. 165.—IND.

692 iii. — No power to enlarge umpire's time limit.]—An agreement for submission of matters in difference to the award, etc., of M. & B., & in case they disagreed or failed to make their award before Aug. then next, then to the award, etc., of such umpire as the arbitrators should nominate & appoint, "so as the arbitrators or umpire do make & publish his & their award ready to be delivered on or before Aug. 10 next, or on or before any other day to which the arbitrators, or umpire shall, by writing indorsed on these

693. — Consent to enlarge.]—If an arbitrator has power to enlarge the time for making his award to any other day, the ct. will expound it to mean to any other days.—BARRETT v. PARRY (1812), 4 Taunt. 658; 128 E. R. 489.

694. — Defect in clause giving power.]—Pltf. & defts. agreed that in a certain event H. should say, by his award in writing, to be delivered "on or before Dec. 30 next, or on some such ulterior day as H., by a memorandum in writing under his hand to be indorsed thereon," (omitting the words "shall appoint,") what, if anything, should be paid to K.:—Held: there was a sufficient power to enable the arbitrator to enlarge the time.—KIRK v. UNWIN (1851), 6 Exch. 908; 2 L. M. & P. 519; 20 L. J. Ex. 345; 18 L. T. O. S. 64; 155 E. R. 815.

695. Umpire—Power to enlarge.]—Where by agreement of reference a cause & all matters in dispute were referred to two arbitrators, provided they made their award on a certain day, & power was given them to enlarge the time for making their award, & in case of their non-agreement they were to choose an umpire, who should have power to make the award "at the time & in manner aforesaid":—Held: these words gave the umpire power to enlarge the time by his single authority in the same manner as the arbitrators might have done.—Re VINICOMBE & MORGAN (1841), 10 L. J. Q. B. 128.

696. — Power to arbitrators only.]—A deed of submission was entered into to A. & B., & in the event of their differing in opinion, to any umpire they might appoint, & the parties agreed to submit to "whatever the arbitrators or umpire should determine by an award or awards interim or final," & gave powers to them to enlarge the time. Within the last enlargement of time made by A. & B. they delivered no award, but having agreed upon all the matters except two, they appointed C. as umpire in & concerning those two matters, & to that extent devolved upon him all the powers competent to an umpire. C. then presents, enlarge the time for making such award or umpirage." On July 29 the arbitrators appointed J. as umpire, & on the same day, by indorsement on the award, extended the time for making the award by the arbitrators from Aug. 1 to the 25th & for the umpire from Aug. 10 to the 30th. On Aug. 25 the arbitrators further extended the time for making the award by the arbitrators to Sept. 10 & for the umpire to Sept. 20:—Held: the arbitrators had no authority to extend the time within which the umpire could make his award.—HOLMES v. TAYLOR (1900), 33 N. S. L. R. 415.—CAN.

enlarged the time for making the award generally, & within that time, but after the expiry of the last enlargement made by themselves, A. & B. delivered their award regarding those matters which they had not referred to the umpire:—Held: the award of the arbitrators was not within the proper time, for the enlargement made by the umpire was not applicable to their award, being beyond his powers as regarded them.—LANG v. BROWN (1855), 25 L. T. O. S. 297, H. L.

697. How enlargement made—Indorsement on order.]—Where a cause was referred under a judge's order with a proviso that the arbitrator should make his award on or before a day certain, but, if he should not be then prepared, that the time should be enlarged from time to time, as he might require, & a judge of the ct. might think reasonable & just:—Held: the time for making the award was duly enlarged by the arbitrator indorsing on the order, on the day preceding the expiration of the original time, that he required further time, although the judge's order granting such further time was not obtained until a day subsequent.—REID v. FRYATT (1813), 1 M. & S. 1; 105 E. R. 1.

GAUNTLETT* (1841), 3 Man. & G. 550; 1 Dowl. N. S. 276; 4 Scott, N. R. 220; 133 E. R. 1260.

699. — Indorsement on copy order.]—Qu.: whether the indorsement of an extension of time by an arbitrator, upon a duplicate copy of order of reference, is good, the order of reference giving power to enlarge, such enlargement "to be certified by his indorsement hereon."—SHOTHER v. STEPHENSON (1847), 8 L. T. O. S. 393.

700. — Indorsement on submission — Not stamped—Acquiescence.]—An award, upon which pltf. sought to recover, was not made within the time prescribed by the condition of the arbn. bond. Pltf. relied on a signed memorandum on the arbn. bond whereby the parties within named, by themselves or their agents, agreed to enlarge the time. The memorandum was not stamped:—Held: the memorandum not being stamped could not assist pltf., who was rightly non-suited.—STEPHENS v. LOWE, STEPHENS v. STRICK (1832), 9 Bing. 32; 2 Moo. & S. 44; 1 L. J. C. P. 150; 131 E. R. 526.

701. — Directions of indorsement not carried out—Waiver.]—An arbitrator, who had power to enlarge the time for making his award by indorsement on the order of reference, made the following indorsement: "I direct that a rule of this ct. shall be applied for by counsel's hand to enlarge the time of making my award." No such rule was applied for; but the parties subsequently attended meetings before the arbitrator, & made no objection to the regularity of the enlargement:—Held: (1) the indorsement was itself a sufficient enlargement of the time; (2) if it were not, the irregularity had been waived.—HALLETT v. HALLETT

700 i. How enlargement made—Indorsement on paper connected with submission—Waiver.]—An arbitrator was required to make his award before a date fixed, or on such further day as the arbitrator might from time to time enlarge the time for making his award in writing under his hand indorsed on the agreement. Two extensions of time for making the award were written upon another paper among the papers connected with the arbn. & either inside or outside the agreement of submission:—Held: the irregularity referred to was not waived by the writing of a letter to the arbitrator objecting to the award on other grounds, it not being shown that at the time the letter was written either pltf. or his solr. had knowledge that the extension of time had not been properly made.—*MACKAY v. 702. — Order for enlargement—Waiver.]—By an order of reference the award was to be made by a given day, or such further time as the arbitrator should appoint, by indorsement on the order. The arbitrator enlarged the time, & before the expiration of the extended period pltf., at his request, obtained a judge's order for a further enlargement; & the arbitrator afterwards, & without any indorsement of the second enlargement on the original order, made his award:—Held: the consent of parties to the enlargement was a waiver of the irregularity & rendered the award valid.—LEGGERT v. FINLAY (1829), 6 Bing. 255; 3 Moo. & P. 629; 8 L. J. O. S. C. P. 52; 130 E. R. 1278.

703. — Appointment of subsequent meeting—Waiver by failure to object.]—A cause was referred by order of Nisi Prius to the decision of an arbitrator, so as he made his award before the fourth day of Easter term, with power to enlarge the time, but the order did not direct in what mode the time was to be enlarged. Two days before the time had expired the arbitrator, in the presence of both parties, appointed another meeting on June 29, on which day, one of the parties not having attended, the arbitrator made his award:—Held: the appointment of a further day for the reference, neither party making any objection to it, amounted to a de facto enlargement of the time.—BURLEY v. STEPHENS (STEVENS) (1836), 1 M. & W. 156; 4 Dowl. 770; 1 Gale, 374; Tyr. & Gr. 413; 5 L. J. Ex. 92; 150 E. R. 386.

The arbitrators, before appointing an umpire, enlarged the time & afterwards held a meeting, at which the parties attended:—Held: the parties, being aware of these facts & having afterwards attended, could not afterwards make any objection on the ground of the enlargement of the time having been made before the appointment of the umpire.—Re HICK (1819), 8 Taunt. 694; 129 E. the ct. should order:—Held: the award not being made within the limited time, & the time being enlarged by the arbitrator, it was necessary to obtain a judge's order sanctioning the enlargement before any award was made.

Where, under such an order of reference, there were several attendances before the arbitrator after the time originally limited, though within the time of enlargement made by the arbitrator alone, but the arbitrator had made a further enlargement after the last attendance before him, & there was no judge's order to sanction any of the enlargements:—Held: if the attendance of deft. cured the previous enlargements without authority, the last enlargement was made without even any implied authority, & the award was void.—MASON v. WALLIS (1829), 10 B. & C. 107; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 85; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 109; 109 E. R. 391.

The arbitrator made an enlargement, but it was not confirmed by a judge's order, & afterwards two orders for enlargement were made by a baron of the ct., with the consent of the parties, but these were not indorsed by the arbitrator:—Held: an award made before the expiration of the time limited by the last order was valid.—*BENWELL v. 708. Necessity for notice.—Where an award appears to have been made out of the time originally given to the arbitrator by the rule of ct., but the rule reserved to him the power of enlarging the time, it is not enough for obtaining an attachment for non-performance of the award that the arbitrator states in his award that he had enlarged the time, without verifying the fact by affidavit, & it should also appear that deft. had notice of such enlargement of the time within which the award was made, when served with the rule for the attachment.—*DAVIS v. 710. — Knowledge sufficient—Umpire.—An umpire may enlarge the time for making the award though the time for entering on his umpirage has not arrived.

Notice in writing or in any particular form of the enlargement of the time for making the award by the umpire is not necessary, knowledge, not notice, of the fact being all that is required.—Re DODINGTON & BAILWARD (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 591; 7 Dowl. 640; 7 Scott, 733; 8 L. J. C. P. 331; 132 E. R. 1227.

Pltf. died before the award was made, & after his death the arbitrator enlarged the time for making the award:—Held: the award made within the enlarged time was good.—*TYLER v. 746. ———.—An arbitrator or umpire has no power to fix his own fee in the award, & to make the taking up of the award conditional upon the payment of the fee, unless the submission specifically give him that power.

r. Legality of stipulating for or accepting remuneration.—After the acceptance of a submission, the parties bound themselves on the requisition of the arbiters to make payment of remuneration to the arbiters, who were professional accountants, & who refused to give out their notes till this was done, not only for their professional services, but for the time & trouble bestowed by them in the matters falling under the submission, a third party being to fix the amount thereof in case of difference of opinion:—Held: the stipulation in question did not imply corruption.—*FRASER v. The arbitrators appointed A., who joined in the award, though it did not appear they had been unable to agree. An award was made in which was included an amount for the fees of A.:—Held: as the sum included for A.'s fees was so mixed up with the total sum awarded that it could not be separated from it, the award was bad.—*TURNER v. ordered "that the costs of the award shall be paid by deft., which costs I do assess at £39 17s. 4d." Part of this amount was for the arbitrator's remuneration, & part was the sum charged by an attorney, who had been employed by the arbitrator (a layman) in examining the witnesses & in framing the award, which was very special. Def't. had not applied to have the costs of the award taxed, & they had not been taxed. On a motion for an attachment to compel payment:—Held: (1) an arbitrator might, in the first instance, name the amount of his costs in the award; (2) his charges were not, as a matter of course, open to taxation, & if the party affected objected to them, he must, at all events, proceed with diligence to procure their taxation; (3) as the arbitrator was a layman, it was almost of necessity that an attorney should be employed, & as no objection to his being employed was made on the part of def't. during the reference, the latter must be taken to have assented to so reasonable a course.—THRELFALL v. FANSHAW (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 340; 19 L. J. Q. B. 334; 15 L. T. O. S. 210.

748. —By an agreement of reference matters were referred to two arbitrators, & if they failed to make an award within a limited time, to an umpire. The costs of the reference & award & umpirage were to be in the discretion of the arbitrators & umpire respectively. The parties agreed that the umpire should sit with the arbitrators, so that, if they did not make an award, it would not be necessary for him to rehear the evidence. The arbitrators did not conclude the reference within the time limited. The parties then further agreed that the arbitrators should sit with the umpire, & assist him in taking the evidence, which they did. The award ordered the losing party to pay to the other the costs "of the umpirage & of this my award," & that each party should "pay their own costs of the reference other than the costs of my umpirage & of this my award." The umpire included the charges of the two arbitrators in his costs of umpirage & award, & same were paid by the successful party on taking up the award:—Held: the charges of the arbitrators were costs of the umpirage, & not costs of the reference, & the successful party was entitled to have such amount as was duly charged by the arbitrators, & paid by him on taking up the award, allowed on the taxation of costs, & to have same repaid to him by his opponent.—ELLISON v. ACKROYD (1850), 20 L. J. Q. B. 193; 16 L. T. O. S. 346.

749. —No power to fix own fees & costs.]—Disputes arising out of two partnerships were referred, by agreement, to an arbitrator, who was also appointed by the parties receiver of the property of one of the partnerships, & had power to get in the estate, & dispose of it as he might think best for the parties, & the costs of the reference & award were left to his discretion. The arbitrator concluded his award by certifying that he had deducted the costs of the award out of the moneys which he had received as receiver:—Held: the award was bad, because the arbitrator had no power to fix his own fees & pay his own costs out of the moneys he had received.—ROBERTS v. EBERHARDT (1858), 3 C. B. N. S. 482; 28 L. J. C. P. 74; 32 L. T. O. S. 36; 4 Jur. N. S. 898; 6 W. R. 793; 140 E. R. 829, Ex. Ch.

750. Usual practice.]—It is true that an arbitrator cannot conclusively determine the amount of his own fee. But the invariable rule & practice of the profession, & I believe, of lay arbitrators also, is, that the arbitrator fixes, in the first instance, the amount of his own fee, & retains the award until such fee is paid (WATSON, B.).—ROBERTS v. EBERHARDT (1858), 3 C. B. N. S. 482; 28 L. J. C. P. 74; 32 L. T. O. S. 36; 4 Jur. N. S. 898; 6 W. R. 793; 140 E. R. 829, Ex. Ch.

751. Whether award enforceable.]—By an agreement of reference between P. & S. costs were in the discretion of the arbitrator. The award directed that £149 5s. 7d., being the costs of the award, should be paid by the parties in the following proportions: that £25 should be paid by P. to certain attorneys forthwith & £124 5s. 7d., the residue, should be paid by S. in like manner, & if P. paid any part of the £124 5s. 7d., that S. should repay it to him. On an application by P. for a rule calling on S. to pay the several sums:—Held: as the arbitrator had fixed in the award the amount payable to himself the matter was too doubtful to grant a rule.—PARKINSON v. SMITH (1861), 30 L. J. Q. B. 178; 9 W. R. 340.

752. Under Act of 1889, s. 2—Must be ascertained or stated in award.]—The amount of the costs directed to be paid by the arbitrators or umpire, pursuant to Sched. I. (i.) of the above Act, must be ascertained & stated in & by the award itself; otherwise the costs of the reference & award, including the arbitrators' fees, are liable to taxation in the ordinary course.—Re PREBBLE & ROBINSON, [1892] 2 Q. 764. — Excessive charges disallowed.]—An action was referred to arbn., the costs of the arbn. & award to abide the event. The arbitrators awarded in favour of pltf., who, in order to take up the award, paid their charges, which were exorbitant. The master, on taxation of pltf.'s costs, refused to allow the full charge paid by pltf. :—Held : the excessive charge was properly disallowed.—BARNES v. HAYWARD (1857), 1 H. & N. 742; 156 E. R. 1400.

765. ———.]—A cause involving a claim to a right of way was referred to a barrister. The arbitrator went from London to Hastings to view the locus in quo, & the inquiry was concluded on the same morning on which the view took place. He had, however, been told that the inquiry would probably last two days. In taxing the costs between the parties, the master disallowed ten guineas of the arbitrator's charges for the award, which had been paid by pltf., who had taken it up, leaving £32 13s. The ct. referred back the taxation to the master, on the ground that the sum allowed was excessive.—WEBB v. WYATT (1857), 29 L. T. O. S. 129; 3 Jur. N. S. 496; 5 W. R. 570.

767. — Fees of legal assessor assisting lay arbitrator—Discretion.]—A master, on taxation, disallowed the whole of the fees charged by a lay arbitrator for a legal assessor, to whose appointment the parties had neither consented nor objected :—Held : the ct. ought not to order the master to review his taxation, even though it were shown that he had failed to take any steps to ascertain what would have been a fair charge for the lay arbitrator to have made for his services.—Re WESTWOOD, BAILLIE & Co. & CAPE OF GOOD HOPE GOVERNMENT (1886), 2 T. had charged a fee for the award, which was calculated on an ad valorem scale varying with the amount awarded, namely, 2½ per cent. up to £1,000, & 1½ per cent. above that amount. The taxing master, being of opinion that a scale fee could not properly be charged, allowed in each case a sum of 5 guineas, which was considerably less than the amount charged by the umpire. The local authority were willing to pay the amounts charged by the umpire, & passed a resolution to that effect & refusing to sanction any proceedings against the umpire to recover the amounts disallowed. Fees of umpire & his solicitor—Right to tax after payment.]—An umpire, in an arbn. under Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts, for the purpose of assessing compensation payable upon a compulsory purchase of land, employed his solrs. to draw up the award. By the award he directed that the purchaser should pay to the vendor his costs of the reference & the costs of the award, including the umpire's own fee, & in addition the costs & expenses of & incidental to preparing & perfecting the award. The purchaser having, upon taking up the award, paid to the umpire's solrs. the amount demanded for the umpire's fee & their charges, applied in the K. B. Div. for an order for the delivery by the umpire's solrs. of their bill of costs & for its taxation under Solrs. Act, 1843 (c. 73), s. 38:—Held: (1) the bill of costs being between solr. & client, & the purchaser being a person not chargeable therewith who had paid it, the case fell within s. 38, & the impossibility of the purchaser knowing the effect of the award when he took it up constituted a "special circumstance," justifying the order for taxation after payment of the bill; (2) the application ought to have been made in & must be transferred to the Ch. D. saw pltf., M., & asked him to act as arbitrator. M. then stated what fees he expected. The arbitrators met & appointed pltf., P., as umpire. The umpire & arbitrators held many meetings at which all defts. except A. attended, & at those meetings called the attention of those defts. to the expense they were incurring by prolonging the inquiry:—Held: (1) there was evidence of an express contract by N. to pay D., & A., as surety for N., afterwards, & before the promise, etc., by a writing dated Jan. 5, 1841, A. & B. appointed pltf., C., to be the third arbitrator; that defts. afterwards, in consideration that pltf., at the request of defts., would take upon themselves the burden of the reference, promised pltf. to pay them their reasonable costs of the award as they should by their award appoint; that pltf. accepted the burden, etc., & within the time limited, made their award ready to be delivered to the parties, & thereby awarded, amongst other things, that defts. should pay pltf. a certain sum for their costs, the sum to be paid to pltf. immediately after the execution of the award, whereof defts. afterwards had notice; nevertheless, though the sum was a fair sum, & a reasonable time had elapsed before the commencement of the suit, defts. had not paid:—Held: (1) an express promise would be intended, & the action was maintainable; (2) the consideration as alleged was sufficiently definite, being the undertaking by pltf. of a known duty; (3) the award directing payment of costs “immediately after the execution of the award” must be construed to mean “within a reasonable time after notice”; (4) the contract was joint.—*HOGGINS v. The arbn. was subject to the Act of 1889:—Held: pltf., although not appointed as arbitrator by defts., could maintain an action against them for his charges, as there was an implied promise by the parties to the submission jointly to pay the arbitrators & umpire for their services.—BROWN v. LLANDOVERY TERRA COTTA CO., LTD. (1909), 25 T. L. R. 625.

Upon taxation of the costs of the arbn. the taxing master disallowed £119 5s. of that sum. In an action brought by pltfs. to recover back from the arbitrators & umpire the amount so disallowed:—Held: (1) in order to succeed, pltfs. must show that the fees charged were unreasonable & extortionate;

when the payment of the alleged excessive fees is made by cheque to an agent, who has authority to accept money only, & the arbitrator refuses to take the cheque. In order to fix an arbitrator with the penalty there must, after the expiration of the time named, be either a demand upon him to make, execute, & deliver the award & a refusal to do so unless a larger sum is paid for fees than is permitted by the Act, or actual payment of such larger sum.—*JONES v. By the terms of the submission the costs of the submission & award were to be in the discretion of the arbitrators or umpire, who, by their award, might direct by & to whom same should be paid. An umpire was appointed who made an award & thereby found a certain sum to be due from A. to B., & he awarded & directed all the costs (specifying the sum) of the submission & award, including therein the costs of taking up the award, to be paid by the party taking up the award, & to be paid on a specified day by A. 794. ———.]—A building owner employed an architect for reward to supervise the erection of certain houses by a contractor. The building contract provided for payments on account of the works during their progress, & for payment of the balance after their completion, upon certificates of the architect, & that a certificate of the architect, showing the final balance due or payable to the contractor, should be conclusive evidence of the works having been duly completed & that the contractor was entitled to receive payment of the final balance:—Held: (1) the architect, in ascertaining the amount due to the contractor & certifying for same under the contract, was a quasi-arbitrator; (2) he was not liable to the building owner for negligence.

Defts., who were the valuers for pltf., settled the amount with the valuer for the extrix., but, through ignorance, they valued as between incoming & outgoing tenant, instead of as between incoming & outgoing incumbent, & the amount in consequence was too small:—Held: (1) defts. were not sued as quasi-arbitrators, the cause of action being their undertaking that they were competent, & the breach of that undertaking; (2) defts. ought to have known the broad distinction between the case of an incoming & outgoing tenant & the case of an incoming & outgoing incumbent, & their ignorance in that respect was a breach of their engagement.—JENKINS v. 801. ———.]—An arbitrator, whose award is impeached on the ground of fraud, cannot, by denying the fraud generally, protect himself from answering the interrogatories as to specific facts by which the fraud is alleged to be shown.

A contractor filed a bill against a railway co. & their engineer, whose certificates were to be conclusive as to the amount payable by the co. to the contractor. The bill alleged that the amounts mentioned in the certificates were deficient, & imputed fraud & collusion to the engineer & the co., & as evidence of the fraud, charged that certain items were of a specified value:—Held: the engineer could not, by denying fraud generally, protect himself by his character of arbitrator from answering as to the particular items specified.—*PADLEY v. on equitable grounds, yet, inasmuch as there was no evidence to raise suspicion that the arbitrator had acted corruptly, partially, or unfairly, he ought not to have been made a party to the suit; (2) the bill should be dismissed as against him, with costs, before the ct. had come to any opinion for or against his award.—*HAMILTON v. k. — Judge acting as arbitrator.]—Where in the Probate Ct. the judge, with concurrence of the parties, acted as a quasi-arbitrator, in settling differences between one of the heirs & the administrator, in respect of which he had no jurisdiction:—Held: his conclusion, while not strictly correct in a legal aspect, accorded to both a fair measure of justice, & the ct. would not vary the result attained.—Re SCOTT ESTATE (1896), 29 N. S. L. R. 92.—CAN.

l. — Arbitrator giving advice to one party.]—An action was brought to have an award set aside:—Held: the referee, though he had not acted in collusion with one party, had not acted impartially, having advised the agent of that party in regard to matters in dispute with pltf.—WILKERSON v. DAVIS* (1826), 5 B. & C. 534; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 295; 4 L. J. O. S. K. B. 321; 108 E. R. 199.

928. ———.]—An action brought for the price of machinery sold was referred to arbn. Before the arbitrator a postponement was asked for on the part of deft., for the purpose of enabling him to produce a witness, whose evidence was to the effect that the machinery was defective & valueless. The adjournment was made, & was followed by some other adjournments, & at length the arbitrator peremptorily fixed Dec. 9 for the hearing & determining of the case, when judgment was given for pltf. The ct. made a rule absolute to refer the case back to the arbitrator for reconsideration.—FENN v. FORBES (1853), 20 L. T. O. S. 225.

929. ———.]—In an action to determine the right to a wall a verdict was taken, subject to a reference to a county ct. judge. The arbitrator had a view of the premises & then heard the case, making his award next day in favour of pltf. On a rule obtained by deft. calling upon pltf. to show cause why the award should not be set aside or referred back, on the grounds of surprise, & that deft. had no opportunity to adduce all his evidence:—Held: the arbitrator had applied himself diligently to the inquiry, & the rule must be discharged.—RUSHWORTH v. WADDINGTON (1859), 1 L. T. 69.

In an action for reduction of the decree-arbitral:—Held: the parties had agreed to refer to the arbiter as a person of skill & experience, without the legal formalities of an arbn., & the arbiter was entitled to determine the amount that should be paid to the contractors in respect of the extra cost without taking evidence as to the amount which was actually expended by them.—*PATERSON & SON v. 933 i. ——— Where award referred back.]—Where a matter was referred back to an arbitrator to answer different questions from those in the original reference,

& the arbitrator refused pltf.'s request to be allowed to give further evidence:—Held: pltf. had a right to be heard, as the arbitrator would have to apply his mind to a different phase of the case, even if there was sufficient evidence before him to enable him to answer the new questions.—O'DONOGHUE v. OLIPHANT (1903), 3 S. R. N. S. W. 47.—AUS.

q. ——— Party as witness.]—Where an order of reference by consent provided that the arbitrator "shall have power to examine the parties & their witnesses upon oath or affirmation":—Held: he had no discretion to reject the evidence of one of the parties on his own behalf.—LISTER v. HAM (1865), 1 C. L. J. O. S. 298.—CAN.

r. ———.]—On a contract it was agreed that the price to be paid

—It is a matter entirely in the discretion of an arbitrator, whether he will or will not postpone the reference, in order to give one of the parties an opportunity of bringing a material witness from abroad; & the ct. will not interfere, unless the circumstances in which he refuses to do so are such as to amount to misconduct.—GINDER v. CURTIS (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 723; 143 E. R. 628.

931. ———.]—Where an application has been made to arbitrators to afford time to obtain & examine a witness who is absent, & they have honestly (even although erroneously) exercised their discretion as to the materiality of his evidence, & have refused the postponement applied for, their award will not be set aside on that ground.—LARCHIN v. ELLIS (1863), 11 W. R. 281.

932. ———.]—An action against a tenant for breach of covenant in a farming lease was, by consent of parties, referred by order of ct., dated June 13, 1863. Nothing was done until Dec. 31 following, when the arbitrator appointed Jan. 12, 1864, for proceeding with the reference, & notice of such appointment was sent by post to deft. by his attorney. Deft., however, was then absent from home, & he not having returned home as expected, his attorney was unable to see him & obtain the necessary evidence in time for the reference. The attorney attended the reference, & requested the arbitrator to adjourn the reference, on the ground of his client's absence & the importance of his evidence & that of his witnesses being taken, which, however, the arbitrator refused to do, & having examined pltf.'s witnesses, the arbitrator subsequently, on Mar. 19, made his award, assessing pltf.'s damages at £300, deft.'s attorney having previously objected to the arbitrator's proceeding with the award on the ground above mentioned. The ct. refused a rule to set aside the award, on the ground that the affidavit of deft.'s attorney was unsatisfactory & that deft. himself had made no affidavit that he was ignorant of the appointment for the proceeding with the reference.—NARES v. DRURY (1864), 10 L. T. 305.

933. ——— Where award referred back.]—A case was referred to an arbitrator, who found for pltf., without noticing an issue pleaded, & the ct. made absolute a rule to send the case back to him:—Held: the duty of the arbitrator was to amend his award, & not to re-hear the cause.—BIRD v. PENRICE (1840), 6 M. & W. 754; 8 Dowl. 775; 9 L. J. Ex. 257; 4 Jur. 970; 151 E. R. 617.

934. ———.]—Where an order of reference has a clause empowering the ct., if the award be disputed, to remit the matters for the reconsideration of the arbitrator, & the case is so remitted, the arbitrator must hear fresh evidence, if tendered, as on the original reference.

Where the case had been once so remitted, & should be ascertained by arbn. PINE*, 1 J. R. N. S. 90.—N.Z.

s. ——— Interested witness.]—When arbitrators without consent examined an interested witness, & afterwards awarded in favour of the party calling him, the award was set aside.—DAVIS v. BIRDSALL (1846), 2 U. C. R. 199.—CAN.

the arbitrator had declined to hear more evidence, but amended his award, deciding in favour of the same party as before, & on motion to set aside such further award, the other party opposed a further reference to the same arbitrator, the ct. set aside the award.—NICKALLS v. WARREN (1814), 6 Q. B. 615; 2 Dow. & L. 549; 14 L. J. Q. B. 75; 4 L. T. O. S. 156; 9 Jur. 10; 115 E. R. 231.

935. ———.]—Some of the findings in the award of an arbitrator were inconsistent with each other, & the parties agreed that the award should be considered as not having been delivered & that the arbitrator should amend it, & they obtained a judge's order referring the award back. The arbitrator altered & re-delivered the award without giving notice to the parties or hearing fresh evidence or arguments. He had never been requested to hear fresh evidence or arguments :—Held : the amended award was good.—BAKER v. HUNTER (1847), 16 M. & W. 672; 4 Dow. & L. 696; 2 New Pract. Cas. 237; 16 L. J. 936. ———.]—An appeal was referred by quarter sessions to arbn. under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 13, the arbitrator to have the same power as to costs as the sessions. The arbitrator made his award directing the appeal to be dismissed, & ordering applt. to pay costs to resp., but did not ascertain the amount of costs. A rule to refer the case back to the arbitrator was made absolute, "on the ground that he had not ascertained the amount of costs to be paid by applt. to resp.," no other objection being then suggested by applt. On the attendance before the arbitrator to inquire into the costs, applt. offered to produce additional evidence as to the merits of the appeal which he had not before brought forward. This the arbitrator refused to hear, & proceeded to make a fresh award in the same terms as before, except that it contained the amount of the costs. On an application by applt. to set aside this award, on the ground of the refusal to hear the evidence :—Held : it could not be objected to on that ground, as the only purpose for which it was referred back was to ascertain the costs, & the arbitrator was not bound to hear any fresh evidence on the merits.—Re HUNTLEY (1853), 1 E. & B. 787; 22 L. 937. Arbitrator misleading party — Party not calling witnesses.—Where it was left to an arbitrator to award either a money compensation for damage done, or, instead thereof, actual repairs of the damage done, & it was sought to set aside his award upon the allegation that the arbitrator had misled one party into believing that he would not award the damage, & that, in consequence, they had not called witnesses, as they would otherwise have done :—Held : on the facts, nobody was, or ought to have been at least, deceived by any such arrangement, & the application failed.—NEWBOLD v. EAST LANCASHIRE RY. CO. (1852), 19 L. T. O. S. 123.

B. Absence of one of the Parties or both Parties.

938. Witnesses examined in absence of one party—After evidence closed.—It is no ground for setting aside an award that one of deft.'s witnesses was re-examined by the arbitrator after the evidence was closed on both sides, & pltf.'s attorney gone, & gave a different testimony from what he gave at first, by which the arbitrator's opinion was influenced, unless such re-examination was brought about by the management of deft.'s attorney.—*ATKINSON v. 937 i. Arbitrators misleading party.—After the arbitrators had commenced their investigation, pltf. & his attorney requested delay; they understood that it had been granted, but the arbitrators awarded in favour of deft. without giving further time, & without hearing all the testimony that pltf. might have offered. The award was set aside without costs.—GRISDALE v. BOULTON (1813), 1 U. C. R. 407.—CAN.

937 ii. ——— Promise to take survey.—Where a question was referred, & the arbitrators informed the parties that they would employ a surveyor, which they could do under the submission, before they made their award, but they nevertheless made their award without such survey, the ct. set aside their award.—*DOE d. 938 i. Witnesses examined in absence of one party.—In an arbn. it appeared that meetings were held at which accounts were submitted & discussed, without notice of the meetings being given to L., nor was he asked to lay before the arbitrators what he considered were the matters in dispute, or whether the documents placed before the arbitrators showed correctly the matters that were in dispute. He attended before the arbitrators in pursuance of a notice, & having been asked certain questions, was told by the arbitrators that he was not wanted further. He then retired, & was not present during the examination of certain witnesses whom he had asked the arbitrators to call. All the witnesses were examined separately & not in the presence of either party, & no notice was given to L. that it was the intention of the arbitrators to close the sittings :—Held : unless L. had waived all objections to the procedure adopted, the award should be set aside.—LYDERS v. RESIDENTIAL, ETC., CHURCH OF NEW ZEALAND (1910), 29 N. Z. L. R. 522.—N.Z.

938 ii. ——— By one of three arbitrators without knowledge of others.—Held : it was no objection to an award by three arbitrators, but which might have been made by any two, that one arbitrator alone examined a witness without notice to the opposite party, it being sworn that the other two arbitrators were totally ignorant of such evidence when they made the award.—BOYLE v. HUMPHREY (1855), 1 P. R. 188.—CAN.

938 iii. ——— After hearing practically closed.—An award will be set aside if arbitrators, when the hearing is practically over, hear further evidence in the absence of one of the parties without notice to him.—ANNABLE v. ANNABLE (1908), 8 W. L. R. 132; 1 Sask. L. R. 222.—CAN.

938 iv. ———.]—Arbitrators received the evidence of one party in the absence of the others, after the arbn. was closed :—Held : the award was bad & must be set aside.—WHITELY v. MCMAHON (1881), 32 C. P. 453.—CAN.

v. ——— Reference by consent in court.—Where an arbitrator appointed in ct. by consent heard evidence behind the back of one of the parties which affected part of the award :—Held : Arbn. Act, 1897, s. 12 & s. 35, r. 652, did not apply & the whole award must be set aside.—KENNEDY v. BEAL (1898), 29 O. R. 599.—CAN.

w. ——— Must be objected to at time — Waiver.—Disputes having arisen as to rights of property between applt. and resp., were referred to the decision of L., who proceeded with the arbn., in which, on several occasions, he privately examined witnesses behind the back of one of the litigant parties. On an application to prevent the arbiter going on with his submission, on the ground that he had examined witnesses in applt.'s absence, it appeared that the irregularities were not objected to at the time they took place :—Held : they must have been consented to.—DREW v. DREW (1855), 18 Dunl. (Ct. of 4.—SCOT.

y. ——— Effect of agreement.—An arbitrator ought not to hear or receive evidence from one side in the absence of the other side, without (if he does) giving the other side affected by such evidence the opportunity of meeting & answering it. This proposition is, however, subject to the qualification that the parties may agree that a reference may be conducted in any particular way, & such an agreement may be either express or implied from their conduct during the arbn.—*CURSETJI JEhangir KHAMBATTA v. That right was resisted, & he withdrew under protest; a second meeting was called; he again insisted upon his right to be present, & was admitted. 964. ——.]—G. indicted D. for a nuisance, committed by erecting a fixed pier in the bed of the Thames. D. brought an action against G. for disturbing his right of waterway near the same place, by placing barges, etc., which formed a floating pier. Both cases were referred to an arbitrator. After hearing & dismissing the parties, the arbitrator sent for a deputy water bailiff, who had been examined on the reference, & questioned him as to the means of giving convenient access to the shore, supposing the fixed pier to be removed. Neither party to the reference appeared at, or had notice of, the meeting; a special pleader, who had been employed on the reference as advocate, was present, but not professionally. The party who afterwards complained of this proceeding had notice of it four days before the arbitrator made his award, but did not remonstrate. The arbitrator conceiving that he was not justified in taking into his consideration wool which had undergone a part of the process of manufacture, but was not at the time of the fire in any of the engines, refused to receive evidence applicable to that wool:—Held: the arbitrator was justified in so doing, & the ct. refused to disturb an award made on that principle.—Re HURST (1835), 1 Har. & W. 275.

994. —.]—Parties had submitted their accounts to arbitrators, & a report had been made, & a meeting was fixed to close the accounts. At that meeting, one of the parties tendered in evidence fresh documents which he had discovered, relating to the accounts, & the arbitrators, after looking at them, declined to go into them:—Held: this was not misconduct affecting the validity of the award, but a rejection of evidence within the arbitrators' authority.—Re MARSH (1847), 16 L. 995. —.]—Upon the trial of an indictment against defts. for a conspiracy to prevent pltf. from pursuing his business, it was referred to an arbitrator to decide which of defts. was guilty, & to award compensation to pltf. The arbitrator rejected evidence tendered of continued acts of interruption to prosecutor's business between the indictment found & the trial, & had also refused to consider the amount of prosecutor's costs in assessing the compensation payable:—Held: the arbitrator ought to have taken into consideration the evidence rejected, but was not entitled to award compensation for the amount of costs incurred by the prosecutor.—R. v. BREWER (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 188; 10 J. P. 804.

SUB-SECT. 9.—POWERS OF AMENDMENT.

Amending pleadings—Act of 1698, s. 23.]—Trespass quare clausum fregit.* Plea, that there was a public highway running by & lying close to & adjoining the locus in quo, & that same having been obstructed by pltf., deft. was compelled to commit the trespass complained of, in order to pass. Pltf. traversed the fact that there was a highway in the terms set forth in the plea:—Held: an arbitrator, to whom the cause was referred, with the powers of amendment possessed by a judge at Nisi Prius, was justified in directing the record to be amended by inserting the words "running through" for the words "running by & lying close to & adjoining," in the plea & replication, under the above sect.—NALDER v. BATTS (1843), 13 L. J. Q. B. 10; 2 L. T. O. S. 105; 7 Jur. 1039.

997. — Striking out or adding claims.]—Where an arbitrator was appointed, having all the powers of a judge at Nisi Prius & of a judge at chambers:—Held: such arbitrator had no power to strike

Points of claim & defence & counter-claim with particulars were delivered, & re-delivered on being amended between the parties:—Held: these documents were in the nature of pleadings or particulars, & could be amended by the arbitrator in his discretion, & all points in dispute between the parties relating to the subject-matter could be so raised, although not in the first instance disclosed by such documents.—*LLOYD (EDWARD), LTD., v. A shorthand writer, whose presence the same party required that he might take notes at the meetings, was also excluded:—Held: the award must be set aside, the exclusion by the arbitrator of the son & the shorthand writer having been made without adequate ground, & the acquiescence of the party complaining, in the proceedings under the reference after their exclusion, not being such as to deprive him of his right to have the award set aside.—*Re HAIGH, HAIGH v. #### SUB-SECT. 11.—PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE UMPIRE.

1005. Umpire may sit with arbitrators—But may not interfere.—Where a matter in difference is referred to two arbitrators, one to be named by each of the parties, with a proviso that if they disagree they shall name an umpire, & that he shall make the award, & the two disagree & appoint an umpire, it is no ground of objection to the award that all three have sat & heard the evidence together, & then the umpire has made the award, provided the umpire has not peremptorily interfered, so as to prevent a final agreement between the arbitrators.—Re FLAG LANE CHAPEL, SUNDERLAND (OWNERS), v. SUNDERLAND CORPN. (1859), 5 Jur. N. S. 894.

1006. Must adjudicate on whole subject-matter.—Arbitrators determined the whole matter referred to them, excepting one single part of it, which related to an account of interest which was to be taken. To settle this matter they appointed an umpire, who made his umpirage concerning that account of interest only:—Held: the umpire could not determine part without determining the whole.—TASKER v. KEARY (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 317; 94 E. R. 525.

1007. —.]—Under a submission to arbitrators, or their umpire, of all controversies & demands, etc., the arbitrators met & determined upon five matters, & referred a further remaining question to the umpire. The arbitrators & umpire afterwards made an award, reciting that the arbitrators could not agree on one point, which they had referred to the umpire, who stated that he determined it as followed, etc.:—Held: the award was bad, the arbitrators & umpire not being authorised by the terms of the submission to make the award in a detached manner as they had done.—TOLLIT v. SAUNDERS (1821), 9 Price, 612; 147 E. R. 198.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 11.

1005 i. Umpire may sit with arbitrators.—Two arbiters nominated an oversman, with whom they consulted throughout. He accompanied them to an inspection, took part in the examination of witnesses, & was present at an oral debate. The arbiters having ultimately differed, signed a minute of devolution, after which the oversman issued a draft decree-arbitral:—Held: (1) the arbiters had not been vitiated nor the oversman disqualified by his having taken part in the proceedings throughout; (2) the parties were not entitled as a matter of right to be reheard.—CRAWFORD v. PATERSON (1858), 20 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 488.—SCOT.

1006 i. Must adjudicate on whole subject-matter.—Where arbiters differ they must devolve the whole reference, not only the points they have differed on, unless there is special power to that effect in the submission.—FREDERICK v. CUNNINGHAM & MAITLAND (1865), 37 Sc. Jur. 563.—SCOT.

1009 i. Must give sufficient notice.—After the arbitrators & umpire had heard plffs.' witnesses, defts. refused to give their evidence, & their arbitrator would not concur in the award. The umpire, in consequence, gave notice to defts. to produce their witnesses, but the time which he gave was too short,

1008. —.]—If "all or any of the matters in difference between the parties" are referred to arbitrators, who disagree, but only as to the costs, yet the umpire must adjudicate on the whole question.—WICKS v. COX (1847), 11 Jur. 542.

1009. Necessity for notice to parties.—On a submission by two arbitrators to an umpire, the umpire must not make his award without summoning the parties to attend.—PASCHAL v. TERRY (1733), Kel. W. 132; 25 E. R. 530.

1010. —.]—Where an umpire made his umpirage without convening the parties before him:—Held: the parties to the submission ought to have had notice given them before the award was made.—TASKER v. KEARY (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 317; 94 E. R. 525.

1011. — & to arbitrators.—A reference was made to two arbitrators & an umpire to be chosen by them, who was to be present & decide each reference as it might arise, & either might make an award. The umpire, in the presence of the arbitrators, disallowed plff. part of his claims, which made the balance in favour of deft., & afterwards, without notice to one of the arbitrators or deft., made his award in favour of plff. The ct. set aside the award.—POTTER v. NEWMAN (1835), 4 Dowl. 504.

Annotations:—Refd. Moore v. Darley (1845), 1 C. B. 445. Mentd. Burley v. Stephens (1836), 1 M. & W. 156; Parbery v. Newnham, Newnham v. Parbery (1841), 10 L. J. Ex. 169.

1012. —.]—A cause & all matters in difference were referred to the award of two named persons, & such third person as they should appoint, or of a majority of them. A difference having arisen between the originally named arbitrators, a statement was made by each to the third as to what he thought the award should be. An award having been made by an umpire & one of the arbitrators, without any further meeting, the ct. set aside the award.—Re TEMPLEMAN & REED (1841), 9 Dowl. 962; 6 Jur. 324.

1013. Duty to receive evidence from parties.—A railway co. & the owners of land, which was required by the co., appointed, under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), arbitrators, who appointed an umpire. The arbitrators & umpire met on Nov. 4, & adjourned to the following day. On that day the co.'s arbitrator did not attend. The other arbitrator & the umpire proceeded in his absence, notwithstanding the protest of the co.'s solr., & examined a witness. The co.'s solr. left the meeting without examining his witnesses. No meeting was held after the 5th, nor had the co. any notice to attend on the 6th or any subsequent day. On the 22nd the landowners' solr. informed the umpire that the arbitrators had not made an award, & required him to make his award, which he did on the 29th, without any evidence on the part of the co. having been given:

& he awarded on the evidence already heard. The ct. set the award aside.—PROUDFOOT v. TROTTER (1843), 6 O. S. 163.—CAN.

1013 i. Duty to receive evidence from parties.—Where a case is referred to the award of two persons, & in case of disagreement to the decision of a third, either as an umpire or as a third arbitrator, the parties have the right to insist that such third person shall have before him the evidence & witnesses produced before the two arbitrators, as well as the right to appear & state their case to such third arbitrator or umpire, before a binding award can be made.—Re SOULES v. MORTON (1868), 4 P. R. 249.—CAN.

Sub-sect. 11.]

(1) whether there was or not any general rule that an umpire need not receive evidence or be active in summoning the parties, the umpire, in the above circumstances, ought to have made no award without tendering to the co. an opportunity of producing evidence before him or addressing him; (2) he was bound to take up the proceedings de novo, or from the close of Nov. 4; (3) in the circumstances, his skill or competency to decide from personal observation made no difference; (4) his award was bad, & ought to be set aside.—Re HAWLEY & NORTH STAFFS RY. CO. (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 33; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 383; 10 L. T. O. S. 518; 11 L. T. O. S. 121; 12 Jur. 389; 64 E. R. 15.

1014. Umpire making award with assistance of one arbitrator—Whole evidence not taken down.]—Where an umpire made the award with the assistance chiefly of one of the arbitrators, who omitted to take down part of the evidence in favour of one party, the other arbitrator interfering very little, the ct. refused to set aside the award.—WALTON-SHAW v. MARSHALL (1835), 1 Har. & W. 209.

1015. Failure to re-examine witnesses—At request of one party—Previous agreement that re-examination would not be required.]—Where an umpire undertook the burden, upon the understanding on both sides that he was to receive the evidence from the arbitrators, without re-examining the witnesses, & on June 10, the time for making the award expiring on the 28th, one of the parties required him to examine the witnesses, & he declined, & made his award without doing so, the ct. set aside the award.—Re SALKELD & SLATER & HARRISON (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 767; 4 Per. & Dav. 732; 10 L. J. Q. B. 22; 4 Jur. 1131; 113 E. R. 1005.

1016. ———.]—The parties to a written submission to reference agreed, by parol, that notes of the evidence should be taken in writing mission whereby they referred all disputes to two arbiters or an oversman in case of difference of opinion. After some proceedings, a minute of devolution was executed by the arbiters upon an oversman, F. F. later made an inspection with defender, but with no representative of pursuer. F. subscribed a formal decree in his own name only:—Held: the award must be set aside as pronounced without giving pursuer an opportunity of being heard.—DUNMORE (EARL) v. M'INTURNER (1835), 13 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 356.—SCOT.

1013 iii. — Oversman present during whole proceedings.]—A decree-arbitral having been pronounced by an oversman, was sought to be reduced, on the ground that, after devolution, the oversman had pronounced his award without hearing one of the parties:—Held: as the oversman had, by the consent of parties, been present at the taking of proof & the several hearings before the arbiters, there were no grounds for reducing the award.—CRAWFORD v. PATERSON (1858), 30 Sc. Jur. 263.—SCOT.

1013 iv. — Failure to allow proof.]—In a reduction of a decree-arbitral, it was averred that the oversman had refused to allow a proof of certain averments offered to be proved:—Held: the averment that he had not allowed the proof was irrelevant.—LEDINGHAM v. ELPHINSTONE & BEATTIE (1859), 32 Sc. Jur. 102.—SCOT.

1013 v. — Arbitrators & umpire experts.]—A submission having been made to men of skill, they differed, & devolved on a third man of skill as oversman, who pronounced an award, after hearing parties, but without allowing a proof craved by one party:—Held: the arbiter was sole judge of the propriety of allowing a proof, & the refusal of it raised no presumption of "corruption." Semble: it is often the duty of an arbiter, especially when he is a man of skill, to refuse to allow a proof.—LEDINGHAM v. ELPHINSTONE (1859), 22 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 245.—SCOT.

1021 i. Evidence taken from arbitrators.]—A landlord was bound to put houses & fences in repair, to the satisfaction of two parties named or an oversman. This oversman on considering the reports & opinions of the referees, & after inspecting the premises, issued an award without hearing parties:—Held: his award was not liable to reduction, on the ground that parties were not heard.—M'GREGOR v. STEVENSON (1847), 9 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1056.—SCOT.

1021 ii. —.]—The valuation of a sheep-stock was referred to two referees & any oversman they might select if they differed in opinion. The referees, having differed, devolved the reference on A. Both referees submitted their valuations to the oversman, who made his award without hearing the referees:—Held: there was no occasion for the oversman to hear parties, & he was entitled to apply his own knowledge & skill to the valuation of the stock.—MACKENZIE v. HILL, ETC. (1868), 5 S. L. T. 578.—SCOT.

1021 iii. —.]—Arbitrators, being agreed that a certain sum was due by debt., but differing as to the parties by whom the action could be legally brought, by a memorandum indorsed upon the submission, appointed R. as umpire. The latter having heard from the arbitrators the statement of facts in which they both concurred, decided that plffs. were the proper parties, & so awarded in conjunction with the

by a clerk & signed by the arbitrators, & that, in case of their disagreeing, the umpire should be at liberty to make his award on the notes so taken, without examining the witnesses. The notes were so taken, & the arbitrators disagreed. The umpire having refused to examine any witnesses, though required to do so by one of the parties, & having made his award on reading the notes, the ct. refused to set aside the award.—Re FIRTH v. HOWLETT (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 63; 19 L. J. Q. B. 169.

1017. Failure to examine witnesses proposed by party.]—Where an umpire neglected to examine certain witnesses proposed by one of the parties, the ct. granted a rule nisi to set aside the award.—McKAYE v. GRAHAM (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 112.

1018. Refusal to hear further evidence.]—If an umpire refuses to hear further evidence, the award may be set aside.—Re JENKINS & LEGGO (1841), 1 Dowl. N. S. 276; 11 L. J. Q. B. 71; 6 Jur. 397.

1019. Refusal to rehear evidence given to arbitrators.]—If an umpire refuses to rehear the evidence already given before the arbitrators, the award may be set aside.—Re JENKINS & LEGGO (1841), 1 Dowl. N. S. 276; 11 L. J. Q. B. 71; 6 Jur. 397.

1020. — Award made on evidence taken before arbitrators.]—Where matters in difference are referred to arbitrators, & if they disagree, to an umpire, & the arbitrators, after hearing witnesses, disagree, the umpire must rehear the witnesses. If he omits doing so, & makes his award on the evidence taken down by the arbitrators, the award will be set aside.—Re SALKELD & SLATER & HARRISON (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 767; 4 Per. & Dav. 732; 10 L. J. Q. B. 22; 4 Jur. 1131; 113 E. R. 1005.

1021. Evidence taken from arbitrators.]—Where an umpire took the facts to be as the arbitrators stated them to him, without hearing the parties:—Held: the umpirage ought to be set aside for his arbitrator with whom he agreed. Deft. took exception to the award on the grounds that the umpire had not himself heard the evidence of the parties, & that deft. had no notice of the appointment or opportunity of producing testimony:—Held: the award was sustainable, & rule for setting it aside discharged.—EATON v. CAMPBELL (1871), 2 N. S. D. 314.—CAN.

1021 iv. —.]—An award decided by an umpire who does not hear the witnesses himself, but takes their evidence from notes taken by the arbitrators, & from their statements of the nature of it, will be set aside, unless there was an express consent to such a course by both parties.—MORDEN v. WIDDIFIELD (1874), 6 P. R. 179.—CAN.

1021 v. — In absence of one of them.]—After an arbn. had closed the umpire sent for both arbitrators, who had differed. Only one of them attended, & the umpire held a communication with him in the absence of either of the parties. This fact was afterwards communicated to the attorney of the other side, who objected. A rule nisi having been obtained to set aside the award, the ct. discharged it, upon affidavits of the umpire & the witness with whom he had communicated, showing that nothing had passed between them which could affect the decision of the umpire.—Re FOWLER & SINNOTT (1879), 5 V. L. R. 320.—AUS.

1021 vi. — Mistake arising therefrom.]—Where it is not suggested that an umpire has acted otherwise than in good faith, but he has made a mistake in his conduct of the reference owing to the way in which the case was put before him by the arbitrators, the proper procedure is to send the award back to hearing the arbitrators only, & not the parties to the submission.—TASKER v. KEARY (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 317; 94 E. R. 525.

1022. — Failure to examine witnesses—Not required to do so.]—The ct. will not set aside the award of an umpire, because he received the evidence from the arbitrators without examining the witnesses, unless he were required to re-examine them before the making of his award.—HALL v. LAWRENCE (1792), 4 Term Rep. 589; 100 E. R. 1191.

1023. — Arbitrators & umpire experts.]—An order was made in an action referring the question in dispute, which was the rent to be paid under a lease of a mill, to two persons, who had acted as agents of the parties, as arbitrators, & in case of their disagreement, to a person therein named, as umpire. The arbitrators, having disagreed, submitted the matter to the umpire. The latter, without giving any notice to the parties or their solrs., & without any witnesses being examined before him, but having merely heard the statement of the two arbitrators & inspected the premises, made his award in writing, in which he recited that he had “heard, examined & considered the allegations, witnesses, & evidence of all the parties”:—Held: there was no ground for disturbing the award, as the arbitrators & the umpire were all experts, & it was evidently the intention of the parties that they should settle the value, & not act as formal arbitrators.—BOTTOMLEY v. AMBLER (1877), 38 L. T. 545; 26 W. R. 566, C. A.

1024. Agreement to be bound by experiment of expert.]—A dispute as to the quality of yarn supplied was referred to two persons of experience in the trade, who were to appoint an umpire. The arbitrators heard the parties & differed, & referred the matter to an umpire, a manufacturer of great experience, who had some of the yarn furnished to him & tested it, the parties, as he understood, agreeing to be bound by the result of his experiment:—Held: the parties had agreed to be bound by the result of the experiment to be made by the umpire.—WRIGHT v. HOWSON (1888), 4 T. L. R. 386, C. A.

Arbitrators' power to delegate.]—See Nos. 853—880, ante.

1025. Waiver of objection—Attendance without objection.]—An award was made by an umpire:—Held: good, although the arbitrators had no authority to appoint one, & although the umpire examined the parties separately, they having attended him, & made no objection.—MATSON v. TROWER (1824), Ry. & M. 17.

1026. — No request to hear further evidence.]—An umpire, being furnished by the arbitrators with the evidence taken before them & having himself viewed the premises, the condition of which was in question, made his award without calling for further evidence, or giving any notice on that subject to the parties:—Held: the award could not be objected to on that ground by a party, who knew that the case had gone before the umpire, & made no application to him to hear further evidence.—Re TUNNO & BIRD (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 488; 2 Nev. & M. No counsel or witnesses were heard before the umpire

They all dined together, the other party not being present, & the matters of the reference were mentioned, but in a jocular manner:—Held: although this proceeding was very improper, the ct. would not set aside the award (made in W.'s favour) on that ground, there being nothing to show that W. intended to corrupt or influence the mind of the umpire, or that the mind of the umpire was, in fact, influenced by the conduct of W.—Re HOPPER (1867), L. PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

1034 i. Power to state case.]—A reference, "with power to the arbitrator, if either party requires it," to submit questions of law to the ct.:—Held: enabling only, not compulsory.—KESTEVEN v. GOODERHAM (1861), 20 U. C. R. 500.—CAN.

1034 ii. — Whether obligatory.]—The reference was expressed to be "subject to such points of law as will properly arise on the pleadings & evidence":—Held: this rendered it imperative on the arbitrators to state for the ct. any legal point raised.—ROSS v. BRUCE COUNTY (1870), 21 C. P. 41.—CAN.

1034 iii. — Duty to state case.]—Where power is given in a reference to state a case on points of law, & the umpire is urged to state a case on such point, the umpire should state one.—Re BAILEY & MART (1883), 9 V. L. R. 311.—AUS.

under the above Act of 1874, one of the parties to the arbn. obtained at chambers an order nisi, calling upon the arbitrators to show cause why they should not be required to state a case for the opinion of the ct. Later on the same day, but without having had notice of the order nisi, the arbitrators made & signed their award:—Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. was not ousted, & the order nisi was rightly made absolute.

During the progress of an arbn. it may be seen that the arbitrator has mistaken the law & is about to act upon his error, & the power of putting him right used to consist in the right of either party to revoke the submission to arbn. That power has been greatly controlled by legislation, & now it may be extremely difficult for a party to make such a case to a ct., as will induce them to make an order giving leave to revoke unless a case is stated (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—*TABERNACLE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 1035. Not excluded by agreement.]

A contract for the delivery of maize, in addition to a clause of reference, contained the further provision that neither party should require, nor should apply to the ct. to require, any referee, arbitrator or umpire to state in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. any question of law arising in the course of the reference. A dispute arose between the buyers & sellers, which was referred to arbitrators. 1038. Effect of party failing to apply for case to be stated.—An agreement of reference, in an appeal against a poor rate, contained a clause enabling the arbitrators, at the request of either party, to state a case, to be settled by the umpire, for the opinion of the ct. The arbitrators having disagreed, the umpire made his umpirage, & subsequently, at the request of applts., set out the principles upon which he had acted, with a view of enabling applts. to have the question discussed in ct. Upon a rule calling upon defts. to show cause why the umpirage should not be sent back to the umpire, in order that he might state the facts more fully, the ct. refused to interfere, as applts. had had the opportunity of getting a case stated, & instead of doing so, had taken their chance of getting the umpirage made in their favour.—*LONDON DOCK CO. v. 1039. Form of case—Facts must be stated.—An action of trover against a pawnbroker was referred to arbn., & his liability to damage depended on whether or not he had made sufficient inquiries when the goods were pledged. This claim was referred to the consulting engineer, as arbitrator:—Held: as a substantial & serious point of law arose upon the construction of the contract, the case was one in which the ct. would, in the exercise of its discretion, order the arbitrator to state a special case, for the opinion of the ct., under the Act of 1889, s. 19.—*Re NUTTALL & LYNTON & BARNSTAPLE RY. No terms were agreed upon, nor was any charter-party signed, although the Admlty. sent to the owners charterparty T. 99, under which the ship-owners were to be liable for marine risks & the Admlty. for war risks. One of the steamers was totally lost, & the other steamer was damaged on the voyage, as the owners alleged, through not being properly loaded. The owners of both steamers claimed compensation from the Admlty., alleging that the loss of & damage to the steamers were due to war risks. The Admlty. alleged that the loss & damage were due to marine risks, for which the shipowners were responsible. By consent, the disputes were referred to three arbitrators, to be nominated by the President of the Admlty. Transport Arbn. Board, under r. 6 of the rules governing the constitution of that Board. In one case there was a written submission, & in the other case, correspondence which amounted to a submission. Rule 6 provided that “The President may direct that any claim coming before the Board may be heard & disposed of by a tribunal consisting of the President or Vice-President sitting with two arbitrators selected by the President from the panel, & that the award of any two members of such tribunal shall be final & conclusive, & shall not be subject to appeal or review.” The President nominated two arbitrators to sit with the Vice-President, in order to deal with each case, but he did not direct that the award of any two members of the tribunal should be final & conclusive. The shipowners, in each case, asked the arbitrators, under the Act of 1889, s. 19, to state a case for the opinion of the High Ct., but the arbitrators refused to do so, unless ordered by the ct.:—Held: (1) the provision in r. 6 that the award of the arbitrators should be final & conclusive, did not apply, as the President had not so directed; (2) even if the President had so directed, the arbitrators could still be ordered by the ct., under the sect., to state a special case for the opinion of the ct., upon questions of law arising in the reference.—*LOBITOS OILFIELDS, LTD., v. 1051. — Grounds for refusal.]—A. & Co. entered into a contract for the purchase, from B. & Co., of 300 tons of Penang tapioca flour, upon the terms of the rules of the General Produce Brokers’ Assocn., of London. In these rules provision was made for arbn. in all cases of dispute. The award of the arbitrators or umpire was to be final, subject to an appeal to the council of appeal. Clause 4 of the rules provided: “Whenever it may be admitted by the seller, or decided by arbn., that the seller has failed to fulfil the terms of this contract, the buyer shall ‘close’ by invoicing back the produce to the seller at once at a price & weight to be fixed by arbn., which price shall not be less than 2 per cent. & not more than 10 per cent. over the estimated market value of the shipment contracted for on the day upon which default occurs, the difference to be due, in cash, in fourteen days; no discount.” B. & Co. declared their inability to perform the contract & to give delivery thereunder, as the Penang sellers had tendered to them flour that was unsatisfactory, & an arbn. was demanded. Meantime the price fell; arbitrators & umpire were appointed, & an award was made, awarding to B. & Co., notwithstanding their default, the difference between the contract price of 8s. 9d. per cwt. & 7s. 9d., the price fixed by the umpire. A. & Co. having appealed to the council of appeal:—Held: the council of appeal ought not to be directed to state a case upon the point whether damages could be awarded in favour of a defaulting seller, to be paid by a buyer who had committed no breach of the contract.—Re GRAY, LAURIER & Co. & BOUSTEAD & Co. (1892), 8 T. ### PART IV. SECT. 2.

a. Submission to seven directors—Award by them & two strangers.]—Pursuer was appointed to wind up the affairs of deft. bank, & agreed to leave his remuneration "to be settled by the present directors." The directors were seven in number. The shareholders appointed the directors to report on the accounts, & named two gentlemen to assist them. The directors, having advised with the two named persons, fixed the remuneration at £1,000; pursuer repudiated the award & raised an action. The ct. refused to sustain the award.—M'CULLOCH v. SOUTHERN BANK OF SCOTLAND (1853), 1 W. R. 374.—SCOT.

b. Submission to five—Award by four—Fifth withdrawing.]—Five arbitrators came to a decision, & made, dated, & signed a rough draft of their award; deft. then withdrew from the submission; a fair copy was made, bearing the same date as that of the rough draft, but signed by only four arbitrators.—Held: the award was complete at the date of the rough draft, & its validity was not affected by the subsequent occurrences.—KULA NAGABUSHANAM v. KULASESHACHALAM (1863), 1 Mad. 178.—IND.

c. ——— Death of one before re-hearing.]—Matters in dispute were referred to the arbn. of five persons, of whom four made their award, subsequently granting an application for re-hearing. NARASINGAPPA* (1883), 1 L. R. 7 Mad. 174.—IND.

g. — — — Or any three—Two acting as pleaders & not signing award.]—A case was referred to five persons with a proviso that, in the event of two being absent, the arbn. should be continued by the other three. Two of the arbitrators named were the pleaders on either side, & with the consent of the parties ceased to act as arbitrators, but argued the matter before the other arbitrators:—Held: the award made by the three arbitrators named was valid.—DEBENDRA NATH SHAW v. AUBHOY CHURN BAGCHI (1883), 1 L. R. 9 Cal. 905; 12 C. L. R. 525.—IND.

1092 i. Submission to three or any two—Award by two.]—A decree-arbitral signed by two of three arbiters, in a case where the submission provides for an award by any two of them, in case of their differing in opinion, is good.—McCALLUM v. ROBERTSON (1825), 4 Sh. (Cl. of Sess.) 66.—SCOT.

1092 ii. — — — Other not present at signing.]—Where the submission gives authority to any two of three arbitrators to make an award, the presence of the three at the time the award is signed is not necessary.—PURDY v. BURBRIDGE (1856), 2 Thom. 150.—CAN.

1092 iii. — — — Necessity for notice to third.]—Where a cause is referred to three arbitrators, whose award, or that of any two of whom, is to be final, two of these cannot proceed to make an award without giving notice to the third.—RAYMOND v. LUKE (1836), Ber. [205], 116.—CAN.

1092 iv. — — — No notice given.]—Under a submission to three, the award to be by any two, the award was drawn up as though to be executed by the three, but was executed by two only; no final meeting was had of all three, nor notice given to the one who did not sign it, until some days after:—Held: the award was invalid.—MARTIN v. KERGAN (1859), 2 P. R. 370.—CAN.

1092 v. — — — Notice given.]—The submission empowered three arbitrators, or any two of them, to make an award. The three arbitrators sat & read all the evidence, & adjourned to meet at H., but the award was executed by two in the absence of the third, who did not attend the meeting of which he had notice, & at which the award was signed:—Held: the award was duly made. Qu.: as to the power of the two arbitrators to make the award in the absence of the third.—*CREELMAN v. 1092 vi. — — —.]—A fire loss was referred to L. & C., & a third person to be appointed by them, an award by any two of them to be binding. L. & C. appointed M. third arbitrator. L. & M. agreed on an amount, but C. said he would not sign such award, & an appointment was then made for the next day, C. being present, to meet & sign it. The award was accordingly made on the following day by L. & M., C. not attending:—Held: C.'s absence formed no objection.—Re HUBBARD & UNION FIRE INSURANCE CO. (1879), 44 U. C. R. 391.—CAN.

1092 vii. — — — Consent of parties.]—A reference under British Columbia Arbn. Act authorised two out of three arbitrators to make an award. After notice of the final meeting the third arbitrator failed to attend, but no objections were raised on account of his absence by the parties who appeared at the time appointed. The other two arbitrators made the award:—Held: in the circumstances the arbitrators present had jurisdiction to decide whether or no the award should be made by them in the third arbitrator's absence.—DOBERER v. MEGAW (1903), 34 S. C. R. 125.—CAN.

1092 viii. — — — Award altered without consent of or sufficient notice to third.]—A reference was to two, with power to appoint a third, the award to be made by any two. The arbitrators met, & two of them determined the award in a particular way:—Held: the award must be set aside.—Re McDONALD & PRESANT (1858), 16 U. C. R. 84.—CAN.

h. Submission to three—Award must be unanimous.]—Where a submission to arbn. provides that the award thereunder shall be made by three arbitrators, the award to be valid must be made by the three unanimously.—Re O'CONNOR & FIELDER (1894), 25 O. R. 568.—CAN.

k. — — — Majority award invalid.]—Where a submission is referred to three arbitrators, an award cannot be made by the majority unless the submission plainly so provides.—MASSIE v. CAMPBELLFORD, LAKE ERIE & WESTERN RY. CO. (1914), 26 O. W. R. 180, 421; 6 O. W. N. 161, 457.—CAN.

l. — — — Third arbitrator distinguished from umpire.]—A submission was to S. & N., & such third person as "the arbitrators" should appoint,

1090. Submission to four or two—Award by two.]—Debt upon a bond to perform an award. After nullum fecere arbitrium pleaded, plff. set forth that they submitted to the award of four, so that they made it by Nov. 16, & signified it under the hands & seals of two of them, & then alleged the award under two of their seals, to which deft. demurred, conceiving the award to be void, because the submission was to four. The ct. gave judgment for plff.—HILL v. LANGLEY (1670), 1 Vent. 50; 86 E. R. 36.

1091. Submission to four or any three or two—Award by two.]—On a submission to four, so as any three or two make an award under hands & seals, an award by two is good.—SALLOWS v. GIRLING (1611), Cro. Jac. 277; 79 E. R. 238.

p. — — — Third not finally consulted.]—Three arbitrators, C., D., M., having discussed all matters referred, separated, unable to agree, M. expressing his dissent as final. The attorney for one party wrote to D., requesting that the amounts on the different heads might appear on the face of the award, etc. C. & D. considered this communication, & determined to disregard it, but no notice was given to M., & an award was made by C. & D., without further consulting him in any way:—Held: the award should be set aside.—Re TORONTO CITY & LEAK (1864), 23 U. C. R. 223.—CAN.

Third not consulted.]—A submission was to three arbitrators. The award was signed by two without consulting the third:—Held: the award was bad.—KELLY v. MACDONALD (1877), 2 P. E. I. 173.—CAN.

r. — — — Third dissenting.]—A reference was before three arbitrators, & the award was executed by two of the three only. It appeared that a rough sketch of the award was drawn up & agreed to & signed by two, but dissented from by the third, & on the following day the formal award was drawn up & signed by the two, without reference to the dissenting arbitrator:—Held: the award was invalid.—ANGLIN v. NICKLE (1879), 30 C. P. 72.—CAN.

s. — — — Third withdrawing.]—An award was made by two arbitrators after the other (the arbitrator appointed by defts.) had withdrawn, at defts.' request, after all the evidence on either side had been heard, having been duly notified of their intention to make an award:—Held: under Railway Act, C. S. C. (c. 66), s. 11, the two arbitrators had power to proceed as they did.—WIDDER third.]—A reference was to three arbitrators, or any two of them. They met on Jan. 19, when one of them declared he could not meet any more, an award being signed, but not sealed & stamped, on that date. The other two, without further notice to the first, met again on Jan. 22, & made alterations in the award, which was then delivered:—Held: the award was good.—BURTLET v. SMITH (1734), 2 Barn. K. B. 412; 94 E. R. 587.

1093. ——— Third having notice of meetings.]—When a cause is referred to three persons, if they or any two of them are empowered to make an award, an award made by two of them is good, if the third had notice of the meetings, etc., but if he had no such notice, then such an award is bad.—DALLING v. MATCHETT (1740), Willes, 215; 125 E. R. 1138.

1094. ——— Ignoring suggestions of third.]—A dispute was referred to the decision of three arbitrators, or any two of them. A proposed award was shown at a meeting of the three, to which one of them objected, & he, after a discussion, declared that, if the other two would not alter their view, they must make the award by themselves, & he would not join in it. Afterwards a draft, different from that of the proposed award, was sent by mistake to the last-mentioned arbitrator, by the other two; & he returned it with comments & objections. The two others subsequently made an award corresponding with that originally proposed, without again submitting it to the third arbitrator. The ct. set the award aside.—Re PERRING (PERRING) & KEYMER (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 245; 1 Har. & W. 285; 111 E. R. 406.

1097. Award purporting to be made by three—Signed by two only.]—A cause & all matters in difference having been referred to three arbitrators, with power to any two of them to make their award, an award made & signed by two, the third having refused to concur, stated that it was made by the three. An action having been brought on this award, & an issue raised on the averment in the declaration that the two arbitrators duly made their award:—Held: the averment was supported, & the award was good.—WHITE v. 1098. Submission to one or three—Three appointed—Award by two.]—Where a matter in dispute is referred to the decision of three arbitrators, all three must concur in the making of the award; an award made by two of them only is bad.

An agreement to refer disputes to arbn. provided for a reference to "the decision of one or of three disinterested arbitrators as mutually agreed," & that, if three arbitrators were appointed, one should be nominated by each of the parties, & the third by the two so nominated. Three arbitrators having been duly nominated & having entered upon the reference, two of them made an award from which the third dissented:—Held: the award was invalid. — UNITED KINGDOM MUTUAL S.S. y. ——— After notice given.]—After the evidence in a reference to three arbitrators was closed the arbitrators discussed their award generally, agreed upon it, but not finally, & adjourned to a subsequent day to put their decision in writing. On that day one of the arbitrators did not attend the meeting, & the other two arbitrators made an award differing from the one generally agreed upon by all three arbitrators:—Held: the award of the two arbitrators was not invalidated where the third arbitrator, having a notice of a final meeting, voluntarily absented himself from it.—GLENNY v. EGLINGTON LAND CO., LTD. (1891), 17 V. L. R. 676.—AUS.

The arbitrators met, but did not make an award, nor choose an umpire, before or on June 21, but they appointed an umpire before June 28, & the umpire & arbitrators made a joint award before June 28:—Held: the award was good, for the joining of the arbitrators in the award did not vitiate it, any more than the joining of a stranger would vitiate it.—BECK v. SARGENT (1812), 4 Taunt. 232; 128 E. R. 318.

A declaration on an award made under a submission to the award of two persons, & authorising the appointment of an umpire by them, if they should disagree, after stating the choice of an umpire, alleged that the arbitrators & umpire made the award:—Held: taking the whole together, it was substantially an allegation that the umpire made the award.

The award, after reciting that A. & C. had been appointed arbitrators, & that they had appointed E. umpire, proceeded, “We, the arbitrators, do award,” etc., & was signed by the two arbitrators & the umpire:—Held: the latter by signing the award adopted the language as his.—*BATES v. h. Award in English form—Scotch submission.]—A submission, to a referee in England, executed in Scotland by Scotchmen, in the Scotch form, in relation to the management of a Scotch heritable subject, was followed by an award in England, in a form competent there, but invalid in Scotland:—Held:

it was binding in Scotland.—HOPETOUN (EARL) v. SCOTS MINES CO. & BORRON (1856), 28 Sc. Jur. 322.—SCOT.

1122 i. Parol award.]—An oral award is valid.—ERBACH v. BINDER (1914), 14 W. L. R. 720.—CAN.

1122 ii. ———.]—Semble: the award of a prize by a committee, appointed to decide who is entitled thereto, need not be in writing.—JENKINS v. KNIPE (1885), 11 V. L. R. 269.—AUS.

1122 iii. ———.]—Where there is no stipulation that an award should be in writing, an oral award may be made.—SAVLAPPA v. DEBOHAND VAIOHAND (1901), 1 L. R. 26 Bom. 132.—IND.

1122 iv. — By umpire.]—Semble: an umpire may make an oral award, though the award of an arbitrator under Arbn. Act, 1908, must be in writing.—Re KEE & NATIONAL MORTGAGE & AGENCY CO. OF NEW ZEALAND, LTD. (1917), N. Z. L. R. 173.—N.Z.

1122 v. — Decision must be manifested.]—The parties submitted their differences to an arbitrator, who made a verbal award:—Held: the arbitrator must manifest the mental conclusion he had arrived at by some external act, & the mere mental act without any external manifestation did not constitute the making of an award.—THOMSON v. MILLAR (1867), 1 R. 1 O. L. 90.—IR.

1122 vi. — Followed by improperly executed formal award.]—Matters in dispute were referred to seven arbitrators. They held sittings extending over some 1120. Award to be under hand & seal—Award under hand only.]—Where, by the terms of the submission, an award is to be made under the hand & seal of the arbitrator, & an award is made under his hand only, the ct. will not grant an attachment for contempt; but neither will the ct. set aside the award.—ANON. (1826), 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 16.

1121. Award to be in writing indented—Award not indented.]—On a motion for an attachment for non-performance of an award, it was objected that the arbitrators had not pursued their authority, because the submission confined the award to be made in writing indented, & the award produced was not indented:—Held: the objection was immaterial, & an attachment should go.—GATLIFFE v. DUNN (1738), Barnes, 55; 94 E. R. 804.

1122. Parol award.]—Debt does not lie against an exor. upon an award by parol made in the time of testator.—HAMPTON v. BOYER (1597), Cro. Eliz. 557; 78 E. R. 802.

1125. What amounts to publication.]—Semble: an award may be said to be published, when they who are interested have notice that it is ready for delivery, on payment of reasonable costs.—

months, & at each sitting came to a decision, either unanimously or by a majority, on different questions. At their last sitting the arbitrators all agreed, & informed the parties that the decisions so arrived at constituted the final award, & gave directions for embodying those decisions in a formal document, which was signed by four only:—Held: the actual award was an oral award made by all the arbitrators on the last day of their joint sitting, & the drawing up of the formal award was a purely ministerial act.—DANDEKAR v. DANDEKAR (1882), 1 L. R. 6 Bom. 663.—IND.

1122 vii. — Delivered to parties on different days—Formal award subsequently signed at different dates.]—In the case of a private award where the arbitrators verbally pronounced their judgment to one party, & on another day to the other party, & on a subsequent date wrote out the award which was signed on a particular date by one arbitrator, who sent it to others elsewhere for signature on a different date:—Held: the award ought not to be enforced under Act VIII. of 1859, s. 327.—NADER ALI v. MAJO (1874), 21 W. R. 377.—IND.

PART IV. SECT. 5.

1125 i. What amounts to publication.]—An award was filed with the prothonotary of the county in which the cause was pending enclosed in an envelope, & on the same day was opened by deft. in the office in presence & by authority

1126. —.]—The term "publication" in a submission to arbn. does not mean that there shall be notice; it is satisfied, if the award is complete, that is, if the arbitrator has so finally adjudicated upon the matters before him that it is out of his power to alter the award.

A submission to arbn. gave power to appoint an umpire, who was to make & publish his umpirage ready to be delivered to the parties or such of them as should require same on or before July 15. The award was duly executed & attested on the 11th, & on the following day, notice was sent to the attorneys of both parties by the umpire, between the hours of twelve & one, that he was about to deliver his award, & requesting them to attend him for that purpose, at five o'clock that evening, which they accordingly did, when the umpire read over & declared his award. On the same day, at ten o'clock, a.m., one of the parties to the reference died:—Held: the award was made & published in the lifetime of both parties.—BROOKE v. MITCHELL (1840), 6 M. & W. 473; 8 Dowl. 392; 9 L. J. Ex. 269; 4 Jur. 656; 151 E. R. 498.

1127. Award presumed to have been delivered same day as made.—In pleading that an arbitrator "by writing made & delivered under his hand & seal, dated on such a day, awarded, etc.," it shall be intended to have been made & delivered the same day.—BASPOOLE v. FREEMAN (1611), Cro. Jac. 285; 79 E. R. 244.

of one of the arbitrators:—Held: the award was duly published.—CREELMAN v. McMULLEN (1885), 6 R. & G. 138; 6 C. L. T. 450.—CAN.

1125 ii. —.]—An award is published (so far as regards the time for an application to set it aside) when the parties have notice that it may be had on payment of charges. Notice of the contents of the award is not necessary to constitute publication.—REDICK v. SKELTON (1889), 18 O. R. 100.—CAN.

1125 iii. —.]—An award of arbn. which has neither been pronounced nor signified to the parties, whatever knowledge they may have had of it otherwise, is null & void.—HERBERT v. WRIGHT (1889), 18 R. L. S. C. 538.—CAN.

1125 iv. —.]—"Publication" of an award, signifying its completion so far as the arbitrator is concerned, is made when he executes it in the presence of a witness or does any other act showing his final mind, upon which he becomes functus officio.—HUYCK v. WILSON (1898), 18 P. R. 44.—CAN.

1125 vi. — Transmission of copies insufficient.—Arbiters with authority to pronounce decree or decrees partial or total pronounced two interim decrees, which were drawn up & signed by the respective arbiters, & copies certified by the clerk were transmitted to the parties, the principal decrees never leaving the possession of the clerk. The arbiters never directed the clerk to deliver the decree-arbitrals nor to put them on record:—Held: delivery of copies was not equivalent to formal delivery of the awards.—M'NAIR v. GRAY & WOODROW (1831), 5 Wils. & S. 305.—SCOT.

1125 vii. — Posting completed award to clerk.—Held: the posting of a completed award to the clerk to the reference was sufficient delivery.—M'QUAKER v. PHOENIX ASSURANCE Co. (1859), 31 Sc. Jur. 418.—SCOT.

1125 viii. — Original delivered to one party—Copy to other.—If an award is duly executed & delivered to the party in whose favour it is made, it is sufficient to give a copy to the other party.—Re OULTON & ALLEN (1885), 25 N. B. R. 19.—CAN.

1125 ix. — Award sent by mail.—During the pendency of a suit matters were referred to arbn. In due course a document purporting to be the arbitrator's award, was received by the other through the post:—Held: the so-called award was never delivered by the arbitrator & was in fact & in law no award at all.—SHAM LAL v. MISRI KUNWAR (1907), 1 L. L. R. 29 All. 426.—IND.

k. Award to be made & served by stated day—Service.—An agreement provided that an award should be made & signed on or before Feb. 19, 1875, & that copies of it should be served on the parties within ninety days from the date of the agreement. The award was made & signed on Feb. 18, 1875, & copies

1129. Delivery before day specified.—On a submission, so as the award be delivered on the 28th at the shop of A., a delivery on the 27th is good.—BEALE v. BEALE (1634), Cro. Car. 383; 79 E. R. 934.

1130. Award to be ready to be delivered by particular day at particular place.—Where an award is to be ready to be delivered by a particular day at a particular place, an averment that it was made elsewhere, ready to be delivered there, is good.—DOYLEY v. BURTON (1700), 1 Ld. Raym. 533; 91 E. R. 1256.

1131. —.]—Under a submission so as the award be ready to be delivered on such a day, a declaration on an award made before the day, without saying it was ready to be delivered, is good.—BRADSEY v. CLYSTON (1639), Cro. Car. 541; 79 E. R. 1066.

served on that day, ninety-one days after the date of the agreement:—Held: the objection that copies had not been served within the time stipulated could not prevail, as the award was made & served within the time named in the agreement.—Re WEIR & CUMMINGER (1876), 2 R. & C. 173.—CAN.

1130 i. Award to be ready to be delivered by particular day.—Where the submission is, that the award shall be delivered by a certain day, if it be ready for delivery by that day it is sufficient.—GALBRAITH v. WALKER (1838), 1 Ont. Dig. 103.—CAN.

1130 ii. —.]—An award which is required to be made in writing & delivered to the parties at a certain day is complete when ready to be delivered, & does not require delivery to give it effect.—SANFORD v. SANFORD (1846), 2 Thom. 266.—CAN.

1130 iii. — Demand subsequent to date must be averred.—A plea averred that the arbitrators had been requested on or before the time limited for delivering their award, but did not deliver the award:—Held: bad, & the averment should have been that the request was made after the day named.—FINKLE v. ARNOLD (1848), 6 U. C. R. 168.—CAN.

l. Award announced in place specified but rendered in another.—The nullity of an award cannot be claimed on the ground that it has been rendered in a place different from that in which it was agreed that it should be rendered, if it was announced to the parties at the place agreed upon.—R. v. MCGREEVY (1885), 15 R. L. Q. B. 595.—CAN.

SECT. 6.—FORM AND CONTENTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—GENERALLY.

1134. Incorporating opinion of experts.]—Where two arbitrators, with the consent of the parties, refer part of the matter to experts, & the experts make their award, this is incorporated in the award of the arbitrators, & the whole is one entire award.—CHURCH v. ROPER (1639), 1 Rep. Ch. 140; 21 E. R. 531.

1135. In form of opinion.]—An award may be sufficient, though in the form of an opinion.—MATSON v. TROWER (1824), Ry. & M. 17.

Annotations :—Distd. Lock v. Vulliamy (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 600; Re Flews (1845), 14 L. J. Q. B. 139.

1136. Good in substance.]—Although an award, which finds the special facts, is in the nature of a special verdict, it is not to be construed with so much strictness; but the award is to be maintained, if it is good in substance.—HARDING v. HARRISON (1827), 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 249.

1137. Statement of points of law.]—A cause was referred to an arbitrator, with liberty to him to state upon his award any point of law raised by either party in reference to the matters thereby referred. Certain points of law were accordingly submitted to the arbitrator, which he set out upon his award (but without reference to any particular state of facts), & certified that he had over-ruled them. The arbitrator's decision upon these points, as abstract propositions, being correct, the ct. refused either to refer it back to him to amend his award by setting forth the facts, upon which the questions of law arose, or to set aside the award.—JAY v. BYLES (1833), 3 Moo. & S. 86.

1138. Stating facts.]—An action to recover copyhold fines was referred to an arbitrator, with power, at the request of either party, to set out the copyhold premises, & to state any facts for the opinion of the ct. The arbitrator found a gross sum to be due from deft. to plff., & he set out the copyhold premises, but omitted to state the facts on which he formed his opinion, although requested to do so:—Held: the award was not bad by reason of this omission, as the arbitrator was not bound to set out the facts.—WOOD v. HOTHAM (1839), 5 M. & W. 674; 9 L. J. Ex. 3; 151 E. R. 286.

1139. Award that action brought to try a right—Not bound to state what right.]—Where, in an action by a reversioner, which was referred, by order of Nisi Prius, to an arbitrator, he awarded (inter alia) that the action was brought to try a right, besides the mere right to recover damages:—Held: he was not bound to state what was the right which the action was brought to try.—ANGUS v. REDFORD (1843), 11 M. & W. 69; 2 Dowl. N. S. 735; 12 L. J. Ex. 180; 152 E. R. 719.

PART IV. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 1.

1134 i. Incorporating opinion of umpire.]—Where arbitrators disagree in some items, & during the investigation call in an umpire to give his opinion thereon, & adopt it as their own, he need not sign the award.—Re CAYLEY & McMULLEN (1846), 3 U. C. R. 124.—CAN.

m. Adoption of agreement arrived at by parties.]—Where an award, which purported to be a considered award of the arbitrators, was found to be merely the adoption by the arbitrators of an agreement arrived at by the parties:—Held: this would not prevent the award being a valid & binding award between the parties.—GOBARDHAN DAS v. JAI KISHEN DAS (1900), I. L. R. 22 All. 224.—IND.

1135 i. In form of opinion.]—Under a submission giving no power to award a verdict, the award was: "I am of opinion that defts. are entitled to the verdict in this cause, & by the authority vested in me as arbitrator, confirm this opinion, & decide the case accordingly":—Held: the award might be upheld as an informal expression of opinion in favour of defts., there being no express direction to enter a verdict.—CREIGHTON v. BROWN (1852), 1 P. R. 331.—CAN.

SUB-SECT. 2.—RECITALS.

1140. Whether necessary to recite—Enlargement of time.]—An award within the enlarged time is good on the face of it, though it do not recite that the arbitrators did not, in fact, enlarge the time.—GEORGE v. LOUSLEY (1806), 8 East, 13; 103 E. R. 249.

Annotations :—Refd. Wohlenberg v. Lageman (1815), 6 Taunt. 251; Smith v. Reeves (1836), 2 Har. & W. 306. Mentd. Re Coombs, Freshfield & Fernley (1850), 4 Exch. 839; Richardson v. Worsley (1850), 5 Exch. 613.

1141. Bond of reference.]—The ct. will grant a rule nisi to set aside an award, where the award does not recite the bond of reference.—DODSLEY v. DODSLEY (1822), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 7.

1142. — Matters in difference other than action referred.]—Where a cause & all matters in difference are referred, a recital in the award that the action was referred, without mentioning other matters in difference, does not constitute an objection to the award on the face of it.

Such an objection should be made the ground of a separate application to set aside the award, supported by affidavits showing what were the other matters in difference.—PAULL (PAUL) v. PAULL (PAUL) (1833), 2 Cr. & M. 235; 2 Dowl. 340; 4 Tyr. 72; 3 L. J. Ex. 11; 149 E. R. 747.

Annotations :—Refd. Re Dodington (1839), 7 Scott, 733. Mentd. Mendell v. Tyrrell (1841), 9 M. & W. 217.

1143. Taking of view.]—Where, by an agreement of reference, an arbitrator was directed to take a view, which was taken accordingly:—Held: it was no objection to the award that the view was not set out.—SPENCE v. EASTERN COUNTIES Ry. Co. (1839), 3 Jur. 846.

1144. — That evidence was taken on oath.]—Where an arbitrator omitted to state in his award that the evidence he had heard was upon oath:—Held: the award was good.—HANNAN v. JUBE (1846), 10 Jur. 926.

1145. — Judge's order remitting back award.]—A cause & all matters in difference between the parties were referred to arbn. by order of Nisi Prius, which contained a clause enabling the ct., in case the award should be disputed, to remit the matters referred to the re-determination of the arbitrator. The attorneys on each side, considering the award defective, agreed that it should be amended, & subsequently a judge's order was drawn up by consent, whereby it was ordered that the matters arbitrated upon should be referred back to the arbitrator, to make such alterations as he should think fit. The arbitrator altered the award, & re-delivered it, without giving notice to the parties of his intention so to do, & the amended award did not recite the judge's order:—Held: such amended award need not recite the judge's order.—BAKER v. HUNTER (1847), 16 M. & W. 672; 4 Dow. & L. 696; 2 New Pract. Cas. 237; 16 L. J. Ex. 203; 153 E. R. 1360.

n. In form of recommendation.]—A document, although headed as an "award" & signed by the arbitrator, which merely recommends a solution of the questions referred to arbn., will not be treated by the ct. as an award on an application made under Code of Civil Procedure, s. 525.—NUNDOLLOL MOOKERJEE v. CHUNDER KANT MOOKERJEE (1885), I. L. R. 11 Calc. 356.—IND.

p. Memorandum of instructions as to preparation of award.]—A memorandum in writing, signed by arbitrators, as instructions to a solr. to draw up an award is not a binding award.—SHAW v. MORTON (1863), 13 C. P. 223.—CAN.

Sect. 6.—Form & contents: Sub-sect. 2. Sects. 7 & 8: Sub-sects. 1 & 2, A.]

1146. Principles of decision.]—A patent had been obtained by K. & Co., & A. & others agreed to enter into partnership with them for the purpose of working the patent. Differences arose, which were submitted to arbn. It was sought to set aside the award, on the ground that the arbitrator had not stated on what principles he had made his award, so that the award would be of no use in the event of future differences. It did not appear that he was bound to state on what principle he decided, nor was he requested to do so:—Held: the award should not be set aside.—Re KEANE'S AWARD (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 59.

1147. Effect of errors in recitals—Cause referred by judge's order—Award reciting same to be referred by order of Nisi Prius.]—By a judge's order, made at chambers, upon hearing the attorneys on both sides, & by their consent, a cause was referred to arbn. It was recited in the award that the cause was referred by an order of Nisi Prius:—Held: such award was bad, & the performance of it could not be enforced by attachment.—CHRISTIE v. HAMLET (1828), 5 Bing. 195; 2 Moo. & P. 316; 7 L. J. O. S. C. P. 77; 130 E. R. 1035.

Annotations:—Expld. Baker v. Hunter (1847), 16 M. & W. 672. Distd. Browne v. Collyer (1851), 20 L. J. Q. B. 426.

1148. — Christian name of arbitrator.]—A misrecital, in an award by an umpire, of the Christian name of one of the original arbitrators, by whom he has been duly appointed, does not vitiate the award.—TREW v. BURTON (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 533; 3 Tyr. 559; 2 L. J. Ex. 236; 149 E. R. 511.

1149. — Extension of arbitrator's powers.]—An untrue recital in an award of an extension of the arbitrator's power by agreement of the parties will not cure an excess, where the truth appears upon affidavit.—PRICE v. POPKIN (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 139; 2 Per. & Dav. 304; 8 L. J. Q. B. 198; 3 Jur. 433; 113 E. R. 53.

1150. — As to decision of umpire.]—By a judge's order, a cause was referred to A., B. & C., the award to be made by them or any two of them, & it was provided that the arbitrators, or any two of them, should, as to certain work, adopt the opinion or decision of C., & as to certain other work, the opinion or decision of A. & B., or, in case

A. & B. should differ in opinion, then that the arbitrators, or such two of them, as should make an award, should adopt the opinion or decision, as to such last-mentioned work, of an umpire to be nominated by A. & B. before proceeding with the reference. A. & B. appointed an umpire, & afterwards made an award, in which they recited that they had heard & duly considered the allegations & evidence of the parties, & had considered the decision of the umpire. There had, in fact, been no difference of opinion on the part of A. & B., & no opinion or decision had been required of, or given by, the umpire:—Held: the introduction of these words did not vitiate the award.—HARLOW v. READ (1845), 1 C. B. 733; 3 Dow. & L. 203; 14 L. J. C. P. 239; 5 L. T. O. S. 175; 9 Jur. 642; 135 E. R. 730.

1151. — Of date of enlargement.]—A misrecital in an award of the date of an enlargement is immaterial.—Re LLOYD & SPITTLE, Re ADDISON & SPITTLE (1849), 18 L. J. Q. B. 151; 13 Jur. 587.

1152. — Original submission altered by act of parties—Award reciting original submission.]—Where an arbitrator has, by agreement of the parties, jurisdiction to determine disputes which may arise as to certain matters specified in the agreement, & the parties submit to him for adjudication matters not within his jurisdiction, both the arbitrator & the parties being under the misapprehension that the matters so submitted are within his jurisdiction, the recital in an award, made in such circumstances, of the original agreement to refer will not invalidate the award.—THAMES IRON WORKS & SHIPBUILDING CO., LTD. v. R. (1869), 10 B. & S. 33; 20 L. T. 318.

SECT. 8.—REQUISITES OF VALID AWARD.

SUB-SECT. 1.—MUST FOLLOW SUBMISSION.

1155. Must conform to submission.]—On a submission touching monies laid out for a wife before her coverture at her request, an award made for money, without saying it was laid out at her request, is void.—WATERS v. BRIDGE (1622), Cro. Jac. 639; 79 E. R. 551.

*Annotation:—*Refd. Bradford Old Bank v. Sutcliffe, [1918] 2 K. B. 833, C. A.

1156. —.]—An award must pursue the submission in point of form as well as in point of substance.—HENDERSON v. WILLIAMSON (1718), 1 Stra. 116; 93 E. R. 420.

1157. —.]—A declaration stated that pltf. had commenced an action against T., to recover a sum of money alleged to be due on an account delivered to T., & that, in consideration that pltf. had consented to stay all proceedings in that cause, on security being given to him for the payment of such sum of money as might be found due from T. upon the account, which was to be submitted to arbn., defts. undertook to pay pltf. so much as, on such arbn., should be found due. Breach, non-payment of the sum found due. Defts. set out, in their plea, the certificate of the arbitrators, which ran thus: "We certify that there is now due from T. to pltf. £120, which we direct & order to be paid by the securities (defts.)"; & then traversed, without this, that the arbitrators "made their certificate in writing of & concerning the matters so referred to them as aforesaid, in manner & form," etc. It was not proved that the arbitrators had confined themselves to the particular account:—Held: this was a fatal variance in the declaration, as the above certificate appeared to have been made on all matters in difference.—KING v. BOWEN (1841), 8 M. & W. 625; 1 Dowl. N. S. 21; 10 L. J. Ex. 433; 151 E. R. 1189.

1158. — Wrong parties named.]—In an action against E. H. & W. T., at the suit of L., upon a reference, the award, purporting to be made in an action against E. H. & E. T., at the suit of L., ordered E. H. & E. T. to pay a sum of money to L. An attachment for non-performance of the award was refused.—LEES v. HARTLEY (1840), H. & W. 61; Woll. 86.

1159. — Submission in explicit terms.] —*SLOWMAN v. WIGGINS, No. 228, ante.

1160. — Whether necessary to state that evidence outside submission was rejected.]—In an action upon an award defts. pleaded that the lump sum awarded included matters, claims & demands in respect of which the arbitrators had no jurisdiction, as not having been referable to them under the terms of the contract between the parties:—Held: as it appeared that the matters actually referred were those contained in the submission, the award was not bad on the face of it by reason that it did not state that matters not referred had been rejected from consideration.—FALKINGHAM v. VICTORIAN RAILWAYS COMR., [1900] A. C. 452; 69 L. J. P. C. 89; 82 L. T. 506, P. C.

1161 xi. — Not applicable to matters included at request of parties.]—Where the amounts allowed in an award in respect of lands were agreed on by the parties & put in the award at their request:—Held: the rule that an arbitrator cannot go beyond the submission did not apply to such circumstances.—Re GRAVES & TENTLER (1911), 19 W. L. R. 361; 21 Man. L. R. 417.—CAN.

1164. — Void in toto where inseverable.] — Where arbitrators had awarded on a matter which was not referred to them, & what they had so awarded, without authority, could not be separated from the other parts of their award:—Held: the award was bad & must be set aside.—BOWES v. FERNIE (1838), 4 My. & Cr. 150; 41 E. R. 59.

—If an arbitrator has awarded something beyond the authority, the award is pro tanto void, & if the void part is so mixed up with the rest that it cannot be rejected, the award is void altogether, otherwise those against whom the award is made would be compelled to fulfil the void part (BLACKBURN, J.).—*BUCCLEUCH (DUKE) v. The wool to be guaranteed about similar to samples in the selling brokers' possession; & if any dispute arises, it shall be decided by the selling brokers, whose decision shall be final." On the arrival of the wool, it turned out not about similar to sample, & the brokers, after protest from deft., awarded that deft. should take it at a certain abatement in the price of different bales:—Held: (1) as the contract was for the sale of specific goods, the guarantee was not a condition, but only a warranty, & deft. could not reject the wool on account of its inferiority; (2) the brokers had power to award as they had, & deft. was bound to take the wool accordingly.—*HEYWORTH v. 1179. Dispute as to right to reject — Award directing acceptance at reduced price.]—A contract for the sale of wheat to arrive contained a clause that any dispute arising thereout should be referred to arbn., as therein provided. On its arrival, the buyer claimed the right to reject it, on account of inferiority in quality. The sellers at once called for an arbn. The arbitrators made an award that the purchaser should take the wheat with an allowance:—Held: (1) the award was invalid, inasmuch as the only question submitted to the arbitrators was the buyer's right to reject; (2) no custom existed in the Liverpool corn trade compelling a buyer to accept, with an allowance, wheat inferior in quality to that contracted for, if not sea-damaged.—SINIDINO, RALLI & Co. v. KITCHEN & Co. (1883), 1 Cab. & El. 217.

1180. ———.]—G. & Co. contracted to buy, from B. W. & Co., about 1,000 cases, at 32s. per case, of tinned salmon, quality guaranteed good; & the contract provided that there should be the "usual examination for customary allowances, & general brokers' conditions, any dispute to be settled by arbn." Subsequently G. & Co. objected that the samples tendered were not equal to contract guarantee, & proposed arbn. Both sides then appointed arbitrators, who made an award "that the buyers accept the salmon, & that the sellers make an allowance to the buyers of 1s. 6d. per case." Thereupon G. & Co. applied to the ct. for an injunction to restrain B. W. & Co. from making the awards a rule of ct., & to have the award set aside or remitted to the arbitrators for reconsideration, mainly on the ground that they had exceeded their jurisdiction. The question was whether the submission to the arbitrators extended, not only to the point as to the quality of the salmon, but also to the right of the buyers to reject the goods, if not equal to guarantee. The evidence showed that there was a custom of the trade that, where there was a deficiency or inferiority in the quality of goods tendered under a contract, arbitrators might by their award make

pltf. should take back one thousand six hundred & thirty-nine casks:—Held: the arbitrators had power so to direct, as the cement was unmerchantable.—SAHL v. MACDONNELL (1886), 7 N. S. W. L. R. 385.—AUS.

b. Submission to Chamber of Commerce—Award incorporating trade custom.]—An award was made by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, who, it was alleged, had acted in excess of jurisdiction in having disregarded the fact that the contract was made by pltf. as brokers. Pltf. alleged there was a custom in the market, by which brokers were liable upon such contracts, & such custom was well-known to the Chamber:—Held: (1) the custom existed; (2) the Chamber knew of it; (3) the matter was within their jurisdiction, & the award was properly made.—*JOYHALL & Co. v. the buyer take the goods with an allowance by way of compensation, fixed by the award:—Held: (1) the submission did not extend to the latter point; (2) the arbitrators had exceeded their authority in attempting to bind the buyers by making a new contract, by which they were not bound in point of law, or to deprive the buyers of their right to reject the goods, & any custom of the trade to that effect was an unreasonable one; (3) the matter must be referred back to the arbitrators.—Re GREEN & Co. & BALFOUR, WILLIAMSON & Co. (1890), 63 L. 1181. ———.]—Defts. contracted to supply plths. with 20,000 cases of tinned salmon at 23s. 9d. per case, "allowances, as customary, to be settled on result of examination before delivery, of not less than 10 per cent. of the cases for average." Any dispute was to be settled by arbn. In due course defts. tendered 14,000 cases as part of the 20,000, each tin of which was labelled, "Tinned salmon; 1 lb.; first quality." A dispute arose as to the weight of some of the tins, & plths. gave notice of their intention to reject the goods, inasmuch as a sale of them with a false statement as to weight would render the vendors liable to criminal proceedings, under Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (c. 28), ss. 2, 3. The parties thereupon proceeded to arbn., arbitrators & an umpire being appointed. On investigation, it was found that about sixty tins in every twenty-five cases were deficient in weight. The umpire made his award, finding, (1) the salmon was a fair tender under the contract, & no sufficient cause existed for rejecting the same; (2) the weight was "irregular & unusually deficient"; & awarding 1s. per case compensation to plths. The evidence showed that in the trade the "customary allowance" for deficiency in weight was 7s. 6d. for twenty-five cases, whereas the umpire's allowance was 25s. Plths. moved to restrain defts. from making the award a rule of ct., & that the matter in dispute might be remitted to the arbitrators & umpire for reconsideration:—Held: (1) the deficiency being, according to the umpire's award, "irregular & unusual," the award was, on the face of it, bad; (2) in the circumstances, the umpire had no power to force the parties to enter into a new contract by the insertion of a new price, instead of the "customary allowances," he having considered that "customary allowances" did not apply; (3) the matter must go back to the arbitrators & umpire.—HOOPER & Co. v. BALFOUR, WILLIAMSON & Co. (1890), 62 L. T. 646.

1182. ——— Award determining right to reject subsequent shipments & rescind contract.—A contract was entered into for the sale of 1,100 pieces of timber, to be delivered in two instalments. Upon delivery of the first instalment, the purchasers refused to accept the goods, on the ground that they did not fulfil the terms of the contract, & further, intimated that they would refuse the second instalment, on the ground that the first instalment was such a departure from the contract as to justify them in refusing to accept either parcel. The matter was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator found & awarded that the first shipment was so far from complying with the requirements of the contract, as to entitle the buyers to repudiate & to rescind the whole contract, & to refuse to accept the first shipment & all further shipments under the contract. Upon a motion by the vendors to set aside the award, upon the ground that it was bad upon its face:—Held: the umpire was entitled to draw the inference, from the defective delivery of the first instalment, that the second would also be bad, & the award could not be said to be bad upon its face.—MILLAR'S KARRI & JARRAH Co. (1902) v. WEDDEL, TURNER & Co. (1908), 100 L. T. 128; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 184; 14 Com. Cas. 25.

1183. Dispute as to quantity — Award deciding basis of ascertaining same.—A contract for the sale of a cargo of wheat provided that disputes should be referred to arbitrators, & "any deficiency on bill of lading weight to be paid by the seller, & any excess over bill of lading weight to be paid by buyer, at contract price." On a reference to arbn., the buyers were awarded a deduction from the gross weight by custom. The gross actual weight of the wheat was not disputed, but there was a question as to an allowance of 1 lb. per 500 lb. from the gross weight, which was given when the weighing was by "hopper," as at Newcastle, in order to give the buyer the benefit of the "turn of the beam," which he would get if the weighing were by scale. The sellers, H. & Co., applied to set aside the award as beyond the jurisdiction as to this allowance:—Held: the arbitrators had jurisdiction, & there was no ground for setting aside the award.—HARRIS BROTHERS v. SMYTH (1888), 4 T. L. R. 569.

1184. Dispute as to quality — Award deciding average weight on which quality based.—On an informal reference to two brokers, it appeared the contract in dispute was for the sale of hides of an average weight of 69 lbs., to come out at 63 lbs. on delivery. In awarding damages, the arbitrators took into consideration the proportion of light hides to heavy, as well as the failure to reach the average:—Held: (1) the arbitrators were entitled, under the submission, to award damages both for the low average & the large proportion of light hides; (2) the award could not be set aside.—Re BRANDT & Co. & BOUTCHER & Co. (1890), 7 T. L. R. 140.

1185. Submission of "any dispute arising on this contract" — Award as to existence of trade custom.—By a contract in writing, defts. "sold to" plths. a cargo of cotton seed cake of a specified quality. The contract contained a clause that, "should any of the above goods turn out not equal to quality specified, they are to be taken at an allowance, which allowance, together with any dispute arising on this contract, is to be settled by arbn." Defts. signed the contract, with the addition of the word "brokers," & were acting as agents. Some time after the contract was signed, defts. named their principals. The cargo proved to be of inferior quality, & an arbn. (which plths. did not attend), to determine the liability of defts., was held; the arbitrators decided, by their award, that defts. were not liable, inasmuch as a custom existed that a broker, upon naming his principals, ceased to be liable on the contract. At the trial of the action, the jury found that the alleged custom did not exist:—Held: defts. were not relieved from liability by the award, inasmuch as the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction.—*HUTCHESON v. 1186. —.]—A contract for the sale of rubber contained the following arbn. clause: "Any dispute on this contract to be settled by arbn. here, in the usual way." On arrival at Liverpool, the buyers refused to take delivery, on the ground that the goods were not in accordance with the contract. The dispute was referred to arbitrators, who found that the goods were not in accordance with contract, but must be accepted by the buyers at an allowance of 10s. per ton. The award was based upon the existence of an alleged custom applicable to contracts for raw materials to be shipped to this country, to the effect that the buyers should accept the goods with an allowance for inferiority of quality, where that inferiority was, in the opinion of the arbitrators, not excessive or unreasonable. Upon a motion by the buyers to set aside the award, the ct. directed an issue to determine the existence of the alleged custom, & upon the trial of the issue, the alleged custom was found not to exist:—Held: the arbitrators had no jurisdiction to deal conclusively with the question of the existence of the custom for the purpose of making their award, & as the custom upon which they based their award had been found not to exist in fact, the award compelling the buyers to accept goods not in accordance with the written contract was bad, & must be set aside.—Re NORTH WESTERN RUBBER CO., LTD., & HÜTTENBACH & CO., [1908] 2 K. A dispute having arisen between buyer & seller, whether the measure of damages in respect of the non-delivery of the cargo was the difference between the contract price & the market price at the time of the breach, or the difference between the contract price & the price at which the buyer sold to G., a third party, the matter was referred to arbn. under the terms of the contract. The arbitrator found that the buyer intended to re-sell to G. the cargo due to him from the seller, & appropriated that cargo to his contract with G., & he gave his award put up a stile & bridge upon the way, in a place described. That place was not on land of either pltf. or deft. :—Held : this latter part of the award was void.

The terms of the submission extend only to what is to be done between these parties : the moment the interests of third parties come in it is beyond the authority given by the submission. So far, therefore, as the award refers to anything to be done on the land of third persons, it is not within the submission : no action could be maintained for not doing it (PARKE, B.).—TURNER v. SWAINSON (1836), 1 M. & W. 572 ; 2 Gale, 133 ; Tyr. & Gr. 933 ; 5 L. J. Ex. 266 ; 150 E. R. 563.

1215. General rule.]—Semble : at whatever stage of proceeding a cause may have arrived, an arbitrator can have no authority of himself, & without the intervention of a jury, to direct the entry of a verdict.—JACKSON v. 1216. Reference of cause.]—A submission to refer a cause, & the subject-matter thereof, & the issue therein, to the award of a barrister, does not authorise him to order a verdict to be entered up.—HUTCHINSON v. BLACKWELL (1832), 8 Bing. 331 ; 1 Dowl. 267 ; 1 Moo. & S. 513 ; 1 L. J. C. P. 98 ; 131 E. R. 421.

1217. Power to decide whether plaintiff has right of action.]—Under an order of reference of a cause & all matters in difference between the parties, the costs of the suit & of the reference & award, & all other costs, were to abide the event, & final judgment was to be entered up for pltf. or deft., according to the award. The arbitrator awarded that pltf. had no cause of action against deft., & that pltf. should pay to deft. a certain sum, which he found to be due from pltf. to deft. The arbitrator then declared that his award was not intended to exclude pltf. from receiving the commission to which he would be entitled under a certain agreement :—Held : the arbitrator had no power to direct in which way the verdict was to be entered, but only to decide whether pltf. had a right of action against deft., & a rule to set aside the award should be refused.—HARDING v. FORSHAW (1836), 1 M. & W. 415 ; 4 Dowl. 761 ; Tyr. & Gr. 472 ; 150 E. R. 496.

1218. Same powers as judge at Nisi Prius.]—An action of trespass was referred by order of Nisi Prius, which empowered the arbitrator to amend the pleadings, & to certify for costs, in the same manner as a judge at Nisi Prius. The arbitrator awarded a verdict for pltf., with nominal damages, & certified in his award that the action was brought to try a right, etc. :—Held : he had power to do so, & pltf. was entitled thereon to his full costs.—SPAIN v. CADELL (CADELL) (1841), 8 M. & W. 129 ; 9 Dowl. 745 ; 10 L. J. Ex. 313 ; 5 Jur. 322 ; 151 E. R. 978.

is referred to an arbitrator before trial, he has no power to direct a verdict to be entered.—STANNIFORTH v. RYALL (1844), 3 L. T. O. S. 100.

1220. No express power to direct verdict.]—A cause in which issue had been joined & all matters in difference were referred by a judge's order to arbn., without any power to the arbitrator to direct a verdict to be entered, the costs of the cause to abide the event, & the costs of the reference & award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator directed that a verdict should be entered for defts. on all the issues, that each party should pay their own costs of the reference, & that a moiety of the costs of the award should be paid by each of the parties. He then awarded that the parties should execute mutual general releases of all & all manner of actions, etc., to each other :—Held : the arbitrator having exceeded his authority in directing a verdict to be entered, that part of the award could not be rejected as surplusage, as it was an event inconsistent with the award of the releases with respect to costs, & if the release did not extend to the action referred, there was no final determination of the action.—HAWKYARD v. 1222. Intention of arbitrator clear.]—An action of ejectment, upon two several demises, was, after issue joined, referred by a judge's order to the award, arbitrament, final end & determination of an unprofessional arbitrator, the costs of the cause & of the reference & award to abide the event of the award. The arbitrator, professing to make his award "of & concerning the matter to him referred," ordered that "the verdict in the cause should be entered for the lessors of pltf." :—Held : although the submission gave the arbitrator no power to enter a verdict, yet, inasmuch as the words used by him were not precise & technical words, the ct. was at liberty to deal with them as a mere intimation of his intention substantially to decide in favour of the lessors of pltf., & the award might be enforced by action.—LAW v. BLACKBURROW (1853), 14 C. B. 77 ; 23 L. J. C. P. 28 ; 22 L. T. O. S. 146 ; 18 Jur. 130 ; 2 W. R. 104 ; 2 C. L. R. 28 ; 139 E. R. 33.

is to be void, & instead thereof, to be entered for debts." The arbitrator found for debts on all the issues but one, & that issue the arbitrator found for pltf., with one farthing damages, over & above costs & charges. It was contended that the arbitrator had no power to set aside the verdict for pltf., unless pltf. was not entitled to recover any damages at all, whereas he had found that pltf. was entitled to a farthing:—Held: that was to be rejected as surplusage.

1227. Accounts—Award that no partnership existed — & that shares should be delivered up on payment of sum named.]—By bond of submission dated Mar. 19, 1859, it was referred to an arbitrator to determine of & concerning all matters of accounts then pending between A. & B. The arbitrator, by his award, reciting the submission, awarded "of & concerning the premises," that, "up to Oct. 31, 1857, the accounts between A. & B., in reference to W. Farm, were adjusted, & that the balance then due from A. to B. amounted to £4,314 14s. 10d., & that no partnership existed between A. & B. in respect of the farm"; & he further awarded "that A. do pay to B. the sum of £781 5s. 3d., the amount due from him in respect of the farm, & that A. do pay to B. the sum of £1,137 17s., due from him to B. in respect of shares in W. Co., & that, on payment of such last-mentioned sum, B. do deliver to A. one hundred & eighteen shares in the co., held by him as collateral security for the sum." In an action to enforce payment of the two sums so awarded:—Held: the arbitrator had not exceeded the authority given to him by the submission, in awarding that no partnership existed between A. & B., or that the shares held by B. as collateral security for the £1,137 17s. should be delivered up to A. on payment of that sum.—HARRISON v. 1228. Bankruptcy—Right of proof.]—In a contract between a co. & S., the latter agreed to execute certain works, & to provide materials, labour, engines, tools, implements, etc. S. inclosed land of the co., so as to exclude the public, & erected steam-engines, & placed implements & materials thereon, for the purpose of carrying on the works. S., after some time, by letters, in which he referred to & enumerated the machinery & materials he had placed upon the premises, applied for & obtained advances from the co., upon the faith of his agreement that the engines, implements & materials, then on, or afterwards to be brought on, the premises, should be a security. The amount of those advances always exceeded the value of the property on the premises. S. having become bkpt., the co. erased his marks on the engines, implements & materials on the premises, & substituted their own. In trover by his assignees against the co., the cause & all matters in difference being submitted to arbn.:—Held: the arbitrator had no authority to award as to debts, right to prove under the commission, for their advances, or as to the extent of such proof.—CROWFOOT v. 1229 iii. —.]—A tradesman & his employer referred the value of work to arbiters & an oversman. The oversman issued a decree-arbitral finding the value of the work done, & finding the 1229 iv. —.]—Held: a reference of disputes "as to the contract, or as to the true intent, meaning, or effect thereof," did not give the arbiter jurisdiction to determine all questions arising upon the construction of the contract, but only such questions as required to be determined in order to enable him to explicate his jurisdiction.—MACKAY & SON v. LEVEN P. COMRS. (1893), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1093.—SCOT.

1229 v. —.]—A clause in a building contract gave power to proceed to arbn. upon certain definite claims specified in the clause. The contractor proceeded to arbn. & put forward a number of claims many of which were non-referable under the clause, but one claim was in respect of a matter referable & amounted to £30,000. The arbitrators made an award giving the contractor £16,000 in one bulk sum:—Held: as the award recited that the arbitrators had taken into consideration & duly weighed the evidence & made their award upon the matters referred to, the award was bad on its face as including non-referable items.—WATSON v. BOARD OF LAND & WORKS (1897), 23 V. L. R. 421.—AUS.

1229 vi. —.]—A building contract provided that work must be executed in a certain manner, the whole work to be executed in a tradesmanlike manner. In arbn. proceedings the arbiter observed: "A first-class tradesmanlike job could not possibly be executed or expected at the contract prices." The CO. v. WARTON* (1861), 6 H. & N. 520; 31 L. J. Ex. 515; 158 E. R. 214.

1230. —.]—A contract relating to the construction of certain docks stipulated that a schedule of prices should form the basis thereof, & that all work should be priced in accordance therewith, or, in the event of "any other description of work," at such prices as might be agreed to by the engineer. A dispute having arisen between the parties, the matter was referred to arbn. under a clause in the contract. The arbitrator decided that, as certain excavating work under the contract had turned out to be wholly different from that for which the schedule of prices had been framed, he had power to hear evidence as to the nature of the soil to be excavated, & to say what was the proper price to be allowed for such work:—Held: (1) the arbitrator had jurisdiction to determine the question whether the removal of a large quantity of soft & swampy soil was "excavation" within the contract, or whether it came within the exception as to "any other description of work," & it would be impossible to determine that question without evidence as to the nature of the soil whereon the work was to be performed, which evidence was manifestly material; (2) the arbitrator would not be exceeding his jurisdiction by admitting such evidence.—*KIRK & RANDALL v. 1232. — Award for amount exceeding original particulars—Pleadings withdrawn.—In an action against a lead mine for damage to cattle & trespass, k. Consignment of money as condition of allowing proof.—A. & B. submitted a question to the decision of C. After a proof C. appointed one of the parties to consign the sum in dispute as the condition of his being allowed to lead further evidence:—Held: the party ordered to consign was not justified in refusing to proceed with his proof, & an award pronounced on his failure so to do was not reducible, either as being ultra vires of the arbirer, or on the ground of legal corruption.—*COX BROTHERS v. The arbitrators awarded that J. was liable to pay all the balance of money still unpaid upon the judgment, & that J. should pay & satisfy same within one calendar month, & should cause the judgment & writs of execution to be satisfied & discharged:—Held: the latter part of the award (which was objected to) was authorised.—*Re MACLEAN v. 1236. Fire insurance.]—Claims under policies for goods damaged by fire were referred to arbn. The agreement for reference classified the goods under schedules A., B., C., & C.a., & recited that it had been agreed that the claim in respect of the goods in schedule A. should be settled for £2,771 19s. 5d., & referred the claims as to the goods in the other schedules. The arbitrators found that £8,288 0s. 7d. was the total sum which ought to be paid in respect of damage to the goods in schedules B., C., & C.a. They also found that the loss or damage sustained exceeded the sums insured, & that the whole salvage & proceeds of the salvage of & from the fire belonged absolutely to pltf.:—Held: in awarding that pltf. was entitled to the salvage—which it appeared from the record, arose solely from the goods particularised in schedule A.—the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction.—SKIPPER v. GRANT (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 237; 142 E. R. 442.

1237. Indemnity—Power to order.]—By an agreement for the sale of lands, it was stipulated that the title should be made out to the satisfaction of a third person. A dispute as to the validity of the title was referred to an arbitrator, with power to settle all questions arising out of the agreement, & he awarded that the title should be taken with a bond of indemnity, in case of eviction:—Held: the award was bad, because the arbitrator had exceeded his authority in ordering a bond of indemnity to be taken.—ROSS v. On reference of all matters in difference between M. & G., G. took upon himself the payment of the bills, & requested the umpire to fix the liability in respect of them upon him. The umpire directed G. to pay to M. the balance which he found due to the latter after giving G. credit for the amount of the bills, & awarded that G. should be solely liable in respect of the bills, & should execute a bond to indemnify M. against them:—Held: the umpire had authority to order G. to be liable for & to pay the bills, & to execute the bond of indemnity.—Re GODDARD & MANSFIELD (1850), 1 L. The award directed judgment to be entered for pltf. in the action, with 1s. damages, & that pltf. should recover, under the same judgment, a plot of land (describing it by metes & bounds), & that deft. should pay £12 as mesne profits, & pltf.'s costs in the action, to be taxed by the proper officer, & part of the costs of the reference & award:—Held: (1) the arbitrator had no authority to direct judgment to be entered up, & final judgment, which had been signed, must be set aside; (2) rejecting all that related to the judgment, the award sufficiently decided the matters referred.—DOE d. DAVIES (1842), 1 Dowl. N. S. 679.

1243. — Power to order judgment non obstante veredicto.—By order of Nisi Prius, a cause & all matters in difference were referred to the award of A., with power to enter a verdict for either party, the costs to abide the event, & neither party to be at liberty to bring a writ of error. It was contended, before the arbitrator, that the third & sixth pleas were bad in law, & though proved in point of fact, the pltf. was entitled, on the issues raised on them, to judgment non obstante veredicto. The award directed a verdict to be entered for pltf. on the second & fifth issues, with 1s. damages, "which sum, except for my finding upon the other issues, pltf. would be entitled to recover in the cause." The first, third, fourth & sixth issues were found for deft.:—Held: the arbitrator had no power to order judgment non obstante veredicto.—TOBY v. LOVIBOND (1848), 5 C. B. 770; 3 New Pract. 1244 i. Landlord & tenant—Award for meliorations.—A landlord having obtained a decree of irritancy of his tenant's lease, in which there was no stipulation as to meliorations, entered into a submission with him of "all claims, questions, disputes & differences of every kind depending & subsisting betwixt them, upon any account, transaction, or occasion whatever, preceding the date hereof," & the arbiter having found the tenant entitled to a sum for meliorations:—Held: he had not exceeded his powers.—PITCAIRN v. DRUMMOND (1825), 1 Wils. & S. 194.—SCOT.

1244 ii. — Award of sum of money.—A tenant sublet his farm, with an agreement that he was, at the entry of the subtenant, to put the houses & fences into a state of repair at the sight of referees mutually chosen:—Held: competent for the referees to award a sum of money to the subtenant, in lieu of a specific completion of the repairs.—M'GREGOR v. STEVENSON (1847), 19 Sc. Jur. 455.—SCOT.

1244 iii. — Estimating repairs & fixing damages.—A lease provided that the arbitrators "should view the premises & consider what may be necessary for additional improvements." The bond recited that the parties had appointed arbitrators to examine the premises, & that "in order to bring all matters to a satisfactory conclusion" they had appointed an umpire in case the arbitrators should not agree. In the bond the parties submitting also gave power to the umpire to make an "award which shall be binding on all parties." The arbitrators estimated the value of the premises & of repairs & fixed the damages to be paid:—Held: they had not exceeded the submission.—MCGILL v. PROUDFOOT (1847), 4 U. C. R. 40.—CAN.

1244 iv. — Award as to future damage.—A landlord & tenant entered into a submission to determine whether the landlord had failed to fulfil certain obligations under the lease, & if so to fix the damage, & from time to time during the currency of the lease, or after the expiry thereof, to fix the damage that might thereafter be sustained by the tenant. The award (inter alia) found the landlord liable to the tenant in payment of certain annual sums payable from the date of entry, & continuing during the currency of the lease, "in respect of loss & damage sustained & to be sustained" by him:—Held: the award, so far as finding the landlord liable for damage to be sustained in future years, was ultra fines compromissi.—TRAILL v. t. Logging contract.—Held: arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction in awarding money to pltf. for logging done under a verbal agreement, which was not within the submission under which they were appointed, & this amount not being separable from the rest, the award could not be supported, & such excess of authority afforded a good defence to an action.—TULLY v. CHAMBERLAIN (1871), 31 U. C. R. 299.—CAN.

u. ——Pltf. claimed deft. was indebted to him for work in sawing logs, & deft. claimed a set-off. The matter was referred to arbitrators, who awarded in favour of deft. & found that the logs remaining unsawn were deft.'s property:—Held: this finding was outside the jurisdiction of the arbitrators, but, being separable from their finding on matters within their jurisdiction, was a mere nullity not affecting the validity of the award.—CREELMAN v. McMULLEN (1885), 6 R. & G. 138; 6 C. L. T. 450.—CAN.

1247. Patents—Disputes as to.]—By a submission to arbn. between patentees all matters in difference between the parties relating to gutta percha were referred to the decision of the arbitrator, who was empowered to set aside certain deeds which had been executed by the parties, if he thought fit, & to order assignments to be executed for vesting in trustees all patents, & applications for patents relating to gutta percha, taken out or made, or to be taken out thereafter by the parties, or any of them. By the award the arbitrator, "if & so far as he had power & jurisdiction," set aside altogether certain deeds which he specified, but, if he had not "power or jurisdiction to set same or any or either of them aside," or to award any other matter in that his award contained, he declared that the rest of his award was yet to stand. He also, by the award, decided upon the rights of the parties under the deeds executed by them, & not thereby set aside, & directed that neither of the parties should grant any licence of or work any of the patents, save under a licence from the trustees to be appointed under the award, which required the parties to nominate their respective trustees within fourteen days, & to signify their election to take licences within two calendar months from the date of the award. The award also directed that the parties should covenant with one another that they & their licencees should assign to the trustees any assignable interest which they might respectively have in any patents relating to gutta percha. The submission was made a rule of a common law ct. In a suit for a specific performance of the award:—Held: the award was bad, for excess of authority.—NICKELS v. HANCOCK (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 300; 3 Eq. Rep. 689; 1 Jur. N. S. 1149; 44 E. R. 117, LJJ.

A partnership action was commenced by G., one of the partners, & an order was made for a stay of proceedings on certain terms, including an assignment by G. to his partners of his share in the partnership, at a price to be fixed by arbn., & a term that the form of deed of dissolution & assignment, & any other question arising in respect thereof, should be referred to the arbitrator. On a motion by G. to set aside the arbitrator's award:—Held: the arbitrator had not exceeded his jurisdiction in inserting in the deed of dissolution a covenant prohibiting G. from manufacturing according to the patent.—GONVILLE v. HAY (1903), 21 R. P. C. 49.

1260. Right to sue in other party's name.]—An arbitrator, who had authority to decide on what terms a partnership agreement should be cancelled, directed (inter alia) that the agreement should be cancelled, & that one of the partners should have all the debts due to the firm, & should, if necessary, sue for them in the name of his late partner:—Held: in authorising one of the parties to sue in the name of the other, the arbitrator had not exceeded his authority.—BURTON (BURT) v. WIGLEY (WIGMORE) (1835), 1 Bing. N. C. 665; 1 Scott, 610; 1 Hodg. 81; 4 L. J. C. P. 176; 131 E. R. 1273.

1261. —.—An action of trespass to houses & lands was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle at what price & on what terms deft. should purchase pltf.'s "property." The order of reference gave the arbitrator no power to determine what the property in question was, nor was there any dispute on the subject. The arbitrator fixed a certain sum as the price at which deft. should "purchase pltf.'s property," & awarded that deft. might use pltf.'s name to enforce certain rights & remedies:—Held: the award was not bad, on the ground of an excess of authority in respect of the use of pltf.'s name.—ROUND v. HATTON (1842), 10 M. & W. 660; 2 Dowl. N. S. 446; 12 L. J. Ex. 7; 152 E. R. 636.

1262. Shares—Dispute as to—Award of sum of money.]—A declaration stated that a difference existed between pltf. & deft. concerning shares bought by pltf. for deft. at his request, & for which pltf. had paid £122; that they submitted themselves to the award of W. & P. concerning the difference; that deft. promised to fulfil the award; that W. & P. made their award concerning the difference, & decided in favour of pltf., & found that £50 which had been deposited by deft. with pltf. was in part payment of the shares, & "by their award," they "requested" deft. to pay the balance of the account:—Held: it sufficiently appeared that the arbitrators had authority to make the award, & to award a specific sum of money, although the nature of the difference was not stated. Qu.: whether the allegation that they awarded that deft. should pay the "balance" would have been good, if it had been pointed out on special demurrer that no specific sum was awarded.—SMITH v. HARTLEY (1851), 10 C. B. 800; 2 L. M. & P. 304; 20 L. J. C. P. 169; 15 Jur. 755; 138 E. R. 317; subsequent proceedings, 11 C. B. 678.

which, with all matters in difference, was referred. The arbitrator awarded for pltf., & directed that deft. should discharge the mtge.:—Held: beyond his authority.—STEWART v. BROWN (1857), 2 P. R. 158.—CAN.

1265. Trespass—Award as to repairs.]—By an agreement of reference, reciting (among other matters of dispute) that there was a controversy between B. & D. respecting the property in a certain pump, & the right to use it, & also respecting the alleged removal by D. of a boundary hedge between his lands & those of B., & that B. had commenced an action against D. for alleged trespasses upon the pump & hedge, the cause & all matters in difference were referred to an arbitrator, who was empowered to award how & by whom the pump & hedge, & the ditch adjoining the hedge, should in future be enjoyed & occupied, " & who should have the care & management thereof." The arbitrator awarded that B. was entitled to the pump as his sole & exclusive property, except that D. was entitled to the free use of water from it, in common with B. In a subsequent part of the award he directed that the pump should, in future, be considered as belonging jointly to B. & D., & be repaired at their joint expense. He further awarded that the hedge should be kept in repair by D., who should be at liberty to use the mud of the ditch for repairing the hedge bank, but not otherwise, & that, subject to such privilege, the ditch should be considered as the property of B.:—Held: the directions as to repairs were not an excess of the arbitrator's authority.

The words "care & management" in the agreement of reference warrant such a direction as this (LORD DENMAN, C.J.)—BOODLE v. DAVIES (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 200; 1 Har. & W. 420; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 788; 111 E. R. 389.

1266. Use of stream—Award regulating future use.]—An arbitrator, in regulating the future use of a stream of water, the right to which was divided between the parties, interfered with the customary enjoyment by one of them of another stream, which exclusively belonged to him, & was not a matter in difference, & which joined the first:—Held: he had a power to do so, incidental to, & resulting from his former direct & larger power. Qu.: whether, if an arbitrator, after regulating on the subject-matter referred to him in its present state, goes on & regulates prospectively on the same subject-matter reduced to a different state, & thereby in some degree altered, that be a proceeding beyond his authority.—*WINTER v. ## PART IV.—THE AWARD.

SUB-SECT. 3.—MUST BE FINAL, CERTAIN AND CONSISTENT.

A. In General.

1267. General rule.]—Award held ill for uncertainty, & not being final or mutual.—TIPPING v. SMITH (1735), 2 Stra. 1024; 93 E. R. 1010.

1268. —.]—An award which leaves in doubt whether some of the questions have been decided cannot be enforced.—WAKEFIELD v. LLANELLY RY. & DOCK CO. (1865), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 11; 12 L. T. 509; 11 Jur. N. S. 456; 13 W. R. 823; 46 E. R. 542, L.JJ.

1269. Award as final as circumstances admit.]—An award by an umpire that pltf. should enter into a covenant with deft. to save him harmless from the costs & damages of a qui tam action, & that thereupon mutual releases of all former matters in difference should be executed:—Held: good, being as final & certain as the matters in difference could bear, & although it did not of itself put a final end to the matter.—PHILLIPS (PHILIPS) v. KNIGHTLEY (1731), Fitz-G. 167, 752; 1 Barn. K. B. 84, 151, 387, 457, 463; 2 Stra. 903; 94 E. R. 703, 752.

1270. —.]—An arbitrator, appointed under Mines & Minerals Consolidation Act (R. N. S. (5th series), c. 7), s. 19, on behalf of a landowner to estimate damages to be paid to him by lessees from the Crown of gold mines under the stat., gave the landowner a fixed sum as estimated damages for all works or occupation necessary to or required by the mining lessees:—Held: having regard to the subject-matter & scope of the above Act, the award was not bad for uncertainty.—PALGRAVE GOLD MINING CO. v. McMILLAN, [1892] A. C. 460; 61 L. J. P. C. 85; 67 L. T. 425, P. C.

1271. Award with recommendation as to comparison of documents.]—Two parties agreed to be bound by the opinion of a professional man upon the construction of an Act of Parliament, who gave his opinion in favour of one:—Held: such opinion was final & conclusive, though it recommended the printed Act to be compared with the Parliament-Roll before the matter was settled, under a doubt whether the Act was not misprinted.—PRICE v. HOLLIS (1813), 1 M. & S. 105; 105 E. R. 40.

Annotations:—Mentd. Cramp v. Symons (1822), 1 Bing. 104; Sybray v. White (1836), 1 M. & W. 435.

1272. No precise form of words necessary—Must be decision, not suggestion.]—No precise form of words is necessary to constitute an award; it is sufficient if the arbitrator express by it a decision upon the matter submitted to him. But where an arbitrator, to whom a dispute between an architect & his clerk, respecting a claim by the latter to wages, was referred, stated in a letter that he had examined drawings made by the clerk, with an account of his time, which did not show experience or ability to the extent to justify a demand for remuneration in the circumstances, but in consideration of the clerk's services out of the office on some occasions, & to meet the case in a liberal manner, he proposed that the architect should pay the clerk £10:—Held: the latter part of the letter was a mere suggestion of the arbitrator, & not a decided opinion that the clerk was or was not entitled to recover £10, & was not a good award.—LOCK v. VULLIAMY (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 600; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 336; 110 E. R. 912.

Annotation:—Expld. & Distd. Smith v. Hartley (1851), 2 L. M. & P. 304.

1273. Request.]—Held: a "request made in an award was equivalent to a direction to pay.—SMITH v. HARTLEY (1851), 10 C. B. 800; 2 L. M. & P. 304; 20 L. J. C. P. 169; 15 Jur. 755; 138 E. R. 317; subsequent proceedings, 11 C. B. 678.

1274. — "Paying."]—An award "that one shall keep & enjoy the goods, paying so much money to the other," is good, for it should be taken according to the intent, which was clearly that money should be paid.—STILES v. TRISTE (1661), 1 Sid. 54; 82 E. R. 965.

Annotation:—Expld. Hopkins v. Davies (1835), 1 Cr. M. & R. 846.

1275. All matters decided by necessary inference.]—A finding by an arbitrator, leading by necessary inference to the decision of the issues in the cause, is sufficient, though there be no express direction for which party one of the issues shall be entered.—AVELETT v. GODDARD (1843), 11 L. J. C. P. 123.

Annotation:—Mentd. Re Smith v. Reece, Re Reece v. Smith (1850), 14 Jur. 483.

B. As to the Party who is to Perform.

1276. Award that A. or B. should perform.]—An award that A. or B. shall do a certain act is bad, for uncertainty.—LAWRENCE v. HODGSON (1826), 1 Y. & J. 16; 148 E. R. 568; subsequent proceedings (1827), 1 Y. & J. 368.

1267 ii. —.]—Where an award is uncertain & indefinite in its terms, it is not capable of enforcement by the ct.—Re MITCHELL & MITCHELL (1910), 14 W. L. R. 701.—CAN.

1272 i. No precise form of words necessary.]—In an award certainly to a common intent is sufficient.—MILNER v. BRYDGES (1876), 2 P. & B. 87.—CAN.

PART IV. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 3.—B.

s. Award against firm without specifying partners thereof.]—An award made against a firm, without ascertaining as to who are the persons who constitute it, is, on the face of it, bad.—HURDWARY MULL v. AHMED MUSAJI SELAJI (1908), 13 C. W. N. 63.—IND.

t. Payer not specified.]—A submission stated that the costs of preparing & executing the reference & a duplicate thereof should be in the discretion of the arbitrators. The ct. set aside the award, on the ground that the arbitrators had not determined by whom the costs of preparing & executing the reference should be paid.—Re WARBY v. ROSE (1865), 4 N. S. W. S. C. R. 302.—AUS.

u. —.]—Where a parol submission refers to arbitrators the cost of the reference, an award which does not expressly or impliedly determine by whom the costs are to be paid is bad for want of finality.—ROULSTONE v. ALLIANCE INSURANCE CO. (1879), 13 L. T. 66.—IR.

PART IV. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 3.—C.

w. Joint submission.]—Where several parties make a joint submission of their claims the award is final, though it does not distinguish the portion of money each party is to receive.—McGILL v. PROUDFOOT (1847), 4 U. C. R. 40.—CAN.

x. Award of general releases — Grantee not specified.]—Directions that a party should when requested execute a general release of all claims is not objectionable, for omitting to state to whom the release is to be made.—Re BARRIE TOWN & NORTHERN RY. CO. (1862), 22 U. C. R. 25.—CAN.

C. As to the Payee.

1278. Award to pay any of the parties of one part.]—An arbitrament to pay to any of the parties of the one part is good.—STONE v. KNIGHT (1626), Noy, 93; Lat. 207; 74 E. R. 1059.

1279. Award to pay A. or C., his attorney.]—An award that debt. should pay pltf., or C., his attorney, such costs as pltf. was liable to pay of an action in the Peverel Ct., & costs of an action at common law, between pltf. & debt. & others:—Held: uncertain, & not final.—FURNIS v. HALLOM (1749), Barnes, 166; 94 E. R. 859.

1280. Award not stating to whom costs were to be paid.]—An arbitrator awarded that pltf. should pay costs, without directing to whom:—Held: if an action would lie on this award, no attachment would be granted on it.—SCOTT v. WILLIAMS (1835), 3 Dowl. 508; 5 Tyr. 506; sub nom. HOPKINS v. DAVIES, 1 Cr. M. & R. 846; 4 L. J. Ex. 113; 149 E. R. 1322.

1281. Award directing that money be accounted for & brought into trust accounts.]—An arbitrator awarded that a sum which he found due from one party should "be forthwith paid & accounted for by him & brought into the trust accounts":—Held: this was too uncertain, & fatal to the award.—Re TIDSWELL (1863), 33 Beav. 213; 3 New Rep. 281; 55 E. R. 349.

D. As to Time and Mode of Performance.

1282. No time mentioned.]—A. & B. bound themselves to stand by the award of C. The award made no statement of any time for payment of the sum awarded. The award was made on May 1, & tender was made on Oct. 6:—Held: this was a breach of the award, as, though an arbitrament was good although no time was mentioned, yet payment or tender ought to be a convenient time after the award, & five months was not a convenient time.—ANON. (1481), Jenk. 136; 145 E. R. 95.

1283. — No penalty.]—An award to deliver up a certain writing obligatory, without specifying the date or penalty, is void, for uncertainty.—BEDAM v. CLERKSON (1696), 1 Ld. Raym. 123; 91 E. R. 970.

1284. — Or mode of payment.]—Where an arbitrator only found that debt. was indebted to pltf. in a certain sum, but did not order any time or mode of payment, the ct. refused to proceed summarily against debt. by granting an attachment.—EDGEELL v. DALLIMORE (1826), 3 Bing. 634; 11 Moore, C. P. 541; 4 L. J. O. S. C. P. 193; 130 E. R. 658.

1282 iv. — Date clearly inferred.]—A submission gave the arbitrators or their umpire power to order what they or he should think fit to be done by either of the parties. By his award the umpire found that A. should lease to B. certain premises. On a motion by A. to set aside the award:—Held: the award was not uncertain, for, by reference to the agreement referred to in the award, the proper inference was that the lease was to begin on the day specified in the agreement.—JOPLING v. JOPLING (1909), 8 C. L. R. 33.—AUS.

1286 i. Uncertainty as to mode of performance—Kind of conveyances not specified.]—Where arbitrators had power to award upon conveyances to be made between the parties, etc.:—Held: an award directing "all necessary deeds for granting," etc., "& for securing payment of the rent to be executed," without saying what kind of conveyances, was bad.—BEATTY v. MCINTOSH (1848), 4 U. C. R. 259.—CAN.

1286 ii. —.]—A deed of submission gave the arbitrators or their umpire power to order what they or he should think fit to be done by either of the parties. By his award the umpire ordered that A. should specifically perform his part of the agreement & should forthwith execute all deeds & documents necessary to effectuate certain other matters awarded. On a motion by A. to set aside the award:—Held: it was not necessary that the deeds & documents directed to be executed should be further specified.—JOPLING v. JOPLING (1909), 8 C. L. R. 33.—AUS.

1286 iii. — "To be secured by such good security as may be requisite."]—Two partners having dissolved partnership, referred all disputes to three persons named. The award directed a certain sum to be paid by debt. to pltf., & then added that same was "to be secured by such good security as may be requisite to save pltf. harmless":—Held:—sufficiently final.—MCLEAN v. 1287 i. — "Same use as formerly."]—An award respecting differences between pltf. & debts., as to the diversion of a watercourse by debts., directed that debts. should turn the stream so that pltf. should have the same use of the water as he formerly had for the period of five years from the award, & that pltf. should pay debts. 5s. a year during that period:—Held: uncertain, & not final or conclusive.—BOWEN v. SAMIS (1856), 2 P. R. 76.—CAN.

tions for preventing the water from being rendered unfit for pltf.'s use, &, in particular, should use a process of filtering mentioned in the award, was bad, for uncertainty.

The direction as to the particular process was that the water passing from deft.'s to pltf.'s premises should be passed through filtering lodges made or to be made by deft., so as to be thereby purified & cleansed for pltf.'s use, "so far as same can be purified & cleansed by the ordinary & most approved process of filtering as aforesaid":—Held: the description, by reference only to the "ordinary & most approved process," was uncertain, & the award bad.—STONEHEWER v. FARRAR (1845), 6 Q. B. 730; 1 New Pract. Cas. 154; 14 L. J. Q. B. 122; 9 Jur. 203; 115 E. R. 275.

CANNELL* (1854), 15 C. B. 107; 24 L. J. C. P. 41; 1 Jur. N. S. 183; 3 W. R. 138; 3 C. L. R. 218; 139 E. R. 360.

1290. "Same form & dimensions which yard had previously."—An order of reference gave power to the arbitrator to direct how a yard should be used for the future, & the arbitrator, by his award, ordered deft. to pull down certain encroachments, & to restore the area of the yard to the same form & dimensions which it clearly appeared, by the evidence, to have had when deft.'s tenancy began:—Held: the award was bad, for uncertainty.—KENDAL v. SYMONDS (1855), 3 C. L. R. 322.

1291. Failure to direct conveyances—Partition.—Several tenants in common, wishing to make partition of their land, covenanted by deed to pay their respective shares of the survey & allotments, & to abide by the award of certain arbitrators as to the allotments. The arbitrators allotted the whole in severalty, but did not direct any deeds of conveyance to be executed to vest the allotments in the respective owners:—Held: for this defect the award was bad, & no action could be maintained on the covenant for not performing the award, though the covenantors were respectively liable on the covenant for non-payment of the expense of the survey, etc.—*JOHNSON v. But if the augmentation or diminution in the price is to be at the rate of so much per acre, if the error as to quantity shall be in one part of the estate, & at a different rate per acre, if the error shall be in another part of the estate, & the award does not express the estimated quantity of either of these parts taken separately, then the award is void for uncertainty.—HOPCRAFT v. 1313. Award of sum unascertainable from award itself.]—By a deed of submission to arbn. between R. & J., it was recited that they had been partners, that J. had deposited with C. & Co., bankers, certain securities for such sums as they had advanced or might advance to J. as surety for R., that, R. being indebted to the bankers in £4,000, J. had mtgd. to them securities for a sum not exceeding £3,000, & that R. & J. had dissolved partnership, & had agreed to refer all matters in difference, etc. There was a proviso that, if the arbitrators should award any money to be paid by J. to R., they should, in their award, if the mtge. were still outstanding, authorise such payment to be made to the bankers in reduction of the mtge. debts, & should further award that R. should, at a time to be named by the arbitrators, pay in to the bankers such a sum as would be sufficient to entitle J. to have the mtge. discharged, & the securities deposited by him released. The arbitrators, by their award, found that £3,121 was due from J. to R., & the mtge. outstanding, & they ordered J. to pay the £3,121 on certain days, with liberty to him to pay it in to the bankers as above stated. They also awarded that, within one month from the payment of the £3,121, R. should pay in to the bankers such a sum as would be sufficient to entitle J. to have the mtge. discharged, & the securities deposited by him released. It did not appear by the award what that sum would be:—Held: the award was not final on this point, & was bad.—HEWITT v. HEWITT (1841), 1 Q. B. 110; 4 Per. & Dav. 598; 113 E. R. 1071.

been referred, by order of Nisi Prius, the order directed that, if the arbitrator should find that pltf. were not entitled to recover, the verdict taken was to be void, & a verdict entered for deft. It was further agreed by the parties that, if the arbitrator should think that certain iron machinery supplied to deft. ought not to be charged for by pltf., deft. having alleged it to be defective, pltf. were to be allowed the value of it, at the market price of pig iron. The arbitrator awarded that pltf. were not entitled to recover, & that deft. should pay to pltf. for the machinery such sum “as the same amounts to, according to the present market price of pig iron”:—Held: the award was not uncertain in omitting to state the time & market at which the price of the iron was to be ascertained.—*WADDLE (WADDELL) v. By the award, after reciting the submission, the arbitrators found & awarded that deft., as administrator at the date of the submission, had moneys, farm-stock, cattle, corn, corn in the ground, implements of husbandry, household goods & furniture of the intestate, in his hands to be administered, to the value of £929, independently of any debts owing to the intestate, that deft. should retain £140 found to be owing to him from some of the parties, & £65 to pay the rent & taxes of certain tenements which were in the intestate's occupation at his death, that he should be entitled to set off £15 due to him from pltf. against his distributive share, & that he should, at a certain time & place, pay pltf. & the other parties their several distributive shares of the intestate's estate, first retaining his own share & the above-mentioned sums of money, & that they should, if required, execute releases to deft. In an action on the award:—Held: it was sufficiently final, although it did not expressly award as to the amount of the debts due to the estate, nor as to the amount of the distributive shares payable to pltf. & the other parties to the submission, it not being shown by plea that the amounts of the debts or distributive shares were matters in difference.—*PERRY v. it were shown that the payments were matter of dispute.—ABRAHAM & WESTMINSTER IMPROVEMENTS Co. (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 203.

1317. Damages not specified.]—Trespass. Plea, general issue, & justification; replication de injuriâ, & new assignment, upon which judgment by default. An arbitrator awarded a verdict for deft., without giving damages upon the new assignment:—Held: the award was not final & conclusive, by reason of no damages being awarded to pltf. on the new assignment.—WYKES v. SHIPTON (1834), 8 Ad. & El. 246, n.; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 240; 3 L. J. K. B. 90; 112 E. R. 831.

1318. —.]—A cause in which there were seven issues was referred by order of Nisi Prius, the costs of the award & reference to abide the event. The arbitrator found for deft. on two of the issues, neither of which covered the whole cause of action, & for pltf. on the others, but omitted to award damages:—Held: the award was insufficient & must be set aside.—WOOD v. DUNCAN (1838), 7 Dowl. 91; 1 Horn & H. 338; 2 Jur. 969.

1319. —.]—An agreement of reference, between M. & D., recited a dispute relating to a transaction under which five bills of exchange were drawn upon & accepted by P.; & as to the nature & circumstances of, or attending, such transactions & bills, it was agreed that same, & all matters in question touching & concerning or in any wise relating thereto, should be referred to arbn. The arbitrator awarded that the bills, & all moneys thereby secured, were the property of M., & that the bills & moneys, & all proceeds thereof, should be delivered & paid to M., & that, in case D. should have received any part of the money secured by & mentioned in the bills, he should pay it to M. The award was silent as to damages. M. moved to set aside the award for giving no damages, on affidavit that at the hearing it was shown that the bills had been delivered to D., & it was understood that D. had received the whole amount from the acceptor, & no evidence was offered on that head on either side. The affidavits in answer denied such understanding & such receipt of proceeds, & stated that, on the hearing, no allegation of such receipt had been made, nor any claim in respect thereof, & that no question as to such receipt had been made a matter of difference at the arbn., but that M. had there contended that D. was bound to pay the whole amount, whether he had received anything or not:—Held: assuming the receipt of proceeds not to have been a matter in difference on the arbn., it appeared that the arbitrator had considered the two questions as mixed up together, & as one part of the award could not be separated from the other, the whole was bad as not being final.—Re MARSHALL & DRESSER (1843), 3 Q. 1321. Failure to specify what part each claimant should have—Partition.]—An award that joint tenants shall make partition by mutual conveyances is good, although it do not point out what part each of the parties is to have.—KNIGHT v. BURTON (1704), 6 Mod. Rep. 231; 1 Salk. 75; 87 E. R. 982.

Annotation:—Reid. Pearce v. Pearce (1829), 9 B. & C. 484.

deft. of the goods of B. Before execution was made, pltf. took some of the goods to himself, & sold them, but then execution was made of the whole. The dispute was referred to the arbn. of A., who awarded that deft. should pay to pltf. £455, that deft. should keep all the goods which he had taken in execution, except those which pltf. had taken to himself & sold before the execution was made, & that thereupon general releases should be given on both sides:—Semble: the award was void, by reason that it was wholly uncertain what goods pltf. had so taken to himself & sold.—PATHOW v. KING (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 386; 94 E. R. 570.

1323. —.]—A sheriff having taken goods in execution upon premises belonging to parties who claimed a portion of the goods, a judge at chambers, upon the hearing of an interpleader rule, made an order, with consent of parties, "that the goods not claimed should be pointed out by claimants, & should be forthwith removed & sold, & the proceeds from such sale paid to the execution creditor, that security should be given to the sheriff for the amount of the levy, & that the sheriff should withdraw forthwith, & that all matters in difference between claimants & the execution creditor, & claimants & the sheriff, should be referred to arbn.":—Held: an award directing that claimants should retain possession of some of the articles claimed by them as their own property, & that the residue should be returned to the sheriff, was sufficiently final & certain with respect to the goods so directed to be returned, as the arbitrator had no power to give directions as to the subsequent disposal of those goods, but the sheriff must proceed with the execution.—SMITH v. PINDER (1837), 6 L. J. Ex. 232.

1324. Failure to specify value, quality or description of fixtures.]—On a submission of a cause & all matters in difference between a lessor & lessee, the costs to abide the event, an award that certain fixtures have been wrongfully removed by the lessor to the value of £11, & that the lessee shall set up others in their place, to be left for the lessor at the end of his term, & that the lessor shall pay the lessee £11 on a specified day, is uncertain in not specifying the value, quality, or description of fixtures to be set up by the lessee, & may be set aside by the lessor.—PRICE v. POPKIN (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 139; 2 Per. & Dav. 304; 8 L. J. Q. B. 198; 3 Jur. 433; 113 E. R. 53.

1325. Failure to specify in respect of what demise plaintiff successful.]—An ejectment, containing two several demises by different persons, was referred before trial, & by the order of reference all matters in difference in the cause were referred, the costs of the suit & of the reference to abide the event of the award, & if the award should be in favour of pltf., he was to be at liberty to sign judgment in the same manner as if the cause had been tried at Nisi Prius, & to issue a writ of possession, & to proceed in the usual way for the costs on such judgment. The arbitrator awarded that pltf. was entitled to possession of a certain part of the lands sought to be recovered, which part he described by metes & bounds. The lessor of pltf. signed judgment, & proceeded to tax his costs:—Held: the award was bad, because the arbitrator did not state on what demise pltf. ought to recover. Qu.: whether he ought to have found nominal damages.—*DOE d. 1326. Award of sum for unspecified grievances.]—By an order of reference, a cause was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties at law & in equity. At the time of this submission, two equity suits were pending, in which the parties to the action were interested, & there were also other matters in difference between them. The arbitrator made an award whereby he ordered that a verdict should be entered for pltf., damages £500, & that defts. should pay that sum to pltf., as well as the further sum of £350, for grievances not included in his declaration. On motion to set aside judgment & execution sued out on the award:—Held: the award was sufficiently final, although it did not dispose of the equity suits, & the award of the £350 was sufficiently certain.—WRIGHTSON v. BYWATER (1838), 3 M. & W. 199; 6 Dowl. 359; 1 Horn & H. 50; 7 L. J. Ex. 83; 150 E. R. 1114.

1327. Award referring to "property."]—An action of trespass to houses & lands was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle at what price & on what terms deft. should purchase pltf.'s "property." The order of reference gave the arbitrator no power to determine what the property in question was, nor was there any dispute on the subject. The arbitrator fixed a certain sum as the price at which deft. should "purchase pltf.'s property":—Held: the award was not bad, on the ground of its not specifying what the "property" was.—ROUND v. HATTON (1842), 10 M. & W. 660; 2 Dowl. N. S. 446; 12 L. J. Ex. 7; 152 E. R. 636.

1328. Award of enjoyment of office—Submission of right to office.]—On a submission concerning the right to an office, if the arbitrator award that for divers other considerations one party shall enjoy the office, it is sufficient; for it shall not be intended that there were other matters in difference, & his right to the office is implied in the order that he shall enjoy it.—LACY v. WHETSTON (1594), Cro. Eliz. 343; 78 E. R. 592.

1327 i. Whether lands sufficiently described.]—An award directing "security to be given on a certain part of the property of A. B.," without stating what part, is void for uncertainty.—BURGOYNE v. BURGOYNE, N. B. Dig. 53 (4).—CAN.

1327 ii. .]—Where an award directed a conveyance of land, the award was not set aside, although it did not set out by metes & bounds the land for which the conveyance was to be given.—GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. v. ROLPH (1852), 1 P. R. 50.—CAN.

1327 iii. .]—The submission recited in the award stated that the co. "had set out & taken for the uses of the road a portion of M.'s land, being all his land lying immediately north of the land theretofore conveyed by him to the co.," & the award determined "that the value of the lands so set out & taken as aforesaid is," etc.:—Held: the land to be taken was sufficiently described.—Re MILLER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1855), 13 U. C. R. 582.—CAN.

1327 iv. .]—In an award pltf.'s freehold land was described as "the freehold portion of his lands taken":—Held: a sufficient description, as it could be identified by the notice served by the co., & also by the plans filed.—ANGLIN v. NICKLE (1879), 30 C. P. 72.—CAN.

1327 v. .]—A notice of expropriation & an award both described the land expropriated as No. 1 on the plan of a railway co. deposited according to law, but in another part of the notice it was described as forming part of a cadastral lot 2345, & in the award as forming part of lots 2344, 2345:—Held: there was no uncertainty in the award, as the words of the award & notice were sufficient of themselves to describe the property intended to be expropriated, & which was valued by the arbitrators.—BEAUFORT v. NORTH SHORE RY. CO. (1887), 15 S. C. R. 44.—CAN.

1327 vi. .]—A dispute arose as to the boundary of two estates, & arbitrators were appointed to settle the boundary. The arbitrators stated the boundary by naming places which lay east, west, north & south thereof:—Held: the award was not ambiguous.—RAMRUNJUN CHUCKERBUTTY v. RAN PROSAD DASS, 13 C. L. R. 26.—IND.

1327 vii. .]—Claims not defined.—Pltf.'s declaration set out an award alone, & to this deft. objected on the ground of its uncertainty, as it directed an annuity to be paid to pltf. out of her claims on the property, without showing what those claims were or on what property they attached:—Held: the award was certain.—McINTYRE v. McINTYRE (1870), 1 P. E. I. 307.—CAN.

F. Awards Subject to the Opinion of a Stranger.

1329. General rule.]—If an award be that the deft. abide by the arbitrament of S. & F., it is void, for it makes them the judges, which cannot be done (per CUR.).

Every award must be complete & certain, & this one is not, for leaving part of the matter to S. & F. (YELVERTON, J.).—ANON. (1468), Y. B., 8 Edw. 4, fo. 11, pl. 9.

1330. Award directing valuation by stranger.]—Matters in difference having been referred to A. & B., they found £9 to be due from deft. to pltf., payment to be made by delivery of bales of woad, but the parties could not agree as to the value of a bale, & it was awarded that a bale should be taken within eight days of the award by deft. to the house of C. for valuation, & the remainder of the money should be paid in bales of woad, taken at the same price as the bale:—Semble: a good award.—ANON. (1494), Y. B., 9 Hen. 7, fo. 15, pl. 7.

1331. Award of release ut talis advisaret.]—An award of a release of all actions ut talis advisaret is void.—EMERY v. EMERY (1599), Cro. Eliz. 726; 78 E. R. 960.

1332. Award leaving form of release to be settled by master.]—Arbitrators left it to the master to settle the form of releases awarded:—Held: not a delegation, as the arbitrators awarded releases, & only left the form to be settled by the master.—LINGOOD v. EADE (1742), 2 Atk. 501; 26 E. R. 702.

1333. Award directing premises to be put in repair to satisfaction of stranger.]—Certain differences as to the terms on which a lease should be renewed by a corpn. to their lessee, & also as to the boundaries of property held under the lease, were referred to two arbitrators, who awarded that the corpn. should put the premises in good tenantable repair, to the satisfaction of S., a builder, & should grant a lease of the premises at a certain rent, which should contain covenants to keep the premises, they having been first repaired by the lessors, in good repair:—Held: the award was bad, not being final, in consequence of the reference of the repairs to the judgment of a third person.—TOMLIN v. FORDWICH CORPN. (1836), 5 Ad. & El. 147; 2 Har. & W. 172; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 594; 5 L. J. K. B. 209; 11 E. R. 1121.

g. Matter in dispute left to future arbitration.]—One of the matters to be decided in an arbn. was the amount due in respect of a certain wheat crop. Instead of valuing the wheat himself the arbitrator left it to a future arbn. In an action for implement of the award:—Held: the decree did not exhaust the submission.—REID v. WALKER (1826), 5 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 140.—SCOT.

h. Award delegating decision to strangers.]—All differences concerning the renting of a farm by deft. to pltf. were referred to arbitrators, who awarded a division of certain crops & stock specified; & in order that an equal division should be made, they ordered that deft. & pltf. should select two disinterested persons from the neighbouring farmers, whose decision should be final:—Held: the award was bad for the delegation to third parties.—HARRINGTON v. EDISON (1853), 11 U. C. R. 114.—CAN.

k. .]—An award is bad where arbitrators attempt to delegate to another person (unascertained) their authority to decide whether part of the amount awarded should or should not be paid.—BLAKESTON v. WILSON (1902), 14 Man. L. R. 271.—CAN.

1334. Award that certain marks should be placed on land as directed by stranger.]—By a rule of reference of a cause & all matters in difference, the arbitrator had power to determine, define & adjust, & for ever set at rest all disputes touching all & all manner of rights of water or depths of weir, & was authorised to order to be erected & put up, & for ever thereafter to be kept in repair, any erections in or about the weir of deft., etc. The award ordered that deft. was entitled to keep & maintain his weir at the depth of fourteen inches & no more. It proceeded to direct that, for the purpose of defining & perpetuating the depth at which deft. might maintain the weir, "such durable marks & directions be placed on the land adjoining the weir as B. may direct," etc. :—Held : (1) the direction in the award as to the depth of the weir was sufficiently certain, but the award was not final, since the direction that such durable marks should be placed as B. should direct, was a delegation to B. of the arbitrator's authority, & bad ; (2) the bad part was not separable, as the consideration for the submission was not only the settling existing differences, but the for ever settling at rest of all disputes touching the water rights, which latter object was attempted to be effected by the faulty direction.—JOHNSON v. LATHAM (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 348 ; 19 L. J. Q. B. 329 ; 15 L. T. O. S. 211.

1335. Award of releases in form to be settled by stranger.]—M. built a ship for G. & others, & also purchased stores for the vessel on his own credit. On a reference of all matters in difference between M. & G., G. took upon himself the payment of the bills, & requested the umpire to fix the liability in respect of them upon him. The umpire directed G. to pay to M. the balance which he found due to the latter after giving G. credit for the amount of the bills ; he then awarded that G. should be solely liable in respect of the bills, & should execute a bond to indemnify M. against them ; & then ordered that, after G. had paid the balance & the bills, the parties should execute mutual releases of all claims & demands whatsoever, & that the form of the releases should be settled by P. in case of dispute :—Held : although the delegation to P. of authority to settle the releases was void, it did not affect the validity of the award, even if it vitiated the whole of the direction as to the giving releases.—Re GODDARD & MANSFIELD (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 25 ; 19 L. J. Q. B. 305.

1336. Award that stranger should certify loss.]—A dispute having arisen as to the merchantable quality of sleepers delivered under a contract for the sale of sound merchantable sleepers, it was referred to arbitrators to decide whether they were of merchantable quality, & if not, what allowance should be made, or in what way the dispute should be settled. By their award they found that the sleepers were of three classes, one merchantable & two not ; & they directed that the vendee should sell all the sleepers, & that the selling broker should certify the loss sustained by the unmerchantable classes as compared with the price then realised for the merchantable class, & that, after deducting the expenses attending the sale, the balance certified by him should be paid by Jan. 15, 1855 :—Held : the award was bad, for want of finality.—DRESSER v. FINNIS (1855), 25 L. T. O. S. 81.

1337. Award "subject to opinion" of stranger.]—Where an arbitrator made his award "subject to the opinion" of another :—Held : this was a substituted judgment, & the award was bad.—ELLISON v. BRAY (1864), 9 L. T. 730.

Award that deft. should pay a sum of money on three different days with a proviso that, if afterwards it was shown to the arbitrators that plffs. had not released deft. of all debts owing by him to them, then so much of that sum should be repaid by them to deft. as to him should seem fit :—Held : not a good award, for uncertainty.—GROVE v. CRANE (1621), Palm. 145 ; 81 E. R. 1020.

1342. Award reserving right to adjudicate on sufficiency of performance.]—An arbitrator, to whom a cause & all matters in difference were referred, directed a verdict to be entered for plff., & certain works to be done by deft. He then added that, as disputes might arise respecting the performance, plff., if dissatisfied with it, might (on giving notice to deft.) bring evidence before the arbitrator of the insufficiency of the work, & deft. might also give evidence on his part, in order that a final award might be made concerning the matters in difference, but, if no proceedings were taken by plff. within two months after the work was done, the award then made should be final ; & he enlarged the time for making his further & final award, if requested, to six months :—Held : the latter part of this award was bad, as

*m. Award directing administration of partnership assets by partner & umpire.]—*An award directed that the 1343. Award reserving power to appoint counsel or solicitor.—An arbitrator, by his award, reserved to himself power to appoint a counsel or solr. to settle any disputes which might arise as to the proper form of some conveyances, which he had ordered to be executed between the parties :—Held : he had exceeded his authority, & as, in the circumstances of the case, that part of the award could not be separated from the remainder, the whole was bad.—Re TANDY & TANDY (1841), 9 Dowl. 1044 ; Woll. 200 ; 5 Jur. 726.

1344. Award directing something to be done "upon proof."—After action brought, the cause & subject-matter thereof, & the rights of the parties in relation thereto, as well at law as in equity, were referred to an arbitrator, with power to order what he should think fit to be done by either of the parties respecting the matters in dispute. The arbitrator awarded that plffs. would be entitled to receive from defts. two specified sums of money, so soon as they should have discharged the demands of certain local agents of a certain co., which plffs. had undertaken to satisfy, & upon production by plffs. to defts. of the vouchers of the local agents, & upon proof that the demands had been discharged defts. were to pay the sums to plffs. :—Held : the award was final, for either the words "upon proof" might be rejected as surplusage, or it was a part of the matter itself which the parties had agreed should be done, & was correctly stated in the award.—MILLER v. DE BURGH (1850), 4 Exch. 809 ; 1 L. M. & P. 177 ; 19 L. J. Ex. 127 ; 14 L. T. O. S. 400 ; 154 E. R. 1413.

1345. Award with proviso for cancellation—On certain terms.—An award was that the parties should execute a release of actions, etc., to each other within four days, with a proviso that within twenty days either party might on certain terms avoid his award :—Held : (1) the proviso was repugnant to the term as to releases, & hence the award was void ; (2) apart from this, the award was bad, for it was no final end of the controversy, inasmuch as it was not certain, by reason of the condition, whether it should be at an end or not.—*SHERRY v. 1347. — Dependent on something in future.—An award was made that one party should pay money & the other make a release, provided that if one of them should be discharged of any arrears due to soldiers by the Act of Indemnity, then the award should be void :—Held : an award that it should be void, if something happened in the future, was bad.—*KNIGE v. 1350. Award to pay to stranger to be nominated by one of parties.—In debt on bond with condition for performing an award, deft. pleaded no award ; plff. replied that a reference was made to arbitrators of certain matters relating to a partnership between plff. & deft., & the arbitrators awarded that deft. should pay into the hands of O., agent for the partners, such a sum of money in trust for plff. & deft., & for the benefit of the partnership, which he had not done :—Held : the arbitrators had awarded that deft. should pay a sum of money for the benefit of plff. to such person as plff. should appoint to receive it, & the award was good.—DALE v. MOTTRAM (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 291 ; 94 E. R. 507.

1351. Award subject to reduction in amount—On party exonerating himself.—An award that deft. should pay to plff. such a sum of money, unless within twenty-one days (which, in fact, was after the time limited for making the award) deft. should exonerate himself by affidavit from certain payments & receipts, in which case he was only to pay a certain other less sum, is illegal & void, being uncertain & inconclusive.—*PEDLEY v. 1352. Award conditional on one party surrendering shares to other party.—Directors brought an action against a subscriber for the amount of two calls made on his shares, & the subscriber brought a counter-action against the directors for the value of his shares as at a certain period, on the ground that they had, without his consent, engaged in speculations foreign to the co.'s undertaking, & abandoned that undertaking & united themselves with another co. Both actions were referred to an arbitrator under an order of ct. ; & he found (inter alia) the subscriber was entitled to decree for a certain sum as the ascertained price of his shares, which sum, under deduction of what was awarded for the calls, he was entitled to recover from the co. on surrendering or transferring his shares to them, or to any person they might direct :—Held : the award was bad, as the finding was not final & conclusive, but held the subscriber entitled to recover the sum awarded to him upon condition only of transferring his shares.—BAILLIE v. EDINBURGH OIL GAS LIGHT CO. (1835), 3 Cl. & Fin. 639 ; 6 E. R. 1577, H. L.

1356. Award settling dispute—Alternative if court should decide differently.]—An arbitrator, to whom a cause & all matters in difference were referred, set out all the facts upon the face of his award, & then awarded that pltf. had no cause of action against deft., & that he had determined the action in favour of deft., & after disposing of a plea of set-off, & awarding by whom the costs of the reference should be paid, concluded thus: "But if the ct. shall be of opinion, upon the facts hereinbefore stated, that pltf. is entitled to recover in the action, then I determine the action in favour of pltf., & order & award that deft. pay damages to pltf., to the amount of 1s., & also pay to pltf. his costs of the reference":—Held: the arbitrator having come to a decision of his own, the award was sufficiently final, & the alternative part might be rejected.—BARTON v. r. Submission allowing alternative award.]—An action for penning back water, & preventing the use of pltf.'s mills, was referred, with power to the arbitrators to determine the damages already sustained, & to direct how the channel should be formed by defts., or fix a sum to be paid in lieu thereof at defts.' option, & a time within which to choose. They awarded £375 for such damages, & directed that within three months from July 1, 1858, defts. should construct a channel of specified size, or in lieu thereof should pay pltf. $500 on or before Aug. 1, 1858:—Held: the award was sufficiently certain & final.—GLEN v. 1358. Award providing different results according to different interpretations of arbitrator's authority.]

—By a submission to arbn. between patentees, all matters in difference between the parties relating to gutta percha were referred to the decision of the arbitrator, who was empowered to set aside certain deeds which had been executed by the parties, if he thought fit, & to order assignments to be executed for vesting in trustees all patents & applications for patents relating to gutta percha taken out or made, or to be taken out thereafter by the parties, or any of them. By the award, the arbitrator, "if & so far as he had power & jurisdiction," set aside altogether certain deeds which he specified, but if he had not "power or jurisdiction to set same or any or either of them aside," or to award any other matter in that, his award, contained, he declared that the rest of his award (wherein he dealt with the rights of the parties under the deeds executed by them, & not thereby set aside, the granting of licences & the question of assignments) was yet to stand:—Held: the award was bad, for want of finality.—NICKELS v. HANCOCK (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 300; 3 Eq. Rep. 689; 1 Jur. N. S. 1149; 44 E. R. 117, L.J.J.

except that deft. had a right to take water from the pump, & to have ingress & egress to & from the yard in which it stood for that purpose, & that the pump should thereafter be considered as belonging to pltf. & deft. jointly, & be repaired at their joint expense:—Held: there was no objection to the award, on the ground that the direction as to the future enjoyment was inconsistent with the former part of the award.—*BOODLE v. 1363. Findings on issues for purposes of costs only.]—Assumpsit on a retainer to project certain works, & to examine certain bills, with care, skill, & diligence. Pleas: (1) non assumpsit; (2) no retainer; (3) that deft. did use care, etc., in projecting the works; (4) that he did use care, etc., in examining the bills. The cause & all matters in difference were referred by order of Nisi Prius, costs of the cause to abide the event. The award found for deft. on the first, second, & fourth issues, & for pltf. on the third:—Held: the award was good, & not repugnant, for the finding on the third & fourth issues must be regarded as hypothetical, & only for the purpose of determining the costs of them, & it could not be inferred, from such finding, that there was matter in difference in respect of work done other than the work included in the action.—*BEAUFORT (DUKE) v. amount, or whether it should be vacated. A verdict having been entered for deft.:—Held: the certificate of the arbitrator, that a verdict should be entered for deft. on both issues, was not inconsistent.—WILLIAMS v. MOULSDALE (1840), 7 M. & W. 134; 10 L. J. Ex. 2; 4 Jur. 1038; 151 E. R. 710.

Finding that defendant continued nuisance but did not erect it.]—Pltf. declared in case that he was entitled to the reversion in a close, that H. had wrongfully & injuriously erected incumbrances thereon, & that deft. wrongfully & injuriously kept & continued the incumbrances so wrongfully erected. Pleas: (1) not guilty; (2) that H. did not erect incumbrances on the close. The cause was referred to an arbitrator, who was to direct how the verdict was to be entered on the issues, & to say what should be done between the parties respecting the land or premises. He awarded that the first issue should be entered for pltf. without damages, & the second issue for deft., & that nothing should be done by the parties respecting the land or premises. On motion to set aside the award, on the ground that the findings were inconsistent:—Held: the first plea put in issue only the continuance of the nuisance by deft., & the finding thereon was not inconsistent with that on the second plea.—GRENELL (GRENFIELD, GRENVILLE) v. EDGCOMBE (1845), 7 Q. B. 661; 14 L. J. Q. B. 322; 5 L. T. O. S. 215, 216; 9 Jur. 709; 115 E. R. 638.

1367. Award for compensation for tramway without awarding price of factory.]—An arbitrator appointed to determine the value of a tramway undertaking framed his award in the form of a special case, finding a great number of alternative values. He also left a question whether a car factory was suitable for the purposes of the undertaking to be determined by the ct. The ct. considering the whole question one of fact, remitted it to the arbitrator, who thereupon found positively as to value, etc., & negatively as to the suitability of the car factory. On a motion to set aside the award:—Held: the award was not inconsistent or repugnant in awarding compensation for the tramway without awarding the price of the car factory.—NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS CO. v. LEYTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1908), 98 L. T. 792; 72 J. P. 241; 6 L. G. R. 627, C. A.

He awarded as compensation £5,000. On a motion to set aside:—Held: it was not defective for uncertainty as to whether the agreement had been carried out & as to whether the co. had an option to pay the £5,000 or construct the branch line, but sufficiently showed that the agreement had not been performed & that no such option was intended.—Re BARRIE TOWN & NORTHERN RY. 1378. Award directing as to costs—Action referred —Defendant to deliver up possession.]—An action struction of a branch line into the town, & was referred to an arbitrator. He awarded that there was a valid agreement to construct the line, that the claim to have the agreement performed subsisted, & if not performed compensation ought to be awarded. He awarded as compensation £5,000. On a motion to set aside:—Held: it was not defective for uncertainty as to whether the agreement had been carried out & as to whether the co. had an option to pay the £5,000 or construct the branch line, but sufficiently showed that the agreement had not been performed & that no such option was intended.—Re BARRIE TOWN & NORTHERN RY. 1378 i. Award directing as to costs.]—Certain matters between A. & B. were referred, & also all costs of suits by either party. The award was that B. should pay a large sum to A., & also all costs of suits:—Held: sufficiently final, without stating that the suits should cease.—DUCAT v. GREEN (1835), 4 O. S. 110.—CAN.

1378 ii. —.]—Pltf. declared on a bond of submission, alleging that the arbitrators heard the matters in difference, amongst others, the costs of an action in the Common Pleas between of ejectment was referred to arbn., & the reference, which was confined to that action, stated that, if the arbitrator should award that pltf. had any cause of action, he should have costs, as in a ct. of law. The arbitrator, by his award, directed deft. to deliver up the premises, & pay the costs of the action & a sum of money to pltf. for the loss of rent during the time deft. held possession. On a motion for an attachment against deft. for the sum awarded to pltf.:—Held: the award was in that respect good, although the arbitrator did not find in terms that pltf. had any cause of action.—*DOE v. 1380. ——An agreement of reference recited that a Ch. suit for a dissolution of partnership existed between the parties, & that, in order to put an end to it, they had agreed to refer all matters in dispute arising out of their accounts or otherwise; & power was given to the arbitrators to assess & apportion the costs of the suit as well as the other costs. The arbitrators found a sum of money to be due from one of the parties to the other, & apportioned the costs of the suit & the other costs:—Held: the award was final & had sufficiently adjudicated on the Ch. suit, & it was not necessary that the arbitrators should give any specific directions as to the suit itself.—Re MARSH (1847), 16 L. 1388. Award directing division of partnership assets.]—An award recited that by an agreement in writing between pltf. & deft., reciting that they had for some years carried on business as builders & excavators in co-partnership, & that they had, in pursuance of the co-partnership, become possessed of certain messuages, buildings, & premises, sum & sums of money, & other chattels & effects, & that disputes had arisen between them touching their accounts, reckonings, & dealings, & as to a division of the co-partnership messuages, etc., & other their estate & effects, & that they had agreed to refer the matter to the decision, etc., of B. & C., & that the arbitrators should have power to direct a division of the messuages, buildings, & premises, & other the partnership effects between them, each party thereby agreed to execute to the other a conveyance of the messuages, etc., according to such division between them, as the arbitrators should award. The award further recited that the partnership between deft. & pltf. had been dissolved by mutual consent. The arbitrators then awarded that deft. should pay to pltf. the sum of £223 4s. 6d. in full of all demands, in respect of his one equal moiety, half part, or share of the co-partnership property, estate, & effects, & that, upon payment thereof, & upon having such conveyances as thereafter mentioned tendered to him for execution, pltf. should, at deft.'s request, execute a proper conveyance unto & to the use of deft. of, in, & to certain messuages, etc., therein mentioned, subject to certain mtge. debts charged thereon. They also awarded that all the debts then due & owing to & from the co-partnership concern should be received & paid by deft. & pltf. in equal proportions, & that, if either party should advance or pay any sum or sums of money over & above his half share or proportion of the co-partnership debts, then the amount so overpaid should, on demand, be made good, & repaid to the party paying same, by the party making default. To an action upon the award, to recover the sum of £223 4s. 6d. from deft., he pleaded, after setting out the award as above, that the several messuages, etc., in the award mentioned, & directed to be conveyed to deft., were the whole of the co-partnership messuages, etc., & that there was not in the award any other provision than those thereinbefore specified concerning the co-partnership property, estate, & effects, or the division thereof, or any part thereof:—Held: the award was final, & sufficiently certain, & was not inconsistent. Qu.: whether, upon the supposition that there had been no arrangement between the partners, by which the premises were ultimately to become the property of one partner, subject to the mtges., the arbitrators did not exceed their authority in awarding the messuages, etc., to one of the parties, & not dividing them between both.—*WOOD v. 1392. Award contrary to private Act of Parliament.]—An Act of Parliament, authorising a co. to raise money, empowered the directors to make calls from time to time, provided one month at least should intervene between the calls. The directors brought an action against one of the subscribers for the amount of two calls made on his shares on the same day, & that subscriber brought a counter-action against the directors for the value of his shares as at a certain period. Both actions were referred to an arbitrator under an order of ct.; & he found (inter alia) the directors were entitled to decree for the amount of the two calls, with interest:—Held: the award was bad, as the finding for the amount of two calls made in one day was contrary to the Act of incorporation, which required the distance of a month at least between two calls.—*BAILLIE v. Thus, where, by the submission to arbn., the decision of the arbitrators was to be final, "except as to such items as the referees should reserve for the decision of any ct. of law or equity," & the arbitrators, reciting the submission, decided some points, but reserved others:—Held: the award was good, as the latter must have been considered to have been reserved for the decision of a ct. of law or equity, according to the terms of the submission.—CROKER v. PUGH (1832), 1 L. J. K. B. 72.

1421. Submission giving power to make one or more awards.]—By an order of reference, a cause was referred to an arbitrator, who was to settle all matters in difference between the parties at law & in equity, & to order & determine what he should think fit to be done by either party respecting the matters in dispute, so as he should make & publish his award by a day specified (with power to enlarge the time for making it), ready to be delivered to the parties, or, if either of them should be dead, to their respective personal representatives, & the arbitrator was to be at liberty to make one or more awards, at his discretion. At the time of this submission, two equity suits were pending, in which the parties to the action were interested, & in which certain infants were also concerned ; & there were also other matters in difference between them. The arbitrator made an award within the time limited by enlargement, whereby he ordered that a verdict should be entered for pltf., damages £500, & that defts. should pay that sum to pltf., as well as the further sum of £350, for grievances not included in his declaration. 1422. Where claim not accrued due.]—An action for certain commission on the purchase of land, & all matters in difference between the parties, were referred to arbn., the costs of the suit & of the reference & award, & all other costs, to abide the event, final judgment to be entered up for pltf. or deft., according to the award, for any damages or costs awarded to either of them, & execution to issue. The arbitrator awarded that pltf. had no cause of action against deft., & that pltf. should pay to deft. the sum of £36 13s. 4d., which he found to be due & owing from pltf. to deft. The arbitrator then declared that his award was not intended to exclude pltf. from the receipt of his commission on certain land purchased, to which he would be entitled under a certain agreement:—Held: the award was sufficiently final.—*HARDING v. 1423. Matters not in dispute at date of submission.]—All matters between the parties in a certain cause were, under a judge's order, referred to an arbitrator, the costs of the cause to abide the event of the award, & the costs of the reference & the award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator, by his award, found that, at the date of the order of reference, a balance was due from deft. to pltf. on the account between them, consisting of the several claims & demands in the particulars of demand & set-off respectively mentioned, except & excluding from such account a claim on the part of pltf. for a loss alleged to have been sustained by them on certain hats, & that "ptfs. were then entitled to recover from deft. for the balance, together with interest thereon, £184 2s. 1d., & no more" ; & as to the claim in respect of the loss on the hats, he found that no sufficient evidence had been laid before him by pltf. to show that, at the date of the order of reference, they had sustained any loss on the hats, & upon that ground, & for want of sufficient evidence of such loss, he found that pltf. were not entitled under this reference to recover anything in respect thereof:—Held: the award was sufficiently final with respect to the matters referred.—*COCKBURN v. A. after oyer pleaded no award. C. in reply set forth an award published & declared by the arbitrators, which was of & concerning the premises in the condition of the bond specified, & that they thereby awarded that A. should pay or cause to be paid to C. a sum of money & that C. should take the same in full of all demands, & that each of the parties should execute a general release, & then assigned a breach:—Held: this was a good award.—*CAYHILL v. 1441. Submission of all matters in difference—No express adjudication upon every matter.]—On a submission of all matters in difference to the award of an arbitrator, it is no objection to the award that it does not contain an express adjudication upon

The arbitrators published their award of & concerning the matters referred to them, directing payment of a sum of money (without saying on what account) to the party against whom the above claim had been made, with costs, & it was proved that they left that claim out of consideration in making their award, as a matter not in dispute:—Held: the award was bad, as the arbitrators ought to have taken notice of the admitted demand.—Re ROBSON & RAILSTON (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 723; 109 E. The cause & all matters in difference were referred, & the arbitrator, by his award, after reciting that he had heard the evidence produced "touching the matters in difference," stated that he made his award "of & concerning the premises," & then proceeded to find specially on each of the issues in the action:—Held: the award was sufficient, although it appeared that there was a matter in difference submitted to the arbitrator as to the non-supply of slates.—*DUNN v. 1438 i. Submission in general terms—Award in particular terms.]—By a submission the parties covenanted to abide by the award of S. "of & concerning the premises aforesaid, or anything in any manner relating thereto." The arbitrator found that certain funds in P.'s hands were collected by him for a particular purpose, & awarded that he should retain for himself five per cent. on the sums collected, & should out of the balance repay himself two-thirds of the purchase money paid by him:—Held: the award embraced all matters submitted.—Re CAMPBELL (1879), 44 U. C. R. 218.—CAN.

u. Award reciting submission.]—An award recited a submission of "all claims, etc., in dispute in this action & of all matters in difference between the parties," & stated that the umpire, "having heard, examined & considered the allegations, witnesses, & evidence of pltf. & defts. concerning the premises," made his award "of & concerning the premises," that defts. should pay pltf. the sum of £100 "in full of all demands in the cause":—Held: it sufficiently appeared on the face of the award that the umpire had disposed of all matters referred.—MANNION v. HARRISON (1876), 11 C. L. 102.—IR.

w. 1445. — Silence as to further demands negating right of party making same.]—If an action & all matters in difference between pltf. & deft. be referred to arbn., & the award made de præmissis be silent respecting any further claim beyond the action put forward by pltf., or any cross-demand urged by deft., the award is nevertheless final, as it will be intended that the arbitrator has by his silence negated the right of the party to maintain such claim or cross-demand.—HARRISON v. CRESWICK (1853), 13 C. B. 399; 21 L. J. C. P. 113; 16 Jur. 315; 138 E. R. 1254, Ex. Ch.

1446. — Including goods alleged to have been supplied & cross-claims.]—In an action of trespass & trover, all matters in dispute, including goods alleged to have been supplied, & cross-claims for money, were referred to an arbitrator. After reciting the submission, the award was stated to be “of & concerning all matters referred”; there was, however, no specific allusion to the alleged supply of goods nor to the cross-claims, although they had been discussed during the reference. On an application to set aside the award, on the ground that it was not final:—Held: as the omissions were matters of minor consequence, the silence of the arbitrator was no proof that these matters had not been considered, & the award was good.—JEWELL v. CHRISTIE (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 296; 36 L. J. C. P. 168; 15 L. T. 580.

1447. Expression “de præmissis” — Not necessary.]—By a submission to arbn., under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), of a question of disputed compensation, the arbitrator was to determine what sum should be paid for the purchase of certain lands & what “other, if any,” sum for severance damage. The arbitrator, by his award, after reciting the submission, & that he had considered the matters so referred to him, awarded a sum to be paid for the purchase of the land, without saying anything as to any severance damage:—Held: the award was final & good, & the arbitrator, by his silence, had negated any right to compensation in respect of severance damage.

The award must be read as having been made on all matters in difference, just as much as if the expression de præmissis had been inserted in it. It is now quite unnecessary to use that expression, for the ct. assumes that the award was made on all matters submitted to the arbitrator, unless it appears on the face of it that it was not so made (WILLES, J.).—Re BEAUFORT (DUKE) & SWANSEA HARBOUR TRUSTEES (1860), 8 C. 1449. Right reserved to some parties to prosecute claims.]—In a suit instituted to enforce a pecuniary demand against the real & personal estate of a testator, an order was made, by consent, referring all matters in difference between the parties in the cause to arbn. The arbitrators made an award ordering the exor. to pay a certain sum to complainants, in full satisfaction of all their demands on him & his testator, but directing that certain other debts., who, under testator’s will, took interests in his real estate, should be at liberty to prosecute their claims against testator’s estate in like manner as if no order of reference had been made:—Held: the award was not final, & must be set aside.—TURNER v. 1450. Award not including all parties.]—By an order of reference, all matters in difference in a cause between A. & B. were referred to an arbitrator. By a subsequent order, C. was made a party thereto, & it was directed that all matters in difference between A., B. & C. should be referred to the same arbitrator, & that the costs of the suits should abide the event of the award. The arbitrator made two awards, in the one of which he awarded that A. at the date thereof was indebted to B., without mentioning C., & in the other that A. was indebted to C., without mentioning B.:—Held: both these awards were bad, as he had not decided all the matters in difference between all the parties.—WINTER v. The arbitrator having awarded (inter alia) that deft.’s liability on the promissory note, as between him & pltf., should remain unaffected by his award:—Held: the award was bad, not being final.—WILKINSON v. 1450 i Award not including all parties.]—A submission referred a controversy between A. W., J. W., & M. The arbi-

v. McMAHON (1882), 32 C. P. 453.—CAN.

1454 i. Award finding certain matters not in dispute.]—An award, submitted between plffs. & defts., were referred to a barrister, who stated, in his award, that plffs. had claimed certain sums before him as matters in difference in the cause, but that he, by his award, declared & determined them not to be so, & he then awarded as to other matters, in respect of which he gave a verdict to plffs. Upon the above sums being claimed, on the reference, by plffs., who had specified them in their particulars of demand, defts. had objected that they were not matters in difference, nor within the arbitrator's authority, part of them being recoverable, if at all, in equity, & not at law, & part being claimable against one only of defts., whereupon plffs. had abandoned their demand as to them:—Held: the award was bad, for not deciding upon all the matters in difference referred.—SAMUEL v. COOPER (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 752; 1 Har. & W. 86; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 520; 111 E. R. 290.

1455. Refusal to determine some matters.]—Arbitrators having declined to arbitrate upon certain matters included in the reference:—Held: the award was bad & should be set aside.—BOWES v. FERNIE (1838), 4 My. & Cr. 150; 41 E. R. 59.

1456. Omission to decide on some matters—Misrecital—Defence to action on bond.]—To debt on bond, conditioned to perform an award, under a reference of all matters in difference between the parties, it is a good plea in bar that at the time of the submission certain negotiable bills of exchange, drawn by deft. & accepted by plff., were then outstanding, & that an indemnity of deft. against such bills was a matter in difference between the parties, which was notified to the arbitrators before the award made, & that they made no award concerning it, & that some of the bills had not been paid by plff., & deft. was still liable to the holders, though it appeared by the award set forth that the arbitrators stated therein that they had heard the allegations of the parties, & examined all the accounts, bills of exchange, etc., & all other evidence & proofs produced to them touching the matters in difference, & awarded of & concerning same that deft. should pay to plff. £1,500 in full of all claims & demands upon him, etc., & so proceeded to award concerning other specific matters, but without mentioning such outstanding bills, or any indemnity concerning same.—MITCHELL v. STAVELEY (1812), 16 East, 58; 104 E. R. 1011.

1457. Omission to deal with matter specifically referred.]—By the terms of a submission, a Ch. suit & all matters in difference between the parties were referred, & it was made an express matter of reference whether an agreement between the parties should be rescinded or not. The arbitrator gave no directions upon the subject of rescinding the agreement, but awarded specifically on every subject matter of the agreement:—Held: the award was not sufficient.—UPPERTON v. TRIBE

by arbitrators, to whom all matters in dispute had been referred, stated that "deft. has not produced any witness in support of his contention raised in certain issues, hence we have only to deal with the remaining issues," & dealt with those issues:—Held: there was a decision on the whole matter in issue between the parties.—GEORGE v. VASTIAN SOURY (1898), 1 L. R. 22 Mad. 202.—IND.

1455 i. Refusal to determine some matters.]—When a reference had been made setting out that differences had arisen relative to the sale & delivery of a cargo, & an award was made deciding that question, but stating that the arbitrators could not entertain certain statements, as these statements were entirely conflicting & opposed to each other:—Held: the main point as to the delivery of the cargo having been decided, the award was good.—SALTER v. FULL (1859), 2 Thom. 356.—CAN.

1457 ii. —.]—An action was brought for certain sums. Differences had also arisen concerning a bill of exchange. The action & all other matters in difference were referred. The arbitrators awarded £55 to plff. as a sum due upon a balance of accounts. There was nothing in the award expressly relating to the action nor anything that disposed of it by necessary inference:—Held: the award was bad.—RODDY v. LESTER (1856), 14 U. C. R. 259.—CAN.

1457 iii. —.]—Where the principal, but not the only, matter of difference between the parties was the terms of their copartnership agreement, an award not clearly deciding that was held bad for uncertainty.—JEKYLL v. WADE (1860), 8 Gr. 363.—CAN.

1457 iv. —.]—A testator devised lands to trustees in trust for P. & T., or such one of them as the trustees should at any time appoint. The bill prayed that the trusts of the will should be carried into execution, & the right of plff. ascertained. Arbitrators awarded mutual releases, but did not determine the rights of the parties:—Held: the arbitrators should have decided the rights of the parties, subject to the power of appointment, & the award was bad as they had not done so.—FAGAN v. F. (1818), 12 L. Eq. R. 483.—IR.

1457 v. —.]—Arbitrators were to award as to the division of partnership property, & all matters in dispute relative to dissolution. They merely awarded that deft. should pay plff. money:—Held: bad because it did not decide as to division of partnership property.—ATKINSON v. PORTS (1862), 5 All. 262.—CAN.

1457 vii. —.]—In a submission as to the balance due on a factor's accounts, the latter consigned in bank £15 as the balance admitted by him to be due, "to be subject to the orders of J. M., sole arbiter. The arbiter in his decree-arbitral found that the factor was due an additional sum of £7, for which he gave decree, reserving right to the factor to retain the sum against his claim for expenses, amounting to £58, for which decree was given in his favour. The decree-arbitral bore that the sum consigned would be paid by the arbiter, & to the party legally entitled to same." In a reduction of this decree, on the ground that it did not exhaust the reference, because it did not determine the application of the consigned money:—Held: the disposal of the consigned money was a question which arose more in the execution of the decree, & the declaration thereon did not destroy the decree.—PAUL v. HENDERSON (1867), 5 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 613.—SCOT.

1457 viii. —.]—Amongst other matters, the arbitrators were asked to make a division of certain fields. The arbitrators decided the other matters, but, as regards the fields, said that it was inconvenient to do so in consequence of the rains:—Held: the award left undetermined one of the principal subjects of dispute & must be set aside.—DANDEKAR v. DANDEKARS (1882), 1 L. R. 6 Bom. 663.—IND.

1457 ix. —.]—Two partners desired to dissolve partnership, but being unable to agree upon terms, submitted all matters in difference between them to arbn. The arbitrators awarded that one of the partners should pay the other a certain sum in full payment, discharge & satisfaction of all moneys, debts & demands due or owing by him to his co-partner upon any account whatsoever:—Held: the award was bad, for uncertainty, there being no decision respecting the partnership property.—Re FAIRLEY & WILSON (1886), 25 N. B. R. 568.—CAN.

1457 x. —.]—In pursuance of a provision contained in a deed of copartnership for the reference of disputes between the partners, four questions were referred to arbitrators. The award found on two questions, but it was silent as to the others:—Held: the award was bad, for want of finality.—DIVE v. PICKERING, 4 N. Z. Jur. 45.—N.Z.

x. Omission to award on part of submission.]—An award stated that certain yarn had been dyed with other material than indigo:—Held: the award was reducible, as it did not state what substances had been used, or whether indigo had been employed, & had, therefore, only decided part of what was submitted.—*HEGGIE & Co. v. 1458. Omission to decide on fifth action.—Four actions & all matters referred.]—Four several actions between distinct parties, & all matters in difference between the parties, were referred to an arbitrator. One of the matters in difference, & to which the attention of the arbitrator was called at the hearing, was an action of ejectment not included in the above, which, by reason of some defect in the proceedings, had not been taken down for trial. The arbitrator having omitted to notice this action in his award:—Held: the award was altogether bad.—STONE v. PHILLIPPS, DOE d. STONE v. STONE, STONE v. STONE (1837), 4 Bing. N. C. 37; 6 Dowl. 247; 3 Hodg. 302; 5 Scott, 275; 7 L. J. C. P. 54; 1 Jur. 985; 132 E. R. 702.

1459. Omission to deal with question of title.]—A. agreed to purchase land of B., the title to be made out to the satisfaction of B.'s attorney. The agreement being uncompleted, & disputes arising, all matters in difference between the parties, & the settlement of all questions on the agreement, were referred to arbn. The arbitrator awarded that B. should convey to A. the title to the above land, contained in two abstracts given in evidence on the arbn.; he also prescribed the boundary of the land so to be conveyed, & ordered that B. should execute an indemnity bond to A., to be forfeited if A. should be evicted by reason of defect in the title, & that, on execution of the premises, A. should pay the purchase-money. Nothing further was awarded as to the validity of the title. The goodness of the title had been a matter of dispute before the arbitrator:—Held: the award was bad, as not finally determining the questions referred.—ROSS v. BOARDS (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 290; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 382; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 376; 7 L. J. Q. B. 209; 2 Jur. 567; 112 E. R. 847.

1460. Award as to part of lands only.—Ejectment.]—An ejectment, containing two several demises by different persons, was referred before trial, & by the order of reference all matters in difference in the cause were referred, the costs of the suit & of the reference to abide the event of the award, & if the award should be in favour of pltf., he was to be at liberty to sign judgment in the same manner as if the cause had been tried at Nisi Prius, & to issue a writ of possession, & to proceed in the usual way for the costs on such judgment. The arbitrator awarded that pltf. was entitled to possession of a certain part of the lands sought to be recovered, which part he described by metes & bounds. The lessor of pltf. signed judgment, & proceeded to tax his costs:—Held: the award was bad, because the arbitrator did not award as to the residue of the lands.—DOE d. MADKINS v. HORNER (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 235; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 344; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 348; 2 Jur. 417; 112 E. R. 827; sub nom. DOE d. MADKINS & LONG v. LAW, 7 L. J. Q. B. 164.

1461. Omission to deal with claim on account stated.]—Where an action of assumpsit, the declaration in which contained a count upon a promissory note for £22 11s. 9d. & a count upon an account stated for £30, was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator found that pltf. had good cause of action for, & was legally entitled to have, claim, & recover of & from deft., the sum of £22 11s. 9d., being the amount of the promissory note mentioned in the pleadings in the cause:—Held: the award was bad, as it did not dispose of the issue upon the account stated.—GISBURNE (GISBORNE) v. HART (1839), 5 M. & W. 50; 7 Dowl. 402; 8 L. J. Ex. 197; 3 Jur. 536; 151 E. R. 23.

1462. Omission to deal with claim for nuisance.]—An action of trespass was referred to an arbitrator, who awarded that deft. should amend a water-course upon his own land, but omitted to decide upon a certain alleged nuisance:—Held: since the arbitrator had not decided upon all the matters referred to him, the whole award was bad, & the latter part could not be rejected as surplusage.—PEARCE v. GROSSE (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 170.

1463. Omission to decide on matter referred—Partnership.]—A reference to arbn. between A. & the exors. of his deceased partner recited that A. averred that partnership dealings had subsisted between deceased & himself previous to 1837, that an agreement of partnership, to commence from Jan., 1837, was entered into, & that differences had ensued respecting the settlement of accounts. All matters & accounts were subsequently referred. The arbitrator found that a partnership had existed from Dec., 1835, till the death of testatrix, & that a balance was due to the estate:—Held: the award was neither uncertain nor defective, in omitting to award specifically on the partnership mentioned under the agreement.—Re WARNER & FARNELL & NORRIS (1844), 2 Dow. & L. 148; 13 L. J. Q. B. 370; 8 Jur. 1097.

1464. Omission to decide whether partnership existed.]—One of the matters in difference between A. & B., at the time of a submission to arbn. by them, was whether the two parties had been in partnership together upon a day named, & whether, if there had been a partnership between them, same had been put an end to. The arbitrator found by his award that no deed of partnership ever existed between the parties, & that, if any partnership ever existed, same was dissolved on a day subsequent to that mentioned, & that nothing was due from A. to B. in respect of the profits or otherwise:—Held: the award was bad, because it did not decide the question as to a partnership having once existed.—BHEAR v. HARRADINE (1852), 7 Exch. 269; 21 L. J. Ex. 127; 18 L. T. O. S. 228, 261; 155 E. R. 947.

1465. Omission to award interest.—Claim admitted.]—A cause & all matters in difference between pltf. & deft. were referred to arbn. Pltf. admitted before the arbitrator that deft. was entitled to interest on a sum admitted to be due by one of pltf. to deft., but this was not adjudicated upon by the award, which deft. sought to set aside, on the ground that it was not made upon all matters in difference. The ct. refused to set aside the award, but referred the matters back to the arbitrator so far as related to the non-allowance of interest.—BENNETT & HARVEY v. BOWNESS (1858), 32 L. T. O. S. 108, 130.

1466. Omission to award on one point.—Settled & withdrawn.]—By an agreement of reference, the parties covenanted & agreed to abide by the award of the arbitrator upon all points in difference between them, & eleven points were specifically referred, but the parties at the reference effected a settlement as to one of the eleven points, & withdrew it from the arbitrator's consideration:—

Held: the award was not bad, for want of finality, because it did not find in favour of either party on that point, inasmuch as the conduct of the parties amounted to an admission that it was no longer a point in difference.—LAWRENCE v. BRISTOL & NORTH SOMERSET RY. CO. (1867), 16 L. T. 326.

A. Where an Action only is referred and Costs are to abide Event.

See, also, Sect. 20, post.

1467. General rule—Distinguished from case where costs of reference only are to abide event.]—Where, in an order of reference, the costs of the cause are to abide the event of the award, the arbitrator is bound to find specifically upon each issue. But where the costs of the reference & award only are to abide the event, he is not bound so to find, unless required by the terms of the rule of reference.—BOURKE v. LLOYD (1842), 10 M. & W. 550; 12 L. J. Ex. 4; 152 E. R. 589.

1468. — Each issue must be found—Even though no request.]—If an action, in which there are several issues, is referred to arbn., & the costs are to abide the event, the arbitrator must decide as to each issue, though not requested so to do, even in a case where there is but one special count in the declaration, & the award found that pltf. had no cause of action, so that several of the issues become immaterial. In such a case, however, the ct. will not set aside the award, but will discharge a rule for that purpose on deft. consenting that the costs of the immaterial issues should be taxed for pltf.—ENGLAND v. DAVISON (1841), 9 Dowl. 1052; 6 Jur. 261.

1469. — Power to enter verdict.]—In an action of debt, which was referred, deft. had pleaded, except as to 19s. 4d. paid into ct., distinct pleas of nunquam indebitatus, payment & set-off to the whole declaration. The costs of the cause were to abide the event of the award, & the arbitrator was empowered to direct a verdict to be entered for such sum as he should find to be due. The arbitrator having directed a verdict for £14 16s. 8d. debt, & 1s. damages, to be entered for pltf., without finding each of the issues:—Held: the award was bad.—BROOKS v. PARSONS (1843), 1 Dow. & L. 691; 13 L. J. Q. B. 50; 2 L. T. O. S. 126; 8 Jur. 81.

Stewart (1847), 4 Dowl. & L. 589; & there is the case of Phillips v. Higgins (1851), 2 L. M. & P. 355 (MARTIN, B.). Refd. Stonehewer v. Farrar (1845), 6 Q. B. 730.

1470. — Even where clear how each issue found.]—Where an action involving several issues is referred to arbn., & the costs of the action are to abide the event, & the arbitrator omits to find on each issue, the ct. will set aside the award, notwithstanding it clearly appears, from the amount awarded to pltf., that the arbitrator has virtually negatived all deft.'s pleas.—BROWN v. HUDSON (1844), 2 L. T. O. S. 334.

In express terms.]—Arbitrators must always find on each issue separately.

I sincerely hope that arbitrators will learn henceforth to enter a verdict in express terms upon each issue (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—MUIR v. PARROTT (1845), 4 L. T. O. S. 290.

1472. — Clearly on face of award.]—An award in an action where several issues are joined, & the costs are to abide the event of the award, ought to contain a distinct finding on each issue. For want of such finding the award will be bad for uncertainty, unless (semble per LORD DENMAN, C.J.) it be clear, on the face of the award, that the arbitrator has in effect found on every issue.—STONEHEWER v. FARRAR (1845), 6 Q. B. 730; 1 New Pract. Cas. 151; 14 L. J. Q. B. 122; 9 Jur. 203; 115 E. R. 275.

1473. — Unless each issue clear by necessary inference.]—Where several issues are referred to an arbitrator, the arbitrator need not in terms adjudicate on each issue; it is sufficient if he so express himself that it is plain how he means the decision to be; but if he does not, either specifically or by necessary implication, adjudicate on each issue, the award is bad.—HUNT v. HUNT (1836), 5 Dowl. 442; Will. Woll. & Dav. 62; 1 Jur. 135.

1474. — Where matters in difference in a cause involving several issues are referred to arbn., the costs of the cause to abide the event, the award is good, notwithstanding there is no specific finding on each issue, if it appear by necessary intendment that the arbitrator has disposed of all the issues.]—HUMPHREYS (HUMPHREY) v.
